Mr. Gould was for calling in Inspector Byrnes at once, but his partner thought they had better wait until they had laid a mine for the offender.

The partner, who had a shrewd understanding of human nature, proceeded in an unexpected manner. It happened that Mr. Gould's firm was very active in Missouri Pacific and controlled the stock's fluctuations. On the next day an advertisement was inserted, as the blackmailer had requested, informing him agreeably to his code to buy Missouri Pacific and to watch for further instructions. Missouri Pacific stock went up. A few days later another advertisement was inserted telling him to sell Missouri Pacific. And Missouri Pacific declined. Again he was told when to buy it and again when to sell it, and when this had been repeated a number of times the partner was ready to spring the trap. He inserted an advertisement which took the blackmailer off his guard. It read somewhat like this:

"Missouri Pacific.—The person who has been receiving information to his own profit about the movements of this stock has not kept faith with us. He has been imparting it to others. For that reason it is discontinued."

That was not true. There was not the slightest reason to believe that the blackmailer had imparted his information to others; there had been even no conclusive evidence of his acting on it for himself, as he would not be likely to speculate on so large a scale as to be recognized in the stock market. But even in a few hundred shares at a time a man could make a great deal of money in a short time if he knew beforehand infallibly when the price would rise and when it would fall. Mr. Gould's partner counted upon the man's natural impulse when accused of having, by his own lack of discretion, slain his goose. The impulse would be to deny that he had broken faith. The chances were that he would deny it by letter. The trick was to nail him as he mailed the letter.

Inspector Byrnes was now called into the case. The accusing advertisement was printed on Sunday morning, so that if the blackmailer posted a letter during the day it would be all the easier to catch him. Inspector Byrnes stationed a man at every mail box in the postal district from which the original letter of threat had been posted to Mrs. Gould. Every man who posted a letter anywhere in that district that Sunday was under suspicion. Before he was out of sight a detective, under pretense of posting one of his own, had opened the box with his pass key and had inspected the letter last deposited.

And just before dark a letter addressed to Jay Gould was posted by a well dressed young man, who ten minutes later was in the office of Inspector Byrnes protesting indignantly and declaring his family connections. He did not know on what evidence he had been taken. Mr. Gould's partner was summoned, and he opened the letter, which was exactly the one expected. The writer warmly and truthfully denied that he had imparted the Missouri Pacific information to any one and said that therefore he should expect to continue receiving it as before.

But the blackmailer was no more surprised when confronted by the letter than Mr. Gould's partner was when he saw the blackmailer, for it turned out that he was socially well connected. He was, in fact, the son of a man for whom one member of the Gould firm entertained feelings of friendship. He had done badly with everything and had at last resorted to blackmail. His threat to do violence to Mrs. Gould was empty, though there was no knowing beforehand that such was the case. Mr. Gould was not easily mollified. He thought an example should be made of one of the few threatening letter writers Wall street had ever caught redhanded. The pleading of the young man's family at length prevailed, and he was let off.—New York Post.

A Future Financier.

A very nice young man was calling on his sister. To make things easy, he gave him a beautiful new penny, saying, "Save each penny and soon you will have a dollar."

"I'll soon have a dollar!" replied the boy, with great eagerness.

The young man smiled good naturedly, dug into his pocket, saying:

"Well, just how much more do you need?"

"Only 99 cents."

He soon had a dollar.

Useless Rifles.

In the French arsenals there are 1,825,000 old service rifles and carbines which are of not the slightest use in case of a mobilization, as the cartridges required for them are no longer made. They are weapons of the 1874 to 1880 patterns and have a calibre of eleven millimeters. Most of them are reported to be in "fair" condition, but more than half a million are admittedly quite useless.

Myopia means near sight. When an eye is myopic or near sighted the image does not focus on the nerve, the eyeball therefore is too long. Now, as we cannot change the shape of the eyeball, we put in front of it a concave lens. This kind of a glass has the property of putting the focus back to the nerve.

Myopic persons hold reading close to the eyes, objects at a distance being dim. Vision is certainly the most important of the senses, therefore a word to the wise should suffice. Visit the Optical Institute and learn more about correcting imperfect sight by lenses ground to special prescription.

BOLIVAR STREET RESIDENT MAKES SNUG PROFIT ON WESTERN REAL ESTATE

Some people of Peterborough who have dabbled in real estate in the west, have added to their bank account, and some, of course, not being on the inside, have not. Among the list of the few who have increased their coffers is Mr. William Pilling, of 462 Bolivar street, one of the oldest, if not the oldest resident on that street, and who may be found during the day at the throttle of the G.T.R. Lakefield train.

Mr. Pilling did not say so, but the Review understands on the best of authority that property in Regina, which cost him $2,500, five years ago, was passed into other hands, and that Mr. Pilling received $15,000.

MR. JAS. SIMPSON COMING TO ADDRESS LABOR CONVENTION HERE

The regular meeting of the Trades and Labor Council was held last evening, a very fair attendance of the members being present.

Mr. David Moore, filled the duties of chairman very acceptably.

Mr. W. H. Pretty gave a very interesting talk on old age pensions, dealing with the question as he was familiar with its working in the Old Country. He expressed an opinion as to how its conditions could be brought about in this country in providing for the proper maintenance of people in old age.

A discussion on the question of Co-operation was still further postponed owing to pressure of business.

Representatives as follows were appointed to the convention of Labor Associations to be held here May 24:

David Moore, president.
H. Robertson.
A. Sharpe

An effort is being made to make this one of the most important Labor Conventions yet held and to stimulate increased interest. James Simpson, of Toronto, will deliver an address on the occasion.

MR. J. L. HUGHES WOULD CLOSE PICTURE SHOWS INSTEAD OF SALOONS

Toronto, April 25.—"If I had the power to close all the saloons or all the moving picture shows I would close the picture shows." The above quotation was made by James L. Hughes at the meeting of the Playgrounds Association in the city hall yesterday afternoon. He claimed that the picture shows were objectionable because they had a detrimental effect on the eye, and because children were taught the habits of spending money. Even with the present system of inspection he thought that many films had a bad influence upon children. The committee agreed with Mr. Hughes, and a motion was passed to ask the Government for a more rigid inspection of moving picture films, and also suggesting that women be appointed to the censorship board.

Mr. Hughes will be in Peterborough to-morrow night, and is to address the boys of the Y.M.C.A. at their annual banquet.

SEEN FROM THE PRESS STAND

Many Tricks in Sporting World Unknown to Public

"Publicity getters" may be coining new phrases for the men who are back of the scenes with the fighters, but it is unquestionably the most expressive way of referring to men who are more than press agents and really have much to do with the success or downfall of the chap who is in the ring. Quite frequently you run across a fighter who knows more about the game than the ordinary manager, but that is the exception rather than the rule.

In this day when the modern fighter is in pursuit of the nimble dollar, when his prowess in the ring is altogether a commercial transaction, the question of keeping in the public eye is one that he needs to consider first of all. A champion, of course, can do with less of the personally sought publicity than the man who is not so much in the limelightm but champion or no champion, space in the newspaper is as valuable to the pocketbook as it is pleasing to the taste.

Years ago, trained energy directed at getting into the papers was a thing not so seriously regarded. To-day, there is hardly a fighter in the land but will make a beeline to the newspaper offices the first thing he hits a city, or have his manager do the same thing for him.

The same sort of training comes to the boxing promoters as well as to the fight manager, for while the first manager is engaged in the task of keeping his protege or charge well known, the promoter, with an ear to the box office, wants his show dinned into the minds of the readers of the sporting pages, many of whom are doubtless patrons of the fistic game.

There are many tricks of the trade that the public never appreciates, and that only the newspaper man who comes in contact with those innumerable "publicity getters," is able to realize and appraise at their full value.

Changes in Baseball Schedule

Hamilton, April 25.—President Fitzgerald has requested Secretary Robinson to call a special meeting of the Canadian Baseball League for the purpose of considering changes in the schedule, necessitated through the cancellation of Sunday games by the Ottawas. It is not likely that any difficulty will arise from the unavoidable change of plans on the part of the Capital City club, though the Western clubs were counting largely on the Sunday games to meet the heavy expenses of the trip to Ottawa. The meeting will likely be held on Saturday next at Toronto.

MOUNT TEMPLE'S WIRELESS OPERATOR TELLS HIS STORY

GEO. TATE BLACKSTOCK, K.C.,

It is understood that the resignation of Mr. A B. Morine as chairman of the Public Service Commission will go into effect in a few days.

Mr. Morine's successor is being now considered by Acting Premier Foster and the Cabinet, and while no official intimation has been given as to who, George Tate Blackstock, K.C, of Toronto, is prominently mentioned in this connection.

J. Durrant Was In Communication With the Titanic, But Left the Field Free to Other Boats He Believed Nearer—As Soon as Message Was Received Captain Moore Put About and Made For the Scene.

St. John, N.B., April 26.—J. Durrant, Marconi wireless operator on the steamer Mount Temple, now lying at Sand Point, tells a story of wireless calls he picked up from the sinking Titanic.

Mr. Durrant said: "I was lying in bed reading with the telephone over my ears at 10.25, ship's time, or 12.11, New York time, when I caught the first call. Immediately getting out of bed, I answered, asking the position of the ship. This was sent back with the addition: 'Come at once. Have struck berg.'

"As soon as I got the message, I notified the captain, who at once doubled the watch of firemen below, called all hands on deck, and changed the ship's course towards the position of the Titanic.

"At 12.21 I heard the Carpathia answer the 'C. D. Q.' calls of the Titanic and heard the operator on that ship give his position, adding: 'Have struck iceberg; come to our assistance at once.' At 12.34 I heard the Frankfurt answer the appeals of the Titanic. That ship asked: 'What is the matter with you?' The answer was: 'We have struck an iceberg; please tell the captain to come.' To this the operator on the Frankfurt replied: "O.K., will tell the bridge right away.' The answer to this was: 'Yes, quick.'

"All this time the 'C. Q. D.' message was being sent out incessantly from the sinking liner, and at 1.06 I heard the Olympic answer the call. To this the Titanic said: 'Captain says get your boats ready. Going down fast by the head.' Five minutes later the Frankfurt struck in with: 'Our captain will go to you.'

"At 1.21 the Olympic sent another message which the Titanic answered, saying: 'We are putting the women off in the boats.' Another five minutes of anxious waiting passed, when the agonized 'C. Q. D.' again cut the air, accompanied by the words: 'Engine room flooded.' Out of the darkness the Olympic again asked: 'How is the sea round you?' to which the reply was: 'The sea is calm.' Another four minutes passed when the operator on the Frankfurt asked the Titanic: 'Are there any boats around you already?' To this there was no reply, and two minutes afterwards the Olympic sent a message to the Titanic which the latter barely acknowledged by the code letter R.D. That was the last message I heard and I presume the flooding of the engine room had put the wireless out of commission.

"Meantime everything that was possbile was done on the Mount Temple. All hands were on deck, the boats were swung clear of the davits and the gangways and ladders were got ready to lower at a moment's notice. It was not until 4.30 that we arrived at the position of the Titanic, having been much delayed by the thick field ice. At the time we saw no sign of the ill-fated ship, nor any wreckage.

"At 5.11 I had a call from the Californian and told that boat of the disaster and gave the position in which it occurred. Shortly after the Frankfurt also called me.

"About forty minutes later, we saw the Carpathia and Californian, with the Russian steamer Birma. There was also a tramp steamer cruising about, apparently going in the same direction as ourselves, but as she had no wireless installation and never approached very near, we could not find out what she was.

"As soon as I saw the Carpathia, I asked for news of the Titanic, and if she had seen anything, but got no reply. Other ships asked the same question, but she kept silent to all. It was not until 8.30 that the Carpathia gave out anything, and then the only information was that she had picked up twenty boats. There was not a word as to the number of survivors.

"At the time I received the first message I would judge the Mount Temple to be fifty miles from the Titanic's position, and when the big ship went down, there was still 20 or 25 miles between us."

ROSS RIFLE IS ACCEPTED

Ottawa, April 26.—An official statement was issued by the D.R.A. yesterday morning relative to the meeting with representatives of the National Rifle Association of Great Britain Wednesday night in regard to the Ross rifle and sight at Bisley. It reads:

"The Ross rifle and sight attachment as adopted by the Militia Department were submitted and accepted by the representatives of the N.R.A. as complying with the regulations. Col. Crosse, secretary of the N.R.A., asked that it be announced that the N.R.A. never questioned the eligibility of the Ross rifle since 1909."

The D.R.A. was invited by the British representatives to send an officer to Bisley to act as range officer. This is the first time such a courtesy has been extended to Canada, and will be complied with. It was announced that the Canadian team would sail on June 21. The names of Lieut.-Col. J. W. DeC. O'Grady as commandant and Lieut.-Col. Charles F. Winter as adjutant have been submitted to the Minister of Militia and H.R.H. the Governor-General for approval.

In Honor of Hays.

Toronto, April 26.—Cessation of all activities throughout the entire Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific systems for a five-minute period beginning at 11.30 a.m. yesterday morning, Montreal, Toronto and elsewhere made a fitting tribute to the late C. M. Hays, recognized as one of the greatest railroad builders.

Two hundred officials and clerks of the G. T. R. gathered in the freight office at the Union Sation at 11.30 yesterday morning when an impressive five-minute service was held. The Lord's Prayer was repeated and was followed by the singing of "Nearer My God to Thee," the hymn of the Titanic disaster.

J. H. Gordon, A. M. Adams and F. W. Davidson led the service.

In memory of Mr. Hays, the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway observed a five-minute cessation of operation during the same period as the G.T.R.

TAFT GOES AFTER TEDDY

Springfield, Mass., April 26.—President Taft made his answer here yesterday to the criticisms that Col. Theodore Roosevelt has made of him and his administration.

In a speech that bristled with indignation, in which he named Roosevelt over and over again, Taft told a crowd that filled Springfield's public square, how he believed Roosevelt had not given him a "square deal," and how he had "misstated" and "distorted" the facts concerning Taft's conduct and actions in the White House.

Monroe, La., April 26.—A company of the Louisiana National Guard left here yesterday morning for Delhi, 30 miles east, where serious trouble between whites and negroes developed Wednesday night.

One negro was lynched and further disorder is anticipated.

BODY OF HAYS FOUND

Special To The Review.

Halifax, April 26—A wireless message from the captain of the cableship "Minia" to the local White Star agents, say that Charles M. Hay's body was picked up and identified at 6 o'clock this morning.

Abe Cohen Remanded.

Toronto, April 26.—Charged with the murder of Rebecca Cooper on Agnes street, a few weeks ago, Abe Cohen appeared in the police court yesterday. Magistrate Denison remanded him for a week. Cohen was arrested on a charge of vagrancy, but was changed to one of murder following the verdict of the jury at the inquest, which incriminated Cohen.

Died of Injuries.

Toronto, April 26.—James Pearson of 60 Garden avenue, who fell from a scaffold on a Tyndall avenue building on April 20, died in St. Michael's Hospital yesterday, as a result of internal injuries received. The remains were removed to the morgue, where an inquest will be held. He was 55 years of age, and is survived by a widow.

BODIES OF ASTOR, STRAUS ALLISON AND GRAHAM AMONG THOSE RECOVERED

Special To The Review.

New York, April 26.—The bodies of John Jacob Astor, Isidore Straus, H. J. Allison, of Montreal, and George Graham, of Toronto, have been identified and enbalmed aboard the cable ship Mackay Bennett, according to a wireless despatch received at the White Star offices to-day. Forty-six other names of identified dead were received in the same message.

FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN SHOULD BE REGISTERED

Dr. Helen MacMurchy Reports That Defectives Are Increasing In Ontario With Alarming Rapidity and Recommends That Legislation Should Be Passed For Their Protection by the Government.

Toronto, April 26.—That the children of feeble-minded parents are themselves feeble-minded, and that these unfortunates are increasing with alarming rapidity, is stated in Dr. Helen MacMurchy's report to the Provincial Secretary's Department on "Feeble-minded in Ontario."

Dr. MacMurchy recommends that a register of feeble-minded persons, especially feeble-minded children, should be prepared forthwith; that legislation should be passed enabling the province to protect, care for and control the feeble-minded.

"Institution care," says Dr. MacMurchy, "is the only way to deal with the feeble-minded. Farm colonies with industrial and agricultural training and employment are most successful. The cost of these should be partly borne by the municipalities.

"It is necessary to refuse entrance to undesirable immigrants," says the report, "but it is, if possible, more necessary not to refuse to the feeble-minded that protection and care which alone can prevent them from wrecking their own lives and bringing into the world native-born Canadian citizens more feeble-minded and unfit in body and mind than they are themselves.

"Persons who are feeble-minded should be under the control of the state, the most should be made of their working powers to maintain them in comfort, and the balance, if any, in default of their relatives being unable to pay it, should be borne partly by the municipality where they and their families have resided and partly by the state.

"It is now universally agreed that the place to attack this problem is in childhood and school life. As soon as the child comes to school his mental capacity reveals itself."

BADLY HURT IN QUARREL

Brantford, April 26.—Harry Jones, an employe of the Massey-Harris Co., was rushed to the hospital at noon hour yesterday, having been struck on the head by a fellow-employe following a wrangle over a truck Jones left on the floor. Jones is alleged to have first threatened his assailant with a neckyoke. He was unconscious and his condition was regarded as critical, but it is stated to-day that he will recover.

Locks Open at Soo.

Sault Ste. Marie, April 26.—The steamer Agawa, of the Algoma Steamship Co., left at daylight for Duluth. Locks on both sides of the river are open for the season, and night shifts went on last night. Boats from Duluth are expected to-day, and several westbound vessels will be up to-day.

Easily Forgotten.

Washington, D.C., April 26.—Binoculars are part of the common equipment of every up-to-date ship, said Rear-Admiral Peary, of the U. S. navy, yesterday. It did not surprise him that the Titanic in its eagerness to get to sea omitted binoculars for the look-outs.

"Some common items, because of their very commonness, are overlooked," he said. "I heard of one well equipped Arctic expedition that went away without salt. All salt used on that trip had to be frozen from pork and beef."

"Wets" Plan Fight.

Owen Sound, April 26.—Barrister W. H. Wright, acting on instructions from J. D. Soddart, has served notice on the Town Council that action will be instituted at once to have the local option bylaw declared null and void. The action is based on irregularities alleged to have taken place at the polling last January when local option was sustained by a majority of 126. It was upon these same irregularities that five local option councillors were unseated a few weeks ago.

No Licenses for Cobalt.

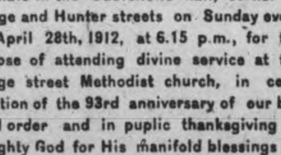
Cobalt, Ont., April 26.—The news that Cobalt will not be granted beer and wine licenses, and that the Provincial Secretary has vetoed the findings of the license commissioners, has been received with poor feeling by many. A number of temperance people think that the licenses would be much better than the present "blind pig" system.

May Be a Strike.

Nashville, Tenn., April 26.—Officials of the Nashville, Chattanooga, and St. Louis Railway, who have been in conference with a committee of telegraphers over the question of wages, announced yesterday that all negotiations had been abandoned.

Big Revenues From Deaths.

New York, April 26.—A London cable says: "It is officially announced that in the last three weeks the Exchequer has received from death duties alone $10,825,000."



ODDFELLOWS, ATTENTION!

In accordance with the proclamation of the Grand Master all Oddfellows of the city of Peterborough and district, are requested to assemble in the Oddfellows hall, corner of George and Hunter streets on Sunday evening, April 28th, 1912, at 6.15 p.m., for the purpose of attending divine service at the George street Methodist church, in commoration of the 93rd anniversary of our beloved order and in puplic thanksgiving to Almighty God for His manifold blessings to us as individuals and as an order. Sermon to be preached by the Rev. I. Couch.

LONDON'S BIG TITANIC FUND

London, April 26.—The Mansion House Titanic fund exceeds $690,000, and over $1,650, including all coins, even farthings, was deposited in the box outside the Mansion House on Wednesday. Offers to adopt orphans are continually pouring in. Hon. Clifford Sifton subscribed $500 to the fund.

Did Kaiser Say This?

Berlin, April 26.—According to a report current in court circles, Emperor William made the following comment on the Titanic disaster at a military luncheon of officers, at which he was present: "This is another monumental example of British incompetency."

Next Week's Arrivals.

Montreal, April 26.—Local immigration and steamship officials state that 20,000 immigrants will arrive in Canada next week. Seventeen ships are required to carry these newcomers.

SAW UNKNOWN SHIP SINK

Norwegian Vessel Was Trying to Go to Its Aid.

New York, April 26.—News that an unidentified ship met the same fate as the Titanic in the ice fields was brought by the steamship Romsdel, from Ajugeund, Norway, in port yesterday.

Officers and crew tell tales of experiences in the field of ice on March 26 while trying to aid an unidentified steamship, which was fast in the floe and signalling for help. Before they could get close enough to give aid the unidentified vessel disappeared, and it is believed she sank with her crew. The steamer was about four hundred miles north of where the Titanic went down.

This One Struck a Berg.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 26.—The British steamship Bulwich reports having been in collision with an iceberg within a few miles of the spot where the Titanic went down. Her bow was badly damaged.

Mrs. Leonora James Kennedy, Soprano; Mr. Arthur Blight, Baritone; Mr. Harry Holgate, Pianist; Miss Clarice Spencer, Elocutionist; are giving one of the finest entertainments of the season in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, under the auspices of the Literary Society, Friday evening, May 3. NEW LIGHT ON MURDER

Sarnia, April 26.—Stephen Kiyoshk, the young Indian murderer, who is in custody in the county jail here, waiting to be hanged on June 6, for the murder of two Indians, Adam Johns and Charles Nahdee, on New Year's night, at the Walpole Island Reserve, in his statement to his spiritual adviser, Rev. Mr. Rigsby, of the Sarnia Reserve, says:

"I was at the scene of the crime on the fatal night. Flossie Williams was there, also Nahdee and Johns, who were later killed."

Here a very startling point was presented, when Kiyoshk claimed there was also present two women, a wife and daughter of a nearby neighbor, and that the husband came over and started a quarrel over the presence of his women at the house, and then, being ejected, he committed the crime.

Interviewed by Mr. Rigsby, Flossie Williams showed her first willingness to speak of the fatal affair. She states that she left the house before the killing, and that there was no one there except the three men.

MEMORIAL HELD FOR W. T. STEAD

London, April 26.—A memorial service for William T. Stead was held last evening in Westminster Chapel. Among those present were: Lord Haldane, Secretary for War; David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer; Earl Grey, ex-Governor-General of Canada; Viscount Milner, ex-High Commissioner of South Africa, and John Burns, President of the Local Government Board.

Brockville Comes In.

Brockville, April 26.—The freeholders of Brockville yesterday empowered the Town Council to enter into a contract with the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission for the supply of power.

The bylaw was carried by a majority of 491, only 32 votes being recorded against the bylaw.

World Insurance Convention.

London, April 26.—The International Congress of Insurance Brokers and Agents will be held here from June 3 to 9, when it is expected that Canada, in common with the other dominions, will be represented.

France, Germany, the United States, Italy and Russia are sending representatives.

QUEEN'S WILL BE REORGANIZED

Twelve New Members Elected to Board of Trustees.

Kingston, April 26.—The provincial board of Queen's Theological College met yesterday with Principal Gordon in the chair. Committees were struck and there was considerable routine work necessitated by the separation from the college. A committee was appointed, with Rev. Dr. McGillivray as convener, with power to nominate a principal for the theological college. Dr. McGillivray was also appointed commissioner to the general assembly, to outline plans and to get the sanction of that body for the proposed measures.

At the meeting of the Queen's board of trustees, twelve new members of the board were elected as follows: Rev. Dr. Herridge, Ottawa; Lt.-Col. Logie, Hamilton; Rev. Dr. Clark, Montreal; D. B. MacLennan, K.C., Cornwall; Hon. Justice MacLennan, Toronto; Edward Brown, Winnipeg; Judge MacTavish, Ottawa; J. K. Macdonald, Toronto; Rev. Dr. McGillivray, Kingston; Dr. A. T. Drummond, Toronto.

CAPTAIN MOORE, OF MOUNT TEMPLE, WILL GIVE EVIDENCE

Members of the Crew of the Titanic Are Being Examined In Groups In Order That They May Get Away Home—Want to Find Out When Liner Was Warned of the Dangerous Field of Icebergs.

Washington, April 26.—To learn why a nearby steamer did not offer aid to the sinking Titanic and to fix the exact hour at which the lost liner was warned that she was in the vicinity of dangerous ice, Senator W. A. Smith, chairman of the Senate committee investigating the disaster, yesterday summoned three important witnesses. These are J. H. Moore, captain of the steamer Mount Temple, which passed within a short distance of the Titanic when she was in extremity, and the captain and wireless operator of the liner Californian, which sent the warning. All will be put on the stand to-day.

Summonses were issued for the operator and captain of the Californian, while announcement that Captain Moore would appear was contained in a telegram from Acting Premier Foster of Canada.

Captain Moore's story will probably be heard first, for his ship is due to sail from St. John, N.B., late Saturday.

A new method of examining the members of the crew of the Titanic has been adopted to insure greater despatch. The men are anxious to return to their homes in England.

Accordingly, each member of the committee yesterday undertook the examination of a group with the intention of releasing such as had nothing important to tell. The others will be placed on the stand. The names of those to be held were not made public.

Virtually the entire day was given over to questioning G. Marconi, inventor of the wireless telegraph and head of the company bearing his name. Both the Titanic and the Carpathia were equipped with the Marconi apparatus. Harold T. Cottam, the wireless operator on the Carpathia, also was re-examined.

Senator Smith asked Mr. Marconi: "I desire to ask whether an officer, director or employe of the International Mercantile Marine, after the collision asked you to enjoin silence on Titanic operator Bride, or Carpathia operator Cottam, as to the time or manner in which the accident occurred?"

"No request was made and no order was issued to stop any messages. No such instructions of any sort or manner ever were issued."

The witness was excused.

Senator Smith made the following announcement: "I desire to say that some rumors have reached the committee that there is friction and lack of harmony among the members of the sub-committee, and I have the concurrence of my assistants that the statement is absolutely untrue.

"Personally, I have never heard of the slightest friction. We are all proceeding on our own way to get at results. I wish to say further that we have determined to hear the members of the crew of the Titanic. It has been thought necessary because of the large number of these men to proceed with the hearing without the attendance of the public, each member of the committee examining his quota of these men. This is done to expedite the hearing."

The committee adjourned until today and the Senator took the sailors into conferences.

It was the purpose to talk to each man, each Senator taking as many as he could.

"We will endeavor to find out everything that each sailor knows about the wreck instead of putting each man on the stand to go over the whole ground," said Senator Newlands. "If we find any men who have knowledge of importance, they will be brought before the committee for detailed examination."

P. A. S. Franklin, the president of the White Star Line, and J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the International Mercantile Marine, were pleased over this move.

Miss Macdonald Dead.

Montreal, April 26.—Miss Annie Sandfield Macdonald died Wednesday at South Lancaster, Glengarry County. She was a niece of John Sandfield Macdonald, was known widely for her political writings, and took an active part in the campaign of last September.

She was a sister-in-law of Donald MacMaster, British M.P., and Sir Wilfrid Laurier was one of her closest friends.

HARRY K. THAW.

New York, April 26.—Preparations are being made in the offices of Assistant District Attorney Charles C. Nott, Jr., to contest the latest effort of Harry K. Thaw to escape from Mattewan. Mr. Nott is making a careful check and examination of the exhibits of the state used against Thaw in the previous trials. All the material was filed at Mattewan by former District Attorney Jerome, along with the records of Thaw's insanity and commitment. However, there will be many important exhibits missing, unless Clifford W. Hartridge, one of the former Thaw counsel, comes to the aid of the state.

TO NAME THE COMMISSIONERS

Ottawa, April 26.—The Prime Minister is expected home from Hot Springs next week and Hon. W. T. White will come with him. Cabinet meetings will then be held and appointments made, one of the most important being a successor to Hon. A. B. Morine, as head of the Public Service Commission. Another appointment is that of third member of the Civil Service Commission, now composed of Dr. Adam Shortt and Mr. M. G. Larochelle. It is understood that deadlocks frequently arise, making necessary a third commissioner.

When the commission investigating the law branch of the House of Commons finishes its work, there will likely be important reforms calculated to remove existing friction. The head of the branch is Major A. H. O'Brien and assistants are Dr. J. K. Foran; A. G. Troop and Mr. Loucks. Speaker Sproule regarded the tangle as necessitating the advice of experts, and so W. D. Hogg, K.C., and Dr. Adam Shortt are investigating.

Angus MacMurchy Injured.

Toronto, April 26.—With his skull probably fractured, and unconscious, Angus MacMurchy, once a prominent educationist here, lies in St. Michael's Hospital, as a result of being struck by a street car last night. The old gentleman was crossing Bloor street, near Jarvis, when a westbound Belt Line car, hit and threw him against the kerb. He was picked up and carried into his home nearby, where his daughter, Dr. Helen MacMurchy, gave first aid, and then had him removed to the hospital in the police ambulance. His recovery is improbable.

Argue on Fraud Charge.

Chicago, Ill., April 26.—Hartley Dewart, K.C., and Supt. Rogers, of the Ontario Provincial police, arrived here yesterday from Toronto, in connection with the extradition of Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, whose case comes up to-day. The argument will be upon the charge of fraud.

Brakeman Injured.

Toronto, April 26.—George Frankling of 23 Brad street, was caught between two C.P.R. freight cars while coupling them yesterday morning and was badly crushed. He was taken to the Western Hospital, and will recover.

FIFTY DECK HANDS OF OLYMPIC REFUSED TO WORK

Big Liner Ordered Back to Southampton — Men Are Arrested.

Special To The Review.

Portsmouth, April 26.—Refusing to work with non-union firemen who had been brought aboard to take the places of striking stokers, fifty men, comprising practically the entire deck crew of the Olympic, quit ship to-day and were arrested. Despairing of getting under way, the Olympic was ordered back to Southampton to discharge her passengers, who will be transferred to other vessels.

Hurt on Elevator.

Toronto, April 26.—Henry Holdup, an employe of the Nerlich Co., fancy goods factory, 146 East Front street, was painfully injured in an elevator yesterday. While carrying goods on to the hoist, he missed his footing and was squeezed against the door, sustaining injuries to his face and arms. He was removed to St. Michael's Hospital, and will recover.

TRAVEL IN PAIRS

One of the many suggestions made to provide for the safety of passengers on the ocean, is that ocean ships might travel in pairs. The Philadelphia bishop who made this suggestion pointed out that in case of collision to one, help from the other would be immediately available. The objection has been raised that steamers so travelling would be inclined to race and thus increase dangers. But surely, with the object of each other's safety in view, and keeping in touch with each other for that sole purpose, the officers would not be foolish enough to endanger their vessels and the lives of the passengers by racing. It might mean that one of a pair would be an hour or two later in reaching port, but that would not be a serious matter. The suggestion does seem to one worthy of the consideration of the steamship companies, and the authorities who are considering means for avoiding terrible tragedies on the seas. If another vessel had been within a mile or two of the Titanic—and surely each one could have enough sea room and yet be close enough to render aid in case of need—there would have little or no loss of life, when she struck the iceberg.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

A city that wishes to advance should take advantage of every means to increase its business and augment its trade. Everything that attracts attention to the city as a progressive community; everything that draws people to it, even for a day or two if they come in numbers, and everything that attracts trade, will add to the business that is done, and increase the amount of money circulated, which means that more employment will be given and that the city will be the wealthier. The converse of this is also true. If an attraction should be lost, if an enterprise that drew people to the city should be closed, if anything should occur to weaken the outside good impression of the city, the business of the community will suffer and everyone will be affected.

These observations may sound like truisms that scarcely need to have attention called to them, yet even truisms are sometimes lost sight of. The present purpose is to remind the people that the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is an institution that draws attention and trade to this city. Its primary object is to assist in building up the agricultural industry, and in doing that it helps the city, for a prosperous agricultural community is of inestimable advantage to the urban municipality which it surrounds. In addition, however, the exhibition advertises the city in an effective way, attracts people here and draws business. It is clearly in the city's interest that the exhibition should be maintained and be successful.

The Directors are handicapped because the Society does not possess suitable buildings. They wish to erect buildings, but the ground is leased, and if they spend money on buildings they run the risk of losing them when the five-years' lease expires unless the grounds are purchased or a new lease can be obtained. Their proposal is that the city purchase the grounds and that the society will erect the buildings and conduct the Exhibition. Otherwise they state that they cannot successfully carry on their work.

It would be very unfortunate if the Exhibition should not be carried on. It has had difficulties before, but now apparently has good prospects of being successfully conducted, if the matter of the grounds can be adjusted. A failure of the Exhibition would be a set-back to the city, and every citizen is desirous that nothing shall occur that will have a retarding effect, but rather that everything be done that can be to keep the rate of progress up to the mark.

There are some details of the proposition made to the Council that have not yet been worked out. For instance, information has not been given as to the amount that will be expended on buildings in this and succeeding years.

This information, along with the ways and means of carrying out the plans of the Society will no doubt be given out before the By-law is submitted to a vote, and it will have considerable effect in deciding upon the feasibility of the plan of having the city get behind the Society by purchasing the grounds.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The big ship has come to stay. That may be taken for granted; the efforts should be directed to secure safety on the big ships.

The Toronto News says we need more manual training and more technical education in our schools. At least there should be enough manual training in all schools to permit every boy to decide whether he desires and is suited for work in that direction.

The twelfth annual meeting of the Canadian Association for the prevention of tuberculosis will be held in the Margaret Eaton Hall, Toronto, on Monday and Tuesday, May 20 and 21. The gathering will be one of large interest in the efforts to combat the White Plague.

There are limits to the service of the wireless telegraph. The captain of the Carpathia is reported to have said that that steamer was from seventeen to nineteen miles from the Titanic when she struck the iceberg, but the engines were shut down because they had run into an ice field, and while the engines were stopped the wireless was not working. If a steamer met with an accident that injured and stopped the engines, a wireless call for help could not be sent.

A big convention in the interests of the Brotherhood Federation of Canada is to be held in Toronto May 10 to 13, and all Brotherhoods, Bible classes and other associations of Christian men in Canada, are asked to send delegates. One hundred and thirty men from the Brotherhood Federation of Great Britain, are coming specially to the convention which has as its object the federation of these Christian bodies, that better results may be had. A civic banquet is to be tendered the Britishers and out of town visitors.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, April 25.—Corn sold here to-day at 81c a bushel, May delivery, the highest price in Chicago for a number of years. It was also the first time this season that the option had gone above the 80c level. Short sellers were in alarm over the small amount of cereal not already under contract to be shipped away. The close, which was firm, showed an advance of 5-8c to 3-4c to 1 3-8c net. Other leading staples, too, scored a gain, wheat 1-8c to 1-4c to 3-8c to 1-2c; oats a shade to 1-2c, and provisions 7 1-2c to 25c.

Liverpool wheat closed ¼d to ⅜d higher than yesterday, and corn ⅜d to ½d higher. Paris wheat closed ¼c to 1¼c higher. Antwerp unchanged. Berlin ⅜c higher, and Buda Pesth 1¼c lower.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, April 25.—The railways reported 72 carloads of live stock at the City Yards, comprising 669 cattle, 3288 hogs, 106 sheep, 280 calves and 3 horses.

Butchers.

Prime quality steers and heifers, $7 to $7.25; choice, $6.80 to $7; good, $6.50 to $6.70; medium, $6 to $6.40; common, $5.25 to $5.60; prime quality cows, $6 to $6.50; good, $5 to $5.40; medium, $4.25 to $5; common, $3.50 to $4; bulls, $4.50 to $6.

Stockers and Feeders.

Stockers and feeders are not very plentiful, not enough to supply the demand. There were two or three loads changed hands at $5.25 to $6, as will be seen by sales given below.

Milkers and Springers.

Trade in good cows has been brisk, owing to the demand from Montreal, and Quebec. Prices ranged from $40 to $75 each, and two or three $80 and one $85, this week.

Veal Calves.

Receipts have been liberal and prices ranged from $3 each for bobs, to $4 and $7 per cwt. for medium to good, and occasionally $8 per cwt. for choice.

Sheep and Lambs.

Wesley Dunn quotes sheep, ewes, at $5.50 to $6.50; rams, $4.50 to $5.50; yearling lambs, $7 to $8.50; spring lambs, at $3 to $7 each.

Hogs.

Receipts were large at both markets, especially at the City, to-day. Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8.75 and $8.35 and $8.40, f.o.b., cars, at country points, and $9 for hogs, weighed off cars.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

"But that is your luncheon," protested Cynthia, finding it incumbent on her to say something by way of politeful refusal.

"And his aunt's, my dear."

In those words Mrs. Devar conveyed skepticism as to the aunt and ready acceptance of the proffered fare; but Medenham paid no heed; he had discovered the napkins, cutlery, even the plates, bore the family crest. The silver, too, was of a quality that could not fail to evoke comment.

"Well, here goes!" he growled under his breath. "If I come a purler it will not be for the first time where women are concerned."

He laughed as he produced some lobster in aspic and a chicken.

"It is jolly useful to have as a friend a butler in a big house," he said. "I didn't know what Tompkins had given me, but these confections look all right."

Mrs. Devar's glance dwelt on the the instant she took a plate. She smiled in her superior way. While Medenham was wrestling with the cork of a bottle of claret she whispered:

"This is screamingly funny, Cynthia. I have solved the riddle at last Our chauffeur is using his master's car and his master's eatables as well."

"Don't care a cent," said Cynthia, who found the lobster admirable.

"But if any inquiry is made and our names are mixed up in it, Mr. Vanrenen may be angry."

"Father would be tickled to death. I shall insist on paying for everything, and my responsibility ends there. No, thank you—" this to Medenham who was offering her a glass of wine. "I drink water only. Have you any?"

Mrs. Devar took the wine, and Medenham fished in the basket for the St. Galmier, since Lady St. Maur cultivated gout with her biliousness.

"Dear me!" she murmured after a sip.

"What is it now?" asked Cynthia.

"Perfect, my dear. Such a bouquet! I wonder what house it came from," and she pondered the crest again, in vain, for heraldry is an exact science, and the greater part of her education had been given by a hard world. She did not fail, therefore, to notice that three persons were catered for by the packer of the basket. An unknown upper housemaid was already suspected, and now she added mentally "some shop-girl friend." The climax was reached when Medenham staged the strawberries. Cynthia, to whom the good things of the table were commonplaces, ate them and was thankful, but Mrs. Devar made another note: "Ten shillings a basket, at the very least; and three baskets!"

A deep, booming yell from the mob proclaimed that the second race was in progress.

"I can't see a thing unless I am perched on the seat, and if I stand up I shall upset the crockery," announced Cynthia. "But I am not interested yet awhile. If Grimalkin wins I shall shout myself hoarse."

"He hasn't a ghost of a chance," said Medenham.

"Oh, but he has. Mr. Deane told my father——"

"But Tompkinson told me," he interrupted.

"Tompkinson. Is that your butler friend?"

"Yes. He says that the King's horse will win."

"Surely the owner of Grimalkin must know more about the race than a butler?"

"You would not think so, Miss Vanrenen, if you knew Tompkinson."

"Where is he butler?" asked Mrs. Devar suavely.

"I forget for the moment, madam," replied Medenham with equal suavity.

The lady waived the retort. She was sure of her ground now.

"In any case, I imagine that both Mr. Deane and this Tompkinson may be mistaken. I am told that a horse trained locally has a splendid chance—let me see—yes, here it is: the Honorable Charles Fenton's Vendetta."

It was well that those bulging steel-grey eyes were bent over the card, or they could not have failed to catch the flicker of amazement that swept across Medenham's sun-browned face when he heard the name of his cousin. He had not been in England a full week as yet, and he happened not to have read a list of probable starters for the Derby. He had glanced at the programme during breakfast that morning, but some remark made by the Earl caused him to lay down the newspaper, and, when next he picked it up, he became interested in an article on the Cape to Cairo railway, written by someone who had not the remotest notion of the difficulties to be surmounted before that very desirable line can be constructed.

Cynthia, however, was watching him, and she laughed gleefully.

"Ah, Fitzroy, you hadn't heard of Vendetta before," she cried. "Confess now—your faith in Tompkinson is shaken."

"Vendetta certainly does sound like war to the knife," said he.

"It is twenty to one," purred Mrs. Devar complacently. "I shall risk the five pounds I won on the first race, and it will be very nice if I receive a hundred."

"I stick to Old Glory," announced the valiant Cynthia.

"The King for me," declared Medenham, though he realized, without any knowledge of the merits of the horses engaged, that the Honorable Charles was not the sort of a man to run a three-year-old in the Derby merely for the sake of seeing his racing colors flashing in the sun.

Mrs. Devar kept to her word, and handed over the five pounds. Cynthia staked seven, the five she had won and the ten dollars of her original intention: whereupon Medenham said that he must cross the course and make these bets in the ring—would the ladies raise any objection to his absence, as he could not return until after the race? No, they were quite content to remain in the car, so he repacked the luncheon basket and left them.

Vendetta won by three lengths.

Medenham had secured twenty-five to one, and the bookmaker who paid him added the genial advice: "Put that little dot where the flies can't get at it." The man could afford to be affable, seeing that the bet was the only one in his book against the horse's name. The King's horse and Grimalkin were the public favorites, but both were hopelessly shut in at Tattenham Corner, and neither showed in the front rank at any stage of a fast run race. When Medenham climbed the hill again, hot and uncomfortable in his leather clothing, Mrs. Devar actually welcomed him with an expansive smile.

"What odds did you get me?" she cried, as soon as he was within ear-shot.

"A hundred and twenty-five pounds to five, madam," he said.

"Oh, what luck! You must keep the odd five pounds, Fitzroy."

"No, thank you. I hedged on Vendetta, so I am still winning."

"But really, I insist."

He handed her a bundle of notes.

"You will find a hundred and thirty pounds there," he said, and she understood that his refusal to accept her money was final. She was intensely surprised that he had given her so much more than she expected, and the first unworthy thought was succeeded by a second—how dared this impudent chauffeur decline her bounty?

Cynthia pouted at him.

"Your Tompkinson is a fraud," she said.

"Your Grimalkin was well named," said he.

"That remark is very cutting, I suppose, Fitzroy."

"Oh, no. I merely meant to convey that a cat is not a racehorse."

"Poor fellow," mused Cynthia, "he is vexed because he lost. I must make it up to him somehow, but he is such an extraordinary person, I hardly dare suggest such a thing."

She began to adjust her veil and dust her coat.

"If you are ready, Mrs. Devar," she said, "I think we ought to hit the pike for Brighton."

Mrs. Devar laughed. Fitzroy evidently understood, as he had taken his seat and the engine was humming.

"Americanisms are fascinating," she vowed. "I wish you would use more of them, Cynthia. I love them."

Cynthia was slightly ruffled, though if pressed for a reason she could hardly have given one.

"Slang is useful occasionally, but I am trying to cure myself of the habit," she said tartly.

"A picturesque phrase is always pardonable. Oh, is this quite safe?——"

The Mercury, finding an opening, had shot down the hill with a smooth celerity that alarmed the older woman. Cynthia leaned back composedly.

"Fitzroy means to reach the road before the police stop the traffic for the next race," she said. Then, after a pause, she added: "I wish we could keep this car for the rest of our tour, yet I suppose I ought not to interfere in the arrangement father made with Simmonds."

Mrs. Devar frowned. Her momentary tremor had fled, and she had every cause to regard with uneasiness the threatened substitution during the forthcoming ten days, of this quite impossible Fitzroy for that very chauffeur-like person, Simmonds. Her acquaintance with Peter Vanrenen and his daughter was sufficiently intimate to warn her that Cynthia's least desire was granted by her indulgent parent; in fact, Cynthia would have been hopelessly spoilt were it not for a combination of those happy chances which seem to compare at times in the creation of the American girl at her best. She was devoted to her father, her nature was bright and cheerful, and she had a heart that bubbled over with gladliness. Mrs. Devar chose the right line of attack. She resolved to appeal to the girl's sympathies.

"I am afraid it would be a rather cruel thing to deprive Simmonds of his engagement," she said softly. "He has bought a car, I understand, on the strength of the contract with Mr. Vanrenen——"

"That doesn't cut any ice—I mean there would be no ill effect for Simmonds," explained Cynthia hurriedly. "Father will meet us in London at the end of the run, and Simmonds could come to us then."

The steel gray eyes narrowed. Their owner was compelled to decide quickly. As opposition was useless, she laughed, with the careless ease of one who was in no way concerned.

Not Much as Boys.

When parents get discouraged over the lack of study and the frequent eccentricities that their boys manifest, or even over their physical misfortunes or poverty, they ought to find hope and consolation in the thought that Isaac Watts was constantly scolded for his absolute indifference to books and boys' sports. Charles Darwin showed such an eccentric tendency to absent-mindedness that on one of his lonely tramps he walked off an embankment and nearly lost his life. Ralph Waldo Emerson was a hopeless dreamer. Moses and Demosthenes were fearful stammerers. Abraham Lincoln, Elihu Burritt, Charles Dickens and Andrew Carnegie were the poorest of poor children. Anthony Trollope, the writer, was hopelessly shy and the butt of his school. Audubon, of bird fame, was put down by all his elders as a fool. Caesar and Napoleon were epileptics. Oliver Goldsmith was a hopeless sloven, and Thoreau was adjudged by every one to be a crank. The queer boy does not always grow to be the man of no worth.—Ladies' Home Journal.

IS YOUR SKIN ROUGH AND "PATCHY"

Zam-Buk Will Make it "Peachy"

Every girl likes a good complexion. Use of Zam-Buk ensures one! If you have pimples or rough and sallow patches on your face or any part of your skin just try it.

Think what your skin has had to go through during the winter just past. You have been out in the rain and sleet and snow. You have been at one moment perspiring from skating, or some other exertion. Then you have stood to "cool off." You have spent hours in doors at a temperature equal to summer heat. Then you have covered up your skin except your face and gone out into a temperature away below zero! No wonder that with all these changes the skin of the face and neck shows signs of needing attention.

Zam-Buk is a skin food. Don't forget that the skin has to do work just as any other organ of your body has, and if you overwork it, it gives out Zam-Buk is the remedy. Smear it lightly over the spots, the eruptions, the sallow patches at night, and note how quickly your appearance improves. As the rich, refined, herbal essences sink deep into the tissue, the hard scurvy like patches are removed. The curticle is softened. The cells beneath are stimulated to healthy operation. The pores resume their work properly. Better color results. The cells of the skin are purified by Zam-Buk, become transparent, the blood beneath is able to impart its proper coloring to the tissue, and the delicate "peach bloom" of health replaces the sallowness and pallor of disease. A few days' use of Zam-Buk will be found to give this result. Use also Zam-Buk soap.

Zam-Buk and Zam-Buk Soap are obtainable from all druggists and stores or by mail from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto.

PREHISTORIC MAN.

Three Races That Have Left Traces of Their Customs Behind Them.

Science has proofs of the existence of several prehistoric races, but only three of these have left traces of their customs behind them. These are Homo Europeus, Homo Eurafricus and Homo Eurasicus. The first race is extinct. Its representative man resembled the remains of Neanderthal. His forehead was low and retreating and his eyebrows beetled.

Probably the second race journeyed to Europe from the north of Africa. Their traces have been found on the Thames, in Moravia, and in caves of different regions.

Sergy, a close student of human origins, traces the second race to the paleolithic culture of the quaternary epoch in the south of France. In that culture analogies with Mycenaean and prehistoric Egyptian civilization are found. Some families of the race may have been inspired by their adventurous and artistic instincts to wander onward out of their own land to a land specially suited to the development of their dreams of something that they had never been able to produce in their own country. The geographical conditions, the climate and the natural beauty of the land they settled in may have allured them and encouraged them to develop their rude arts.

The third race, Homo Eurasicus, came into Europe from western Asia, and its members were the ancestors of the modern European peoples.—Harper's.

SECRET INK.

Writing Which May Be Made Invisible or Visible at Will.

There are several ways in which two persons can correspond with each other unknown to even the people before whose eyes the very letter is held. Ovid taught young women when writing to their lovers they should use new milk as ink. This when dried is invisible, but by scattering coal dust or soot upon the paper the writing becomes legible. Ansonius adopted this method when writing to Paulinus.

Diluted sulphuric acid, lemon juice, solutions of nitrate and chloride of cobalt or of chloride of copper write colorless, but on being heated the characters written with the first two become black or brown and the latter green. When the paper becomes cool the writing disappears and leaves the paper blank again. Saltpeter dissolved in water and equal parts of sulphate of copper and sal ammoniac dissolved in water are two good invisible inks.

There are also some inks which are invisible when dry, but visible when moistened with another liquid. Thus a solution of muriate of antimony washed with tincture of galls becomes yellow, green vitriol ink washed with the same solution turns black, nitrate of cobalt washed with oxalic acid turns blue, arsenate of potash with nitrate of copper green, solution of gold with muriate of tin purple.

The Ferocious Microbe.

Life is growing too complicated for the average unlearned human being, says the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette. It has been discovered by medical men that birds are dangerous carriers of disease—that "even the fluttering of a canary in its cage may throw out infection" and that as for the companionable, impudent parrot, he often suffers from something called psittacose, which may be transmitted to the unsuspecting owner. The unfriendly germ, the vindictive animalcule, the blustering bacillus, browse on our carpets, hide in our books, hold swimming races in the water we drink. They seat themselves by our side in the trains, invade the very clothes we wear and penetrate to the innermost portions of our anatomy by means of the atmosphere which we shall very soon be cautioned not to breathe.

A Tart Critic.

The Abbe d'Aubignac, who wrote admirably on dramatic composition and had instanced many living examples of failure in that direction, was so imprudent after thirty years' silence as to write a tragedy himself. In the preface he boasted that he, of all dramatists, had most scrupulously observed the rules of Aristotle, whose inspiration he had followed! To this it was replied by one who had suffered from his criticism, "I do not quarrel with the Abbe d'Aubignac for having followed the precepts of Aristotle, but I cannot pardon the precepts of Aristotle that caused the abbe to write such a tragedy."

Practical Point of View.

The man watched his wife as she entered the voting booth.

"Do you like to see a woman mingling with a lot of men at a polling place?" inquired a bystander.

"It depends a great deal on the way she votes," said the husband, who was a practical man.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Nervous Patient.

"You should take an ice cold plunge every morning," said the physician.

"But, doctor, I have insomnia."

"The ice cold plunge will help to cure it."

"No, it won't. I'll lie awake all night dreading it."—Washington Star.

Gave a Respite.

The Doctor—How is the patient this morning? The Patient's Wife—I think he's better, but he seems to be worrying about something. The Physician—Hum! Yes. Just tell him I won't send it for a month. That ought to freshen him up some.—Chicago News.

A woman has so much imagination she can imagine it's a common sense.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

THEATRICAL

"MUTT AND JEFF"

"Mutt and Jeff," one of the funniest musical comedies that have been presented in Peterborough for a long time was put on the stage before a crowded house last night. The company was a strong one, and Richard Freeman and George Edwards in the title roles suited Bud Fisher's original characters to perfection.

The choruses were certainly fine, and the eighteen swinging song hits that were introduced were all new and catchy.

The play was a series of hearty laughs, and Mutt and Jeff were responsible for most of the amusement afforded to the audience. The story of the play was cleverly worked out, and involved numberless ludicrous situations. Little "Jeff," who was hardly more than three feet high, was perhaps the most heartily received, particularly in his whistling and musical specialty. It would be hard to imagine the role of Mutt taken with better effect than it was last nigh by Richard Freeman. It is certain that no two funnier characters than those two who appeared at the Grand last night have ever appeared on the stage in Peterborough.

Mutt and Jeff were supported by a good company. Miss Lillian Goldsmith as Jessie May, was recalled time after time in her dancing acts, and Miss Viola Hopkins as Senora Roena made a decided hit. William Naughton as Jack Weyler, and Joseph Herbert, jr., as Curley McBride, were well received.

Wedding Announcement

Referring to the well known Park street grocer of this city, the Youngstown, O., Vindicator, of April 8, says; Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Obernauff Delason Ave., announce the engagement of their daughter, Emma, to Thomas William Dawson, Peterboro, Canada. The wedding will be an event of the early summer." Mr. Obernauf is one of Youngstown's best known citizens, and a very wealthy man.

Knox Church

Rev. T. D. McCullough, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Port Hope, will have charge of the preparatory service at Knox church to-night.

Communion service will be held on Sunday at the morning meeting. New members will be received at the service to-night.

Scene on the Pullman Car in "Excuse Me," the screamingly funny comedy which comes to "The Grand" next Tuesday, April 30. The management promise in this one of the best attractions that has ever been at the local theatre. The seat sale opens to-morrow (Saturday) morning.

DAM AT YOUNG'S POINT IS STILL DOING BUSINESS

Mr. F. M. Young, of Young's Point when asked by a Review reporter if there was any danger of the dam at Young's Point being washed away by the high water, said that there was no danger and the report to that effect which has been circulated was absolutely false. He said that the water was the highest it has been for twelve years and it was flowing over the top of the locks but he expects to lock a tug through Monday to bring down logs that are in the upper lakes. The lakes are nearly free from ice and there is very little chance of the water doing much damage although if a continuous thaw had come the water would have caused great damage.

LIGHT TROUBLE AT HAVELOCK

An interesting time is expected at the next meeting of the town council, on Monday night of next week, 29th inst., when the matter of the new contract for street lights comes up for consideration and disposal, says the Havelock Standard. Some o , if not all our city fathers, are of the opinion that the Electric Light Company are asking most unreasonable terms under the proposed new contract, and have expressed themselves in favor of cutting off the lights altogether. (We hope that no such drastic step will be taken by the council, which we think would be entirely unjustifiable, and hope that that the Company and the town will "get to-gether" and agree on a reasonable price.

CRUSHED BY WHEELS OF BUS

Lunch Hour Crowds Witnessed Destruction of a Derby

Not every man would have smiled and taken the loss of a good serviceable derby, so cheerfully and with as much grace as did a young fellow at noon to-day, when his hat blew off and was wafted under the wheels of a passing hotel omnibus. It was at the corner of George and Charlotte, when the crowds were scurrying to lunch. A particularly gusty breeze lifted the young man's "latest" model from his well-groomed head, and carried it gracefully out, till it stopped for a moment, directly in the path of an approaching hotel transfer. The crowds who passed watched it with fascinating gaze, and none with more intentness than the owner. At first the latter made a dive forward, but evidently considered his hat doomed? Would the driver halt his team in time to save it from destruction? Everybody paused momentarily. But alas! the worst happened. The big front wheel tore down upon it, not stopping until the headpiece was crushed squarely in two. All eyes looked at the owner as he picked up the shapeless lid, expecting to see him the personification of anger. But not in the least. He had recognized that the inevitable would happen, and laughing cheerfully in front of the halting crowd he donned the dusty and ripped covering and proceeded briskly away.

"EXCUSE ME"

Merry entertainment will be provided at the Grand next Tuesday, April 30th, in Henry W. Savage's presentation of Rupert Hughes' clever and highly successful farce "Excuse Me," a play that spreads laughter all along a railraod from Chicago to Reno. Inasmuch as this stretch of railroad is two thousand miles it follows that there is a long laughter in "Excuse Me." The laughter is as long as the play, which is two hours and three-quarters, with no pauses even between the acts, for while the cutain is down the audience keeps on laughing at the delicious humor and wit, the amusing persons, the comic happenings and everything else that has been in the play up to that time. Laughter is literally crowded into every moment of "Excuse Me," and by attractive means, too, for instead of being created by farfetched and impossible persons and events often the fabric of farce, this play relates a genuinely interesting narrative that while comic is wholly probable, and through the medium of droll persons who are actual every-day types. In short, "Excuse Me" is a real play brim full of comedy, It has lively action and modern romance in plenty. It is a decided novelty in so far as its entire action is represented on a railroad train. The farce relates the adventures of passengers on a trip from Chicago to Reno. Nine months at the Gaiety Theatre is the New York record of this play and proclaims its quality and popularity. Also it ran six months in Chicago and four months in Boston. It is a genuine Henry W. Savage Broadway success, with a Broadway cast and production. Those facts are convincing. Everybody in this city should see "Excuse Me" both for the sake of the unequalled enjoyment it affords and to encourage attractions of this calibre to come here. Pleasure and duty combine in the case of "Excuse Me."

NEW RULES FOR SURROGATE COURT

The Board of County Judges of Ontario, spent most of yesterday in conference with James W. Mallon, K.C., Inspector of Legal Offices, over a revision of the rules of the Surrogate Court. These rules are quite antiquated and situations arise now that there are no rules to cover. Judge McDonald, of Brockville, is chairman of the Board, and with him are Judges Huycke of Peterboro; Hardy of Brantford; Harding of Lindsay, and Chadwick of Guelph.

It is not unlikely that the Board will revise the tariff of fees in the County Court, so that County Court clerks will be better paid.—Toronto Telegram.

DIAMOND DUST FROM THE CIRCUIT

London, April 25.—The latest player to be signed by London is Edward Rudolph, an outfielder, who played last year in the New York State League. It is said that several Canadian League clubs were after him. Rudolph is a brother of Dick Rudolph, the Toronto International League pitcher. John Conway, of New York, an infielder with good recommendations, will also report with the other players next week.

Manager Lee, of the Hamilton club, is pretty well pleased with the manner in which the players are reporting. He desires to have a good outfit on the job for the exhibition game on Saturday with the Royal Canadians of Toronto, as he does not propose to lose any of the exhibition fixtures, being keen to duplicate last year's record, when the club won all the practice games. The Toronto outfit is a pretty good aggregation, and for this reason there will be no room for any chances being taken.

The Midland Baseball League has been re-organized, with Trenton, Bowmanville, Oshawa and Cobourg entering teams. Each club must post $100 as a guarantee to finish the season. Two non-resident players is allowed each team. The season opens May 24th.

T. Binzie, of Hamilton, wired Manager Templin this morning that he had seen in the papers he was slated for third base with the Peterborough Club, but had not been notified to report. Templin sent him a letter this morning to report as he had written him to that effect. The letter must have gone astray.

London, April 26— Abbie Johnson, who managed the Guelph Canadian League team for a short interval last season, and later officiated as one of the much-abused Canadian League umpires, has written the local management asking for a couple of practice dates before the season opens. Abbie has a team in Strathroy which he claims is composed of ex-Canadian Leaguers, although he does not mention of any of his players to prove his statement. He figures that they would put up a good stiff argument against any of the Canadian League teams, and has arranged a series of three games with the Ottawa Canadian Leaguers, who will train at Chatham. Abbie wants to play one or two games in London, before the season opens, and have the London team play in Strathroy about May 8 9 and 10. This suits the local management, as these were the dates the Cuban Stars were to play in London. As Johnson has a lively bunch, or at least he claims he has, the opportunity of getting in a couple of practice games before the season opens, will be grabbed up by the local directors. Abbie generally has a strong team in Strathroy, and as the London team will need a few workouts of this kind, it is likely that a series of pre-season games will be arranged between the two clubs on the dates mentioned by Johnson. The teams will likely play in London on Saturday, May 11, if arrangements can be made.

HASTINGS HAS LACROSSE TEAM

Hastings, April 26.—At a meeting held in the Clarendon House a lacrosse club was organized for the coming season with the following officers:

Hon. Pres—Fred Hubbs.
Pres.—S T. Spellman.
Vice-Pres.—Chas Fowlds
Secretary—E. Tate.
Treas.—E. Wilson.
Manager—Dr. Wade.
Captain—Fred Dodd.
Committee—H. Dodd, J. Armstrong and W. Rice.

FOOTBALL

A meeting of the Peterborough Church Football League will be held this evening at the Y.M.C.A. at eight o'clock prompt. All delegates are asked to be present. Any clubs wishing to join the league will be welcomed, and all information cheerfully given by the secretary and others. The Church League extends a cordial invitation to clubs to join before this season's schedule is made up.

PERCIVAL G. S. WEBB.
Secretary-Treasurer,
252 Charlotte street.

The meeting called for Friday evening of last week to organize for the coming season, did not materialize owing to the few who attended. However, it is likely that organization will be accomplished soon and that practice will be commenced just as soon as the Park is in condition for playing—Havelock Standard.

SPORT TALK

Frank Heffernan, the star half-back of the Ottawa University football team, will be missing when Father Stanton's brilliant aggregation takes the gridiron in the Intercollegiate Union next fall. Heffernan, who was the most sensational line punter in the Intercollegiate last autumn and who was an almost unanimous choice for the all-star student team, left the local university last week and announced that he would knot complete his term. Heffernan is understood to have gone to his home in Peterboro, but may later go to Cleveland. He played hockey with an O.H.A. team down there this winter and his work created such a favorable impression that he was afterwards offered an excellent position in Cleveland. Heffernan may decide to accept it. He would also be a velcome acquisition to the Toronto Varsity or Argonaut teams.

Heffernan will be greatly missed from the college football squad and his absence from the garnet and grey baseball and hockey teams will also be felt. He was one of the leading batsmen in the City League last summer and would have been a big factor in the championship race this season. Students at the university are still hoping for Heffernan's return.—Ottawa Citizen.

San Francisco, April 23— Promoter Jim Coffroth arrived home from Los Angeles the other day with the news that Jim Jefferies was to re-enter the ring and was ready to meet anyone the promoter should pick on as a worthy opponent for the ex-champion.

It looks very much however, as if Coffroth had a bad dream while he was in Los Angeles, as Jim Jeffries, when shown the dispatch, had a totally different story to tell.

"My hat is not in the ring. If it is I've got it nailed to the floor, with a brick under it."

"I have money in the bank, the hens are all laying, and my digestion is great. Why should I mix up in the boxing game again. I'm through with it all, I tell you." Jeff continued. "Coffroth must be dreaming to float a story like this. I said nothing to him that he could construe as willingness on my part to fight again. I have no intention of ever putting on another set of gloves."

ALGONQUIN NATIONAL PARK

The Grand Trunk Railway, in view of the very large increased number of winter tourists this season at Highland Inn in the National Algonquin Park, are making extensive improvements to their Inn. These improvements will be completed about the 1st of May, and consist of a 165 ft. extension to the west wing, which will include some 50 rooms for guests; a music room, 30 x 30; tea room, 30 x 30; billiard room, 30 x 0; and a store out-fitting department, 30 x 32. This Store Dept is unique, as it contains everything from a needle to camp equipment. Tourists desiring to make trips through the park, can be supplied with tents, boats, canoes, fishing equipment, supplies and guide, the price not exorbitant. The rotunda is largely increased, also the dining room; necessitating new kitchens, serving rooms, etc. An additional room for the use of children and nurses, will be built, and the guides are to have a separate establishment. With a new ice house, cold storage, enlarged dancing hall, and other alterations referred to, will make this Inn one of the most complete and perfect in the lake and mountain parts of Ontario. A large toboggan slide will also be constructed during the summer. During the winter, tourists from all over Canada have made use of the hotel, and the daily average guests from 18 to 25, and it is pleasing to note that most of these guests are from our own and other Canadian cities.

MOTION FILMS OF THE WRECK

Toronto, April 26—With customary enterprise moving picture vendors are already attempting to delectate the public with scenes connected with the disaster to the Titanic. The Provincial Board of Film Inspectors passed a film of the Titanic on Wednesday, but this film does not deal with any of the incidents immediately connected with the disaster; it merely shows scenes at the launching, ice fields, pictures of Captain Smith, and crowds watching the Carpathia coming into New York.

Mr. G. E. Armstrong, chairman of the Provincial board, said the film was harmless, and in view of an absence of any sensational faking the board did not think it necessary to eliminate anything.

WHY A WATCH WEARS OUT

Neglect is responsible for most Watches going wrong. A Watch should be thoroughly overhauled, at least once a year. Dust collecting in a Watch causes it to run dry, the grit will then wear away the delicate bearings. AD. CLUB DINNER NEXT TUESDAY

Mr. Fritz Kuhn of Ottawa to be the Speaker

The business men of Peterboro and every clerk behind the counter with ambition to increase his efficiency will be afforded the opportunity of gaining something worth while on Tuesday evening next, April 30th, on the occasion of the monthly dinner of the Peterboro Ad Club, when Mr. Fritz Kuhn, of Ottawa, will deliver an address on "Why Advertising Does Not Pay Without Store Service."

The executive of the local club met last evening and decided to bring Mr. Kuhn from Ottawa, even at considerable expense, in order to have talent worthy of addressing the Club. Mr. Kuhn is secretary of the Ottawa Ad Club and is an expert on advertising and store management, at which business, in an advisery capacity, he is engaged.

Amongst other business transacted last evening the Ad Club brought under way a plan whereby more pride and loyalty to Peterborough institutions will be instilled into the minds of Peterborough citizens.

The delegates to the Synod were also elected—Dr. George Burnham, Mr. Barlow Cumberland and Mr. Joshua Smithson.

WILL REPORT TO-NIGHT

A meeting will be held to-night of the committee appointed at the last council, who were to investigate and report on the proper steps to be taken in the creation of a relief fund for the relatives of the crew of the Titanic.

Homeseeker's and Settler's Train to Camrose, Edmonton and Western Canada.

Via Chicago and St. Paul, will leave Toronto 10.30 p.m., Tuesday, April 30th, via G. T. R. System, for Camrose, Edmonton and points in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Stopping at all points on Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, west of Winnipeg. Through coaches and Pullman Tourist Sleepers will be carried, fully equipped with bedding and porter in charge. Berths may be secured in these cars at a low rate. This is an exceptional opportunity for those wishing to take advantage of the remarkably low one way settlers rates or round trip homeseekers' excursions through the American cities, no change of cars. Full particulars, berth reservations, etc., from any Grand Trunk Agent, or write A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

NEW TYPE OF GAS ELECTRIC COACH TO BE BUILT AT LOCAL WORKS OF C.G.E.

Toronto World.

To see a passenger coach whizz by at 45 miles an hour, to see no engine in front and no coaches behind, to hear a whistle that sounded like a belching sream from a locomotive, all these and many more caused no little consternation and provided much food for thought among hundreds of farmers and other ruralties between here and Trenton Saturday.

Toronto to Trenton on the new C.N.R. gas-electric car, a distance of 115 miles, without a hitch and doing the distance with much better time and more comfort than a passenger coach, was the interesting experiment of a party of the company's officials and newspapermen. It was a great trip on the first car of its kind ever placed on the rails on Canada, and the fact that it was successful in the eyes of the experts may tend to bring about a revolution of transportation facilities, in respect to passenger service, at least on branch lines.

The car left the station shortly before 2 o'clock and reached Trenton at about 5. However it wasn't exactly a clean journey. Naturally, there were stops at stations en route, for there was a real, live conductor on board to get the train orders, and wide-eyed section gangs had a habit of leaving their hand cars on the track at very opportune moments, causing delay here and there along the journey.

But the travelling was smooth. There was not much vibration.

Such cars have proved efficient in various parts of the United States, and it is within the realm of possibility that they will be seen throughout Ontario before long. This particular conveyance, which is a model, was built by the General Electric Company in Schenectady, N. Y., but hereafter cars of the type will be constructed in the factory of the Canadian General Electric in Peterboro.

FIRST COLLECTION OF GARBAGE TO BE MADE NEXT WEDNESDAY

The first collection of garbage to take place under the by-law will be on Wednesday next, May 1st, when the following route will be covered by the wagons, starting at 8 a.m. All the hotels, fruit and fish stores and restaurants in the district lying between Smith and Dalhousie and Reid and the river; the premises on Charlotte, Simcoe, Hunter and Brock, between Water and Aylmer, and both both sides of Aylmer from Charlotte to Murray.

POINTS TO MAKE A NOTE OF.

The refuse must be deposited in boxes or barrels of convenient dimensions, that is, of a size that can be handled easily.

Garbage cans with tight fitting lids are recommended as more sanitary than barrels or boxes.

The garbage, that is, waste food, peelings, vegetables, etc., must be kept in a receptacle by itself, and not be mixed with the ashes and other refuse.

The receptacles must be placed in a convenient position for the collector to remove and empty them. All ashes, and other refuse accumulated during the winter months should as far as possible, be removed before Wednesday next.

In any case the collector will only take refuse and ashes accumulating from May 1st.

OFFICIAL REPORT ON WATERS ON TRENT CANAL WATERWAY

The spring freshets seem to be over. It is officially reported that the water at Fenelon Falls has started to lower and the same can be said of Bobcaygeon.

At Buckhorn there is no change, either way, but a downward change will soon be noticeable. The water is not rising at Young's Point and ice is coming out of Clear Lake. The water is still high in Victoria and Haliburton counties. All the conservation lakes are full, with the stoplogs all in. At Hastings the water is high but not increasing.

Navigation between Lakefield and Lake Simcoe will open about the first of May.

ASSISTANT FISHERY INSPECTOR MET HIS DEATH BY DROWNING

The body of Mr. E. Grandy of Omemee, who has recently been assistant Fishery Inspector, was found in Emily Creek yesterday morning by a searching part who commenced their work following a report that Mr. Grandy had been drowned.

It appears that he had set out in his canoe on Wednesday afternoon, in pursuit of his duties, and the upturned craft was discovered by some trappers, later in the day.

The late Mr. Grandy was a brother of the postmaster at Omemee. He was known as a good swimmer, but it is likely that after meeting with the accident, he was seized with cramps. He was well known throughout the district and his tragic death is a heavy blow to his wife and his numerous friends.

To The Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir—Will you kindly inform the public that Mr. G. D. Lundy has kindly put his field, opposite the Park Street Baptist Church, under the exclusive control of the Rev. W. C. Riddiford, to be used for athletic purposes. The police have been notified to arrest any persons who insist on playing foot-ball or any other kind of ball on Sunday, or in any other way damaging the field or property thereon.

Yours for clean and wholesome sport,

REV. W. C. RIDDIFORD.

MARLBOROUGH CLUB AT MUTT AND JEFF

The members of the Marlborough Club occupied the six boxes at the Grand Opera House last evening, about twenty-five of the club being present. The boxes were effectively decorated with the colors of the club, yellow and black. The boys also wore the distinguishing mark of their organization. As they took their place last evening the audience indulged in hearty applause, which was acknowledged by Mr. Will Thornton by a courtly bow.

During the performance two beautiful large bouquets were tossed on the stage from the boxes to Miss Lillian Goldsmith and Miss Viola Hopkins, two of the most popular artists of the company. The bouquets bore the colors of the club also, and were most charmingly displayed by the two principals.

Michael Farr, a Goderich hotelman, claims that a license commissioner solicited $500 to guarantee that his license would not be cut off.

FALSE STEP OF BONAR LAW

Reasons Why He Was Made Leader and Failed

London, April 26.—Some months ago, at the opening of the present Parliament, the Conservative party took the surprising step of turning its pilot adrift. It is true that the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour actually resigned, but his departure was preceded by an agitation within his party and the letters B.M.G. (Balfour must go) had been accepted as a watchword of a large portion of his followers.

The dissatisfaction with the former Premier grew out of the conviction that with all his skill as a tactician and a dialectician he was not a fighter. His triumphs in debate were recognized, but they were judged by the success of the clever boxer rather than the finish fighter. Believing that the time had arrived for aggressive tactics, for protracted and determined attack, the Tories and particularly the younger generation, looked elsewhere for a leader.

CHOICE FELL ON BONAR LAW.

Their choice fell upon Mr. A. Bonar Law, by no means the most conspicuous of the half a dozen able lieutenants about Mr. Balfour; in fact a man so little known outside of England that the mention of his name aroused curiosity rather than conveyed information. But as Abraham Lincoln once said of Grant, "I can't spare that man, he fights," so the Conservative party, recognizing this merit in Mr. Law's Parliamentary record, chose him to lead in a session recognized to be critical for party interests.

In this situation Mr. Law was fortunate both in the circumstances of the movement and in the spirit of his party. Thanks to the situation he was able immediately after he was selected to make a speech which revealed his admirable aggressive abilities, while the sentiment within his party was such that this speech aroused instant enthusiasm and supplied a reasonable basis for the conviction that the party had chosen its leader wisely and that new prosperity was at hand.

Despite these favorable circumstances it is now plain that Mr. A. Bonar Law has not measured up to the expectations. Indeed the reappearance of Mr. Balfour as the spokesman of the party in the coal strike debate and in the home rule preliminaries is convincing evidence that Mr. A. Bonar Law's party has at last recognized his failure and its mistake and turned to the leader it so recently discarded. "B. M. R. (Balfour must return) has in fact replaced the ancient watchword.

LEADER'S FATAL BLUNDER

The circumstances of Mr. Law's failure are reviewed in some detail in the April Fortnightly Review by a critic who disguises himself by the signature "Auditor Tantum."

The blunder came in a discussion with the Prime Minister over the national insurance act, and led on by skilful badgering Mr. Bonar Law suddenly acknowledged that if his party came into power it would repeal the national insurance act. The effect was astonishing, the very bearing of his party associates, the outburst of the minority, revealed the extent of the blunder, for the act had commanded many Tory votes and the extreme of Tory expectation was amendment, not repeal. The next day, a shower of statements explained that Mr. Law had not meant to repeal only to amend, but the mistake was made and the confidence of his followers was permanently lost.

Since that time the pretige of Mr. Bonar Law has steadily declined. The return of Mr. Balfour has been greeted with unmistakable evidences of Unionist relief. If he is not aggressive a finish fighter, the ideal captain of a forlorn hope, the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour is "safe"; Mr. Asquith will bring no such damaging assents from him. Apparently the Conservative experiment in immoderate aggresiveness has terminated unhappily.

SOME SECRETS OF THE TRADE

Shirt Was Dyed With Syrup From Soda Fountain

At the National Congress of Domestic Science, held in New York City recently, an interesting demonstration was given by Professor Breithut, who had charge of the booth occupied by the College of the City of New York. The professor went out to a soda fountain and bought some strawberry syrup. His trained eye told him the coloring was not of the strawberry fruit. His chemical analysis proved his eye correct. With the coloring he dyed a baby's undershirt a bright red and hung it on a clothes line in the booth for all to see.

Milk, supposed to be adulterated, was taken to the booth. A drop of chloride of iron and strong sulphuric acid was added to it. Immediately it showed a strong purple color, which was proof positive that it contained formaldehyde, a deadly poison which is used in embalming corpses.

Next one of the visitors took to the booth a bottle of substance labelled "Pure Olive Oil." A student added to this a solution of carbon bisulphide and sulphur dissolved in Amyl alcohol. It was heated in a salt solution and thereupon the product turned from yellow to dark red, showing it to be cotton-seed oil instead of olive oil.

HUNDREDS OF TESTS.

And there were hundreds of other such tests. A silver instrument was dipped into a can of peas and it was coated a bright copper color, showing the peas to contain copperas, another deadly poison.

Much of the gelatin on the market was shown to be nothing more than glue, reduced to a less stage through chemical treatment. Such a gelatin is often employed in the manufacture of cheap ice creams and ice cream cones. Enough glue was extracted from these kinds of products to make a chair—back, legs and all—and it is a very substantial chair, for the glue possessed exceeding tenacity.

Another revelation was adulterated licorice. It was declared that much of the stick licorice on the market was made of lampblack, and much of it contained no licorice at all.

There was strawberry jelly that contained no strawberry, vanilla flavors that contained no vanilla, orange drinks to which the orange was a stranger. To blackberry and strawberry preserves had been added millet seed to imitate the seeds of the berries. Fishes in cold storage since last year were shown to have had their eyes brightened with chemicals and their gills painted, so as to make them look as if they had just been brought from the water.

Harry Buller, of Chatham, lost his wife and two children in the Titanic disaster.

Talk No. 7. MYOPIA OF THE EYE

Myopia means near sight. When an eye is myopic or near sighted the image looked at does not focus on the nerve, the eyeball therefore is too long. Now, as we cannot change the shape of the eyeball, we put in front of it a concave lens.

This kind of a glass has the property of putting the focus back to the nerve. Myopic persons hold reading close to the eyes, objects at a distance being dim. Vision is certainly the most important of the senses, therefore a word to the wise should suffice. Visit the Optical Institute and learn more about correcting imperfect sight by lenses ground to special prescription.

FORMER SCHOOL PRINCIPAL AT TORONTO STRUCK BY ST. CAR

Mr. Angus McMurchy May Not Recover From His Injuries.

Toronto, April 26—With his skull probably fractured, and unconscious, Angus MacMurchy of 133 East Bloor street, lies in St. Michael's Hospital, as a result of being struck by a street car about 7 o'clock last night. The old gentleman was crossing Bloor street, near Jarvis, when a westbound Belt Line car, operated by motorman Harry Wray, hit and threw him against the curb. He was picked up and carried into his home nearby, where his daughter, Dr. Helen MacMurchy, gave first aid, and then had him removed to the hospital in the police ambulance.

At an early hour this morning he was still unconscious. It is believed that his skull is fractured, and in any case, on account of his old age, it is not expected that he will survive.

Mr. MacMurchy was principal of Jarvis street Collegiate Institute for 42 years, a record in the history of Toronto schools. Owing to failing health he resigned in 1900, and was succeeded by the late Major Manley, who died a few years ago. Dr. Embree is now head of the school. Mr. MacMurchy was a familiar figure in Toronto and his services in various charitable and philanthropic institutions, and he took a deep interest in the House of Industry, where he is now honorary secretary. A few years ago he was honored by the degree, LL.D. by Toronto University, where he was a member of the senate for a long time.

There are two sons, Angus MacMurchy, C. P. R. solicitor, and J. Campbell MacMurchy, a Toronto barrister; and three daughters, Dr. Helen MacMurchy, a well-known local physician, and Miss Marjorie and Bessy.

Stories are conflicting as to the speed the street car was travelling, but it is thought that it was going slowly, as the car stopped slowly at the corner of Jarvis street.

Dr. Helen MacMurchy remained at the bedside of her father in the hospital all night.

DRUG CO. PLANS LARGE BUILDINGS

The National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada has decided to erect at the corner of Beverley and Phoebe streets, Toronto, two five or six-story reinforced concrete buildings to cost in the neighborhood of $200,000. They will sell their present property at 27-29 Wellington street, west, near Bay street, the brick and stone building on which was erected four years ago, a five-story structure. It has a frontage of 60 feet on Wellington and flankage of 170 feet, land is valued, roughly, at $115,000.

The company's new plant will be the most modern in America. Before approving of the plans members of the firm will visit Seattle, Portland, Los Angeles and St. Louis, where the most up-to-date drug manufacturing plants and warehouses are to be found.

The National Drug & Chemical Company is exclusively Canadian.

The Company has branches in every place of importance in Canada and employs 800 hands in addition to the 75 travelling salesmen, who cover the Dominion from coast to coast.

Mr. W. W. Bole said yesterday the company's business had outgrown the existing plant. He could not disclose the name of the prospective buyer of the Wellington street property.

These changes are necessary by the increase in general business and especially the tremendous development of the NA-DRU-CO Department which is located in Toronto.

OTONABEE TOWNSHIP COUNCIL

Otonabee Council met on April 15, when the following business was transacted:

Herbert Miller was awarded the contract for making cement tile.

Application was made to have the concession line surveyed between concessions 17 and 18, between lots 12, 13 and 14. The council agreed to pay one-seventh of the cost, on condition that the owners of the above lots pay the balance.

The following accounts were passed:—Andrew Esson, $30, for daughter's injury on road; Fred Burnham, 50c., for cutting wood; Alfred Kempt, wood, $3; J. A. McIntyre, wood, $11.75; Walter Dickson, assessing and postage, $82; Anderson & Skinner, provisions for J. A. Trotter in 1911, $25.77; Town Hall supplies, $4.50.

Council adjourned to meet as Court of Revision on the 30th May.

HALIFAX WAITING FOR DEATH SHIP

Relatives and Friends From All Over America Are In the Canadian City to Meet the Cable Ship Mackay-Bennett With Her Load of Bodies—Two Hundred and Five Is the Total of Corpses on Board.

Halifax, N.S., April 27.—Halifax is waiting in funeral garb for the arrival of the cable ship Mackay-Bennett with its cargo of dead from the scene of the Titanic disaster. Hotels are crowded with the bereaved, and every train brings additional relatives of the victims. When the floating morgue will reach here was uncertain last night.

Although 205 bodies had been picked up and 91 identified, according to lastest reports, more than 60 relatives and friends of those who perished are in town. More are expected to-day. The cable ship's arrival is indefinite but she will probably reach port to-day.

Among the bodies identified are those of C. M. Hays, Col. J. J. Astor, Isador Straus, George Graham, Toronto, buyer for the T. Eaton Co., H. J. Allison, Montreal.

R. A. Fortune of Montreal will claim the bodies of Mark Fortune and Chas. Fortune, and Senator McKean, a member of the Dominion Senate, will take charge of the body of Hugo Ross, a prominent Winnipeg real estate man.

No inquiries concerning the body of William T. Stead, the eminent English journalist, had been received here up to last night. If recovered it will be held pending instructions from England. J. W. Ragsdale, U. S. consul here, is prepared to take charge of the body of Major Archibald Butt.

Notwithstanding that many of the bodies have been embalmed at sea, it is believed that most of them upon arrival will be taken hurriedly to an undertaking establishment, where they will be prepared for inspection before relatives are allowed to begin the work of identification.

For the many that will probably remain unclaimed, the White Star officials here have engaged plots in the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish cemeteries, respectively, and after keeping the unidentified victims for a fortnight, they will bury them here with services for all faiths.

A wireless message from the Mackay-Bennett picked up here last night, said she had left the scene of the disaster and was steaming toward Halifax. This should bring her here some time Sunday, but the White Star officials predict her arrival on Monday at the earliest.

Big Fire at Brunswick, Me.

Brunswick, Me., April 27.—Fifty buildings, mostly residences, were burning at 2.45 o'clock, in a fire which broke out a little after noon in the sheds of the Knight-Stanwood Coal Co., and it was difficult to estimate the probable extent of the total loss, although $510,000 was named.

DUNKELMAN IS BETTER

He Makes Statement But the Police Keep Mum.

Toronto, April 27.—Eli Dunkelman, now rapidly recovering at the General Hospital, has made a statement, in which he directly accuses Charles Gibson, held for the murder of Joseph Rosenthal, as the man who struck him down Good Friday night in rear of the Strachan avenue Hydro-electric transformer station. Dunkelman does not yet know that Rosenthal, who accompanied him to the lonely spot, is dead.

Dunkelman made his statement to Detectives Cronin and Mitchell at the hospital yesterday, but what he said the police firmly refuse to divulge.

Dunkelman tells a little, very little of his terrible journey from the scene of the murder to his home at Richmond and Simcoe streets. He says that he got as far as King street, where he attempted to get on a street car, but the conductor would not let him board it, and, in some way, he scarcely remembers how, he reached his home.

The story told by Dunkelman, it is said, clears away the few remaining open places in the link of the case formed by the police. The mystery of why men should go to purchase wire with no way of removing it is cleared away by the statement that there was a man who was to have carried the stuff away, but who did not turn up. This dispells the greatest obstacle in the minds of some close to the case to the story already formulated.

Dunkelman's recovery has been a marvel to the surgeons at the hospital, and so rapidly is he improving that it is possible that he may be able to tell his story at the inquest next week.

SMALL FIRE IN CHATHAM THEATRE

Chatham, April 27.—About 3.30 yesterday afternoon fire started in the Ophreum Theatre, situated on King street opposite the market square. The fire started in the operating room and it is supposed the films caught fire. The whole front of the theatre was ablaze inside a very few minutes.

The people in the house were successful in getting out before any danger occurred, although the vaudeville artists were forced to get out in their stage clothes. No one was injured, although the motion picture machine operator had his hair singed somewhat.

Two streams were brought to play on the building and the flames were quickly extinguished. The theatre is owned by Frank Smith and the damage will be considerable.

HOW CANADA WAS DUE TO FARE IN RECIPROCITY DEAL

All Important Business Would be Transferred to Chicago and New York.

Boston, Mass., April 27.—President Taft last night cast aside his policy of avoiding personalities in his campaign for renomination, and devoted his entire speech to an attack on ex-President Roosevelt and a defence of himself and his administration against charges Roosevelt has recently made on the stump. He also submitted to the meeting his own letter to Roosevelt concerning reciprocity between Canada and the United States. This letter, which was written by Taft ten days before he signed the agreement, states that "reciprocity with Canada might at first have a tendency to reduce the cost of food products somewhat. Meantime the amount of Canadian products we would take would produce a current of business between Western Canada and the United States that would make Canada only an adjunct of the United States. It would transfer all their important business to Chicago and New York, with their bank credits and everything else, and it would increase greatly the demand of Canada for our manufactures. I see this is an argument against reciprocity made in Canada, and I think it is a good one."

PRESIDENT TAFT.

He sheds some light on the reciprocity snare which was set for Canada.

A fleet of icebergs grandly sweeping
Southward in the night;
The mighty ocean softly sleeping
In their shimmering light,
The splendid liner swiftly speeding,
Warning marconigrams unheeding;
A shock—a grinding noise—death's pall unfurled—
God's hand upon the tiller of the world.

"Lower the lifeboats," sternly spoken,
"Women and children first!"
"Be British," men, tho' hearts be broken,
Dishonor is the worst!
The orchestra is bravely playing,
The gallant Phillips calmly staying,—
O Christ, there's room in Heaven for such men,
Open Thine arms and let them breathe again!

No rank nor wealth can save the stricken,
Unwritten laws hold sway;
"The ship is sinking," strong men sicken,
But in their strength obey;
They think of loved ones soon despairing,
Of Him to Whom all souls are faring,
And then—humanity is glorified
Because those brave men nobly died.

NESBITT MUST RETURN AND FACE THE CHARGES

Depositions of Canadian Witnesses Are Presented at Hearing In Chicago and Commissioner Foote Decides That There Is Plenty of Evidence — Secy. Knox Must Review Case While Prisoner Stays in Jail.

Chicago, April 27.—U. S. Commissioner Mark A. Foote yesterday ordered the extradition of Dr. William Beattie Nesbitt, wanted in Toronto for the wrecking of the Farmers' Bank of Canada, of which he was president. The commissioner heard depositions of former officials of the bank and arguments of counsel on both sides.

The defence will resort to habeas corpus proceedings at once, according to Attorney Wm. K. Pottison, counsel for Nesbitt.

Commissioner Foote declared that there was ample evidence that crime was committed by someone when the bank failed.

The testimony taken by the commissioner and the decision will have to go to Secretary of State Knox for final legislation. The Secretary, in accordance with the law, will review the evidence and facts in the case and make the final order for extradition.

Pending this order, Dr. Nesbitt will remain in the Cook County Jail.

Attorney Bulkley, representing Ontario, stated before Commissioner Foote yesterday that the alleged false statements made by Beattie Nesbitt were concerning the paid-up capital stock of the bank, and the amounts loaned by the bank on notes.

Counsel for Dr. Nesbitt, on the other hand, argued that his client was not guilty of any offence, and insisted that in signing the statements referred to, he had merely concurred, as president of the bank, in the statements prepared by trusted officials, and that he had no knowledge that the statements were not correct.

He characterized all the circumstances of the arrest and detention of Dr. Nesbitt as a "fit subject for a comic opera," and insisted that Dr. Nesbitt had made no attempt to conceal his identity, and had been introduced to hundreds of persons in Chicago.

Counsel for Dr. Nesbitt did not submit evidence to fight the charges of the Toronto authorities, but declared that the offence with which he is charged, is not extraditable, and also attacked the sufficiency of the warrant, asserting that the statute refers to a "wilful falsification," while the warrant charges a "fraudulent falsification."

G. T. Clarkson, liquidator, who investigated the affairs of the bank, deposed that the returns were false and misleading as signed by Nesbitt, as to the capital stock and cash paid up by the shareholders. The statement included an item of "other assets of $80,000," which were nonexistent for the most part, particularly an item of $52,359.

Frank Grierson, a clerk in the finance department, in his deposition, gave it as his opinion that the statements submitted to the Government were false and misleading and professed to deceive.

"Move to strike that out," said the defence. "Grierson is no less than a clerk, and his opinion is no better than that of any other clerk in the finance department. Even in our western country cross-roads, this would not be permissible as evidence." But the objection was overruled.

Walter Duncan's deposition set forth his position as chief detective of Toronto, the circular offering reward for Nesbitt and the warrant for arrest. This was referred to because the deposition referred to charges which were not before the commissioner.

John R. Cartwright's deposition was respecting Canada law, and that the charges against Beattie Nesbitt were indictable.

Mr. Bulkley analyzed the several amounts submitted in evidence to show fraud, and quoted the Canadian Bank Act, declaring the charges to be well laid on facts.

Speaking of the charges, Mr. Bulkley said, the offence charged against Nesbitt is a crime in both the United States and Canada. After quoting from the National Bank Act, showing that any comptroller of currency, who made returns of a false nature in any respects, was guilty of a misdemeanor and liable to five years in jail.

He followed this up with the citation of cases where bank men in the United States had gone to jail for signing inaccurate statements prepared by clerks.

THE OLYMPIC ABANDONS TRIP

Southampton, Eng., April 27.—The White Star liner which had been held off Ryde, Isle of Wight, since Wednesday, by a strike of her firemen, who had demanded better life boat accommodation, yesterday abandoned the schedule trip to New York and returned to port, when the seamen refused to serve with "blacklegs," as they termed the 250 substitutes taking the strikers places. Fourteen sacks of mail will be transferred to the Cunard liner Lusitania.

The seamen, having signed for the voyage, have now laid themselves open to the charge of mutiny, a serious offence. Immediately following the walk-out, the White Star officials appealed to the authorities, and a cruiser captain warned the seamen of their offence. The whole complement of seamen, numbering 54, were arrested when they came ashore.

RESULTS OF THE TITANIC ENQUIRY

Special To The Review.

Washington, D.C., April 27.—New laws requiring wireless operators to be on duty day and night, fixing stringent qualifications to secure mature men with judgment and changing system of their employment and supervision, will be the first and immediate results of the Titanic enquiry, Senator Smith said to-day.

Black Year Is 1912.

Paris, April 25.—Madame de Thebes, whom the New York Times' correspondent say Thursday, was unable to substantiate the rumor current in Paris that she warned the late Col. John Jacob Astor that he would lose his life at sea.

She stated, however, that six years ago she warned Wm. T. Stead that danger by water threatened him. She went on:

"Stead laughed at me then, and said that he would have due warning from his familiars in the spirit world if any danger menaced him. Since that time he had joked with me on more than one occasion about my premonition, pointing to his various long journeys accomplished without mishap. I only repeated my warning.

"The year 1912 is a black year. Other marine catastrophes will follow the Titanic wreck. Cataclysms threaten on all sides. The sea especially is marked out as a source of danger. The dangerous epoch will last until March 21, 1913."

THAW IS OUT

Special to the Review.

Fishkill, N.Y., April 27.—For the first time in nearly two years Harry Thaw, the slayer of Stanford White, had an outing to-day, when he was driven to the railway station and taken to New Rochelle, where Justice Keough is to pass on his new appeal for freedom. Thaw has grown fat and aged greatly. His hair is quite gray.

ROOSEVELT IN REPLY

He Answers Taft's Charges In Vigorous Speech.

Worcester, Mass., April 27.—Merciless denunciation of President Taft was Col. Roosevelt's reply last night to the President's attack upon him yesterday. Some of Col. Roosevelt's assertions were:

"That President Taft had not given the people of the country a "square deal," but that owing to a "quality of feebleness," he had "yielded to the bosses and the great priviliged interests."

That one part of the President's attack upon him was the "crookedest kind of a deal," and "deliberate misrepresentation."

That the President "has not merely in thought, word and deed, been disloyal to our past friendship, but has been disloyal to every canon of ordinary decency and fair dealings such as should obtain even in dealing with a man's bitterest opponents."

"That Mr. Taft convicted himself of insincerity when he signed the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill.

"That in speaking of Col. Roosevelts position in regard to the trust problem, President Taft 'is himself guilty of a crooked deal'."

Col. Roosevelt took up President Taft's attack on him point by point, flaying the President in one scathing sentence after another.

Col. Roosevelt said, in part:

"Mr. Taft's speeches yesterday contained statements that I must answer. Most of what he said needs no comment from me. When, for instance, he said that I have endeavored to minimize the importance of my Columbus speech, he says what he must know to be untrue."

"Mr. Taft says that I changed front on the reciprocity measure," said the colonel. "This is untrue. Incidentally, one of the unpardonable sins on the part of any man calling himself a gentleman is to publish confidential correspondence without permission; as to this I care nothing; but I warn Mr. Taft that in discussing negotiations with a foreign power, it is well not to publish such expressions as that in his letter about making Canada 'only an adjunct of the United States.'

"I told him that I would support his reciprocity proposition. I did loyally support it, in several different speeches. I took the agreement on the faith of Mr. Taft's representation. Later, when I came to look up them after, however I became convinced that the reciprocity agreement as passed by Mr. Taft was unwise and undesirable, because it improperly sacrificed the interests of our farmers and fishermen, and because it carried indefensible action on paper. Nevertheless, because I had stated that I would support the treaty, I said not one word against it until it was dead.

"I do not think that Mr. Taft means ill; I think he means well. But he means well feebly, and during his administration he has been under the influence of men who are neither well-meaning nor feeble. It is this quality of feebleness in a nominally amiable man which pre-eminently fits such a man for us in high office by the powers of evil."

HATCHERY FOR BLACK BASS

Omemee, April 27.—At a meeting of the Fish and Game Protective Association of Bobcaygeon, it was decided to ask the Government to establish a hatchery for black bass at a central point in Kawartha Lakes. It was claimed that the depositing of four or five thousand fry in the chain of lakes each year was insufficient, considering the rapidly increasing numbers taken out each year by anglers. It was also decided to ask the Government to issue permits at a small cost, for the legal use of scoop nets in fishing for lake herring in October. It was further urged that the close season fo rmaskinonge be from December 1 to June 15, both days inclusive each year.

Russia Is Firm.

St. Petersburg, April 27.—The Minister for Foreign Affairs, M. Sazonoff, in the course of a statement on Russian foreign relations made in the Duma yesterday, referred to the abrogation by the United States of the Russo-American Treaty of 1832.

If the United States should take steps to negotiate a new treaty Russia would take into consideration all the wishes of Russian society, he said, but, conscious of the national honor and in close union with all classes of the Russian people, the Government firmly intends, M. Sazonoff added, not to allow any interference with the indisputable sovereign rights of Russia to define its internal legislation as exclusively dependent upon its own needs.

CALIFORNIAN'S CAPTAIN NOW STANDS ACCUSED

Donkeyman on Board Leyland Liner Makes Startling Statements With Regard to Wreck of Liner—He and Others of the Crew, He Says, Saw the Distress Signals, But Captain Ignored Them—Lord Denies Story

Washington, April 27.—Ablaze with light from her saloons and cabins, the Titanic dashed full speed ahead to her destruction, according to Ernest Gill, a donkey engineman on the steamship Californian, who testified yesterday before the Senate committee investigating the disaster. He said that Captain Stanley Lord of the Californian refused later to go to the Titanic, the rockets from which could be plainly seen.

Gill submitted an affidavit to the committee and when sworn and put on the stand stuck to his charges against the captain of the Californian.

At midnight, Gill continued, he went to his cabin, where he remarked to his mate, William Thomas, that he had seen a big vessel, apparently German, going along at full speed. He could not sleep and went back to the deck to smoke a cigarette. Ten minutes later he saw a white rocket, ten miles off to starboard, which he first thought was a shooting star. A second rocket in the same place, seven or eight minutes later, he saw distinctly, and he remarked to himself, "That must be a vessel in distress."

He did not notice the bridge or lookout, he said, because it was not his business and they could not have helped but see the rockets, and he supposed they would pay attention. Gill swore that he then turned in, and at 6.40 a.m. was awakened with orders to turn out to render assistance, that the Titanic had gone down. The Californian then was proceeding at full speed, clear of the icefields, but with plenty of icebergs about. He heard Second Officer J. C. Evans telling Fourth Officer Wooten that the third officer had seen rockets during his watch and Gill said he knew then it must have been the Titanic he had seen.

The entire crew, according to Gill, talked among themselves about the disregard of the rockets. Mr. Stone, the second navigating officer, was on the Californian's bridge at the time of the rocket signals.

Captain Lord entered a sweeping denial of Gill's accusations and read from the Californian's log to support his contention.

Cyril Evans, the Californian's wireless operator, told of hearing much talk among the crew who were critical of the captain's course.

Gill, he said, told him he expected to get $500 for his story when the ship reached Boston.

Evans told of having warned the Titanic only a brief time before the great vessel crashed into the berg that the sea was crowded with ice. The Titanic's operators, he said, at the time were working with the wireless station at Cape Race, and they told him to "shut up" and "keep out." Within a half hour the pride of the sea was crumpled and sinking.

It developed yesterday that one reform that is certain to spring from the present investigation will be enforced in the wireless rooms of ships entering or leaving American ports. This concerns lack of authority over the operators, pay, hours and freedom from responsibility, as brought out by the testimony to date.

P. A. S. Franklin, vice-president of the White Star Line, explained away an allegation that the White Star had refused to allow the captain of the steamer Californian to come from Boston to give evidence. He said that he had urged him to come by the midnight train and that he would try to have his evidence taken in time to permit his return to the vessel last night.

Senator Smith saked the witness if, in exchanging messages with J. Bruce Ismay, inward bound on the Carpathia, he had enjoined secrecy.

"Emphatically no. Nothing of the sort was even attempted."

The witness said the steamship companies were as anxious to get the best results from the wireless apparatus.

"No doubt this investigation will bring out some legislation settling the problem. I believe that a law should be enacted compelling, among other things, the presence of an operator at the instrument all of the time," said Mr. Franklin.

Ice Blockade Above the Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 27.—A great ice blockade between the mainland and Goat Island yesterday cut off the flow of water over the American Falls. The American channel is practically dry and several people crossed on the river bed from Goat to Green Island. The American Falls has been converted into five distinct cataracts about fifteen feet wide.

Orchestra Player Dead.

Ottawa, April 27.—Soon after the special train bearing the members of the London Symphony Orchestra, reached here yesterday, Wallace Sutcliffe, a second violin player in this world-famous orchestra, was found dead in his berth. Coroner Baptie stated that death was due to heart failure and the funeral occurred yesterday afternoon to Beechwood cemetery here.

Deceased was 44 years old, and leaves a widow and child in London, Eng. For some days he had complained of pains near his heart, but he was well enough to play at Toronto Thursday night. He was seen at six o'clck yesterday morning about the car in which he slept, but went back to bed.

BIG EMPRESS GRAZES BERG

Empress of Britain Grazes a Big Iceberg, Say Passengers.

Halifax, April 27.—A giant iceberg, similar to that which sank the Titanic, threatened disaster to the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Britain with 1,460 passengers aboard, which arrived here yesterday from Liverpool.

Passengers say that on Wednesday last at 10 a.m. the vessel, while in latitude 46 N., longitude 47 W., was swerved just in time to avoid a serious collision. Fortunately the ship was steaming slowly at the time because of the dense fog. Suddenly the lookout sighted a great iceberg ahead. He rang for full speed astern, and the propellors were reversed. Despite this the vessel struck the berg a glancing blow, but was not badly damaged.

There were many passengers on deck and all being familiar with the Titanic's fate, many were panicky until assured that there was no danger. The scene was only 250 miles from where the Titanic struck and sank.

The Empress of Britain was bound from Liverpool to Quebec, but because of the prevalence of gulf ice docked here instead of at Quebec.

BANK MERGER GOING AHEAD

Montreal, April 27.—Negotiations are being continued at this end for the merger of the Traders Bank of Toronto and the Royal Bank of Montreal. The parties who have been buying Traders' Bank stock during the past few days are confident that the deal is going through. Representatives of the Traders Bank have been here for some days.

Prince Arthur Coming.

London, April 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—It is understood that Prince Arthur of Connaught is obtaining special army leave so he can visit Canada next autumn. He will likely return with Princess Patricia, who will go to Sweden. Princess Patricia is unlikely to visit London till next year, as she will accompany her parents on the Dominion tour.

Wanted In Regina.

London, April 27.—Supt. J. A. Young, of the London Street Railway, who has been offered the superintendency of the Regina municipal railway, will probably accept.

HE DIED IN SANITARIUM HE ESTABLISHED

Special to the Review.

New York, April 27.—Dr. Daniel K. Pearsons, the eccentric philanthropist, who gave away nearly seven million dollars, died to-day of pneumonia, penniless, in the sanitarium which his gifts had established. He was 92 years of age.

Passengers Resentful.

Southampton, April 27.—Some of the passengers who were booked to sail on the Olympic regard the action of the firemen and seamen in striking as utterly unwarranted, but many of them apparently feel also that they were badly treated by the steamship company because they were kept on board the vessel for two and a half days without, they declare, being informed of the actual state of affairs.

THE TITANIC

When the seas demand their tribute, and a British ship goes down,
There's something in the English after all:
There's no panic rush for safety, where the weak are left to drown,
For there's something in the English after all;
But the women and the children are the first to leave the wr
With the crew in hand as steady as a wall,
And the Captain is the last to stand upon the sinking deck,
So there's something in the English—after all.

—BERTRAND SHADWELL,

The above is the third stanza of a poem, entitled "There's Something in the English After All," which I wrote many years ago and which was published over my signature in the "Peterborough Review" on August 4th, 1910. It will be seen that it was and has remained absolutely true to facts.

BERTRAND SHADWELL. Washington, D. C., April 20th, 1912.

CURE THAT COLD

This is Quickly and Pleasantly Accomplished If You Use

Catarrhozone

Catarrhozone will relieve colds almost instantly and in a few hours will cure completely. If it is old-standing asthma or bronchitis its quick and curative results will astonish you.

Catarrhozone is little drops of healing medicine carried by air to the sore and diseased parts. You breathe them through the Catarrhozone inhaler and they spread throughout all the air passages.

It is sense as well as healing, because Catarrhozone is a germ killer, a healer and restorer of weak tissues, because it is so prompt and certain in its results, better than any other remedy for diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes, and it is neither alcohol, morphia or cocaine—all dangerous.

Tens of thousands have used Catarrhozone without reporting a single case of failure to cure diseases of the throat and lungs and nasal passages. Remember, CATARRHOZONE is taken in air, and is little drops of healing for the throat, nasal passages, or lungs. It always does cure—is guaranteed.

Price 25c., 50c., and $1.00 at all druggists or by mail, post paid, from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE VICTORIA MUSEUM

At the opening of the museum in the new quarters, many citizens who had not been familiar with it, and what it contained were surprised at the extent, variety and value of the collection of antiquities and interesting articles which had been gathered. A good museum is interesting but it is much more than that, it is educative. To see and understand what our forefathers had to use not so very many years ago, and make comparisons with what we have to-day, is an aid to an education in the development of the world, and its appliances. The ornithological and other features of the museum, add to its interest and value.

The Historical Society, which originated the museum, has done a good work in connection with it, and by far the greater part of that credit is due to Mr. T.A.S. Hay. Mr. Hay has given much care to the classification and arrangement of the articles, and has done the work with the thought of fulness and thoroughness of one who took a deep and intelligent interest in it.

In its central situation, the museum will be more accessible and consequently of more service. Citizens may add to its value by bearing in mind that those in charge of it will be pleased to receive relics and articles of historical interest.

EXIT HEAVEN

A German Socialist, Mr. Leigien, Secretary of the German Federation of Labor, is on a trip to America, and in an address in Toronto is reported to have said:

"Since science has left no room in all the universe for the heaven of those believing in the old forms of religion, there remains nothing else but Socialism, which gives the worker fresh hope, faith in his own cause, in the future of his class, and in the future of mankind."

This view is a not unnatural outcome of the destructive criticism of the British, which largely originated in Germany and has found its way into all countries and all churches. While criticism was confined to men outside the churches, and was met by the defenders within, it did not have much effect, but when the bars were let down by professors and preachers, the faith of many was staggered.

Mr. Leigien, however, takes too much for granted in his positive assertion. There are still many millions who cannot see that science has filled the universe so full of its knowledge that no room is left for the old forms and beliefs of religion, and the belief in the life to come and the heaven in which it will be lived warms millions of weary hearts and gives them a hope and an energy that no form of Socialism that denies the future can hope to emulate.

It would be a mistake to understand that all Socialists are agnostics. There are various forms of Socialism and many varieties of Socialists, but any weakening in "the old forms of religion" will be to the advantage of all classes of people who look to this world as all there is, and consequently aim to get all they can out of it, often regardless of others.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Ottawa Journal has just settled a libel suit brought against it, and has instituted a libel suit against its neighbor, The Citizen. Some people are never happy unless they are in trouble.

City Engineer Rust, of Toronto, has resigned to go to Victoria, B.C. He will secure two advantages by the change, an increase of salary and escape from the nagging of some members of the city council.

On the Titanic there were twenty-one men and fifteen women who were Canadians, and of these, thirteen women and two men were saved. Of the two men saved one was ordered into a lifeboat to help to man it, and the other was given a place in a boat after all the women in his part of the ship had embarked.

It is fifteen years since the Victoria Museum was opened, with appropriate ceremony, on the occasion of the celebration of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee. Speaking on that occasion Mr. Wm. Yelland who then was Mayor said, "I remember when Queen Victoria was crowned." "And I remember," said Mrs. Traill, of Lakefield, who had a seat on the platform, "when Queen Victoria was born."

WILL TRY TO HAVE LOCAL OPTION BY-LAW ANNULLED

Owen Sound, April 26.—Notice has been served upon the Council that steps will be taken to have the local option by-law declared null and void. The action is being instituted at the instigation of J. D. Stoddart, who appeared as the relator in the proceedings some time ago which resulted in the disqualification of five of the local option members of the Town Council.

Further than the fact that the Council has been served with the notice of legal action nothing has taken place, but it is expected that the extreme anti-element, which is recognized as being behind the movement, will press for a hearing as soon as possible.

The position is peculiar in the extreme. The Council is anti-local option in complexion owing to the unseating of five local optionists a few weeks ago and the election of antis to fill their places. The action now being instituted places the Council under the necessity of defending the local option by-law, since it is a corporation measure. If the Council refuses to do so, as it undoubtedly will refuse, then no defence of the by-law can be undertaken.

It is understood that the principal reason that is assigned for the attack upon the by-law is that there were irregularities at the polls last January. This was the cause of the unseating of the five Councillors not long ago. Naturally, this latest move on the part of the anti-faction has caused considerable excitement in town, and the local optionists are hurriedly preparing for contingencies. If the action against local option is pressed it is understood that a move will be made to have the three industrial and civic by-laws voted on and carried at the same time declared null and void on the same grounds.

THE HOME PHYSICIAN

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cure Most of the Family's Ills.

This Little Box is Mother's Stand-by.

Perhaps if the children, and the "grown-ups" too, always ate exactly the right quantities of exactly the right things, at just the proper times, and in every other way obeyed the rules of health, there would be no sickness in the family, and no need of medicine.

But they never have and probably never will, so in every family there are sure to be more or less frequent attacks of sick headache, biliousness, indigestion, constipation, and kidney and liver troubles, and occasionally some one is "sick in bed".

It is worth a good deal to the mother, then, to have on hand that perfectly safe and reliable remedy for these ills —

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

They invigorate those organs which cleanse the body of waste and impurities, regulating the bowels, stimulating the kidneys and opening the pores of the skin.

Thus Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure the common ailments and keep the family healthy. This they have been doing for over half a century in every part of the world.

Liverpool Wheat Future: Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, April 26.—It was a runaway market to-day. Frightened shorts competed wildly with their new investors, who had waited in vain to buy on a reaction. The stampede started as a result of sensational crop damage reports from Kansas. Closing figures were strong, 1 3-8c to 2 3-8c higher than last night. Closing figures were strong, 1 3-8c to 2 3-8c higher than last night. Corn finished at a decline of a shade to 1c, oats varying from 1-8c to 1-4c down to a sixteenth advance, and provisions increased in cost 12 1-2c to 55c.

Liverpool wheat closed ¼d to ⅜d lower than yesterday, and corn unchanged to ¼d lower. Budapest wheat closed ⅜c higher, and Berlin 1⅜c higher.

DIABETES

Is one of the most cruel maladies of which mankind is subject, the many complications arising from time to time, making life seem almost unbearable. For many diseases, medical, scientific, and physiological knowledge and experience gained from years of deep research, has achieved remarkable results, but, up to now, little has been discovered of practical value in the treatment and cure of Diabetes. In fact, people have begun to look upon the disease as well-nigh incurable. Even in the medical profession can be found doctors who are of the same opinion, regarding sceptically any claim to ameliorate or improve the condition of a diabetic patient.

It can, however, be proved that SANSOL'S ANTIDIABETES lastingly cures all cases of Diabetes. Full particulars can be obtained from the Sansol Mfg. Co., Winnipeg, Man.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

"Don't you think," she said, "that if your father sees this car Simmonds will be dispensed with somehow?"

Cynthia nodded. The argument was unanswerable.

They were crossing the course at a walking pace; at that point a sort of passage was kept clear by the police for the convenience of those occupants of the stands who wished to visit the paddock. The owner of Vendetta, having ben congratulated by royalty, was taking some friends to admire the horse during the rubbing-down process, when his glance suddenly fell on Medenham. Though amazed, he was not rendered speechless.

"Well, I'm——" he began.

But the Mercury possessed a singularly loud and clear motor-horn, and the voice of the Honorable Charles was drowned. Still, his gestures were eloquent. Quite obviously, he was saying to a man whose arm he caught:

"Did you ever in your life see anybody more like George that that chauffeur? Why, it is Medenham!"

So Mrs. Devar lost a golden opportunity. She knew Fenton by sight, and her shrewd wits must have set her on the right track had she witnessed his bewilderment. Being a pretentious person, however, and not able to afford the up-keep of a motor, she was enjoying the surprise of two well-dressed women who recognized her. Then the car leaped forward again, and she scored a dearly won triumph.

At this crisis Medenham's scrutiny of the road map provided by Simmonds for the tour was well repaid. He turned sharp to the right past the back of the stands, and was fortunate in finding enough clear road to render pursuit by his elderly cousin a vain thing, even if it were thought of. The Mercury had to cross the caravan zone carefully, but once Tattenham Corner was reached the way lay open to Reigate.

Through a land of gorse and heather they sped until they came to the famous hill. They ran down in a noiseless flight that caused Cynthia to experience the sensation of being born on wings.

"I imagine that aeroplaning is something like this," she confided to her companion.

"If it is, it must be enjoyable. I don't suppose, at my time of life, I shall ever try to navigate the air in one of those frail contrivances pictured in the newspapers. But I was nearly tempted to go up in a balloon two years ago."

Cynthia stole a glance at Mrs. Devar's rotund figure, and laughed. She could not help it, though she flushed furiously at what she deemed an involuntary rudeness on her part.

"Oh, its sounds funny, I have no doubt," said the other, placidly good tempered, "but I really meant it at the moment. You have met Count Edouard Marigny, I fancy?"

"Yes, in Paris last month. In fact——"

Cynthia hesitated. She had scarcely recovered from the excitement of the racing and was not choosing her words quite happily. Mrs. Devar, still sugary, ended the sentence.

"In fact, it was he who recommended me to Mr. Vanrenen as your chaperon. Yes, my dear Monsieur Marigny and I are old friends. He and my son are inseparable when Captain Devar is in Paris. Well, as I was saying, the Count offered to take me up in his balloon, L'Etoile, and I was ready to go, but the weather became stormy and an ascent from the Velo was impossible, or highly dangerous, at any rate."

Mrs. Devar cultivated the high-pitched voice that she regarded as the hall-mark of good breeding, and, in that silent rush down hill, Medenham could not avoid hearing each syllable. It was eminently pleasing to listen to Cynthia's praise of his car, and he was wroth with the other woman for wrenching the girl's thoughts away so promptly from a topic dear to his heart. Therein he erred, for the gods were being kind to him. Little recking how valuable was the information he had just been given, he slackened speed somewhat, and leaned back in the seat.

"We are nearing Reigate now," he remarked with half-turned head. "The town begins on the other side of the tunnel. Which inn do you wish to stop at for tea?"

"It seems to me that I have barely ended lunch," said Cynthia. "Shall we cut out your old-world Reigate inn, Mrs. Devar, and take tea at Crawley or Handcross?"

"By all means. How well you know the names of the towns and villages. Yet you have never before visited this part of England."

"We Americans are nothing if not thorough," answered the girl. "I would not be happy if I failed to look up our route on the map. More than that, I note the name of each river we cross and try to identify every range of hills. You must test me and count my mistakes."

Mrs. Devar spread her hands in a gesture copied from her French acquaintances.

"My dear, I am the most ignorant person geographically. I remember how delightful Count Edouard laughed when I asked him if the Loire joined the Seine above or below Paris. It seems that I was thinking of the Oise all the time. The Marchioness of Belfort told me of my error afterwards."

Cynthia laughed merrily, but made no reply.

Medenham bent over the levers and the car danced on through Reigate. Mrs. Devar impressed him as a despicable type of tuft-hunter. His acquaintance with the species was not extensive; he had read of elderly dowagers who eked out their slender means by introducing the daughters of rich Americans to English society, and the thing was not in itself wholly indefensible; but he felt sure that Cynthia Vanrenen needed no such social sponsor, while the mere bracketing of Count Edouard Marigny with "Jimmy" Devar caused him to regard this unknown Frenchman with a suspicion that was already active enough so far as Mrs. Devar was concerned. And the Marchioness of Belfort, too! A decrepit old cadger with an infallible system for roulette!

Perhaps his mood communicated itself to the accelerator. At any rate, the Mercury seemed to sympathize, and it was a lucky hazard that kept the glorious stretch of road between Reigate and Crawley free of police traps on that memorable Wednesday. The car simply leaped out of Surrey into Essex, the undulating parklands on both sides of the smooth highway appearing to float past in stately procession, and there was a fine gleam in Cynthia's blue eyes when the first check to a splendid run came in the outskirts of Crawley.

She leaned forward and tapped him on the shoulder.

"Tea here, please," she said. Then she added, as if it were an afterthought: "If you promise to let her rip in that style after we reach the open country again I shall sit on the front seat."

The words were almost whispered into his ear. Certainly they were not meant to enlighten Mrs. Devar, and Medenham, turning, found his face very near the girls.

"I'm bribed," he answered, and not until both were settled back in their seats did they realize that either had said anything unusual.

Medenham, however, took his cup of tea a la chauffeur, helping himself to bread and butter from a plate deposited on the bonnet by a waiting-maid.

WOMAN'S HAIR

Here's a Preparation That Makes Hair Fascinating

PARISIAN SAGE is the ideal hair tonic and beautifier of the present time.

It is compounded on the most advanced scientific principles, and nothing on the market to-day can compare with it.

It accomplishes so much more than the ordinary tonics, and does it so quickly that users are astonished.

PARISIAN SAGE kills the dandruff germs and eradicates dandruff in two weeks, or money back.

Since its introduction into America it has become a prime favorite with women of refinement.

PARISIAN SAGE gives a fascinating lustre to women's hair and makes it beautiful. It makes the hair grow luxeriantly; it is the dantiest and most refreshing hair dressing that science has produced, and has not a particle of grease or stickiness in it.

A large bottle of PARISIAN SAGE costs but 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and dealers everywhere. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package.

SILVER SERVICE PRESENTED TO G. H. GOODERHAM

Toronto, April 26.—About sixty prominent citizens and friends of George H. Gooderham, M. L. A., gathered last evening in the banquet hall of the King Edward to do him honor on the occasion of his leaving the post of president of the Canadian National Exhibition Association, which he has held since 1909. The occasion was made memorable by the presentation to Mr. Gooderham of a handsome silver tea service.

J. G. Kent, Mr. Gooderham's successor in the office of president of the association, who made the presentation, in proposing the toast to the guest of the evening, read the address.

The Soo and Welland canals will be opened Sundays until congestion of traffic is relieved.

WOMAN SICK FOR YEARS

Wants Other Women to Know How She was Finally Restored to Health.

Hammond, Ont. — "I am passing through the Change of Life and for two years had hot flushes very bad, headaches, soreness in the back of head, was constipated, and had weak, nervous feelings. The doctor who attended me for a number of years did not help me, but I have been entirely relieved of the above symptoms by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier and Liver Pills, and give you permission to publish my testimonial." — Mrs. LOUIS BEAUCAGE, Sr., Hammond, Ont., Canada.

New Brunswick, Canada. — "I can highly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any suffering woman. I have taken it for female weakness and painful menstruation and it cured me." — Mrs. DEVERE BARBOUR, Harvey Bank, New Brunswick, Canada.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

COULD NOT RAISE MY RIGHT ARM

OLD BRIDGEPORT, C. B.

"For the past 41 years, I have been suffering with Rheumatism. When I read in the papers that GIN PILLS, would positively cure rheumatism, I wrote you for a free sample to try. I could not raise my right arm because of the awful pain in my shoulder—was not able to drink. After taking a few GIN PILLS, I was able to lift my hand and put it on the top of my head.

I went to the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon and met an old fisherman named La Pape. His limbs were stiff from Rheumatism and I gave him some Gin Pills. I met him again in a few days and he told me he could lift his arms, which he had not been able to do for ten years. ADOLPHE E. MAHE.

A Sign of the Times

PEOPLE are becoming very careful about what they eat and drink—

The preference for goods in sealed packages—especially in food stuffs—is now quite definite and becoming more so every day.

We must frankly admit that there are sound reasons for this preference. Food stuffs cannot be exposed to varying atmospheric conditions without losing both strength and flavor.

Tea—of all articles of everyday diet (excepting coffee, perhaps) needs protection most, and best merchants have been quick to appreciate the fact. So much is this the case that the selling of loose Tea in bulk will soon be a thing of the past.

RED ROSE TEA reaches you with all its virginal flavor, strength and purity—

—It is sealed in air-tight packages—dust and damp-proof—

RED ROSE is a blend of the best Indian and Ceylon Teas.

—The former assures generous strength and richness—the latter that coaxing, delicate flavor, Qualities for which Red Rose Tea is famed.

Ask your Grocer for the 40c. package of Red Rose and you'll get better Tea—Tea that spends farther—for the same money.

Mrs. Dorthea Ritchie, accompanied by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson Ritchie, returned from Montreal yesterday to her own home at Stewart and Dublin streets, having recovered from a serious attack of pneumonia. She had been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Vernon Freeburn and was taken ill a month ago.

Mrs. Ritchie is eighty years of age, and her recovery is credited to the able and assidious attention of Dr. W. J. Patterson, of Outremont, with Dr. W. F. Hamilton of Montreal, in consultation. Careful nursing and a sound constitution, did their good share.

The news of Mrs. Ritchie's recovery will be welcomed by many friends for she is one of Peterborough's oldest and most respected residents.

BATTLE OF WORDS ON ANTRIM STREET

There Were No Casualties; They Were Women

The peaceful atmosphere of Antrim street was disturbed yesterday afternoon, by the noise of women's voices raised in anger. A genuine tongue battle occurred between the feminine heads of two English families, and at times it seemed that hair and nails and teeth would be intermingled. The nature of the cause of hostilities could not be ascertained. The presence of a crowd of small boys and girls who crowded around the heated combatants helped a little in the excitement.

Kit Carson's Son

Hamilton, April 27—James Carson, a medicine man, well known throughout Ontario, claimed to-day to have succeeded in establishing his identity as the son of Kit Carson, the famous scout. Carson is now worth $25,000 and has a 1,200 acre farm in California. He said he was received recently by President Taft as Kit Carson's son, and that George ("Honey Boy") Evans, of New York, is the man who got the evidence that established his identity.

Lindsay Pavements

Lindsay Post—The William street asphalt block pavement stood the test of the past winter very satisfactorily. When it was laid a few years ago not a few were of the opinion that the blocks would be heaved by the winter's frost. On Thursday a Post reporter inspected the roadway and failed to find an instance in which these doubts were realized. The pavement has experienced two severe winters, and the frost has had no effect on it.

YOUNG PEOPLE HAD GOOD TIME

One of the most enjoyable dances of the season was held last night in the Conservatory of Music Hall, when forty-five couples assembled in that spacious room and indulged in the graceful two-step and waltz movements till the early hours of this morning. All the latest popular airs and swinging, compelling selections were rendered in the most acceptable manner by Miss M. Gladman, whose perfect expression and accurate time made the dancing a far greater pleasure than it otherwise might have been.

In an intermission between the dances dainty and appetizing refreshments were served and were heartily partaken of by the happy guests.

The management of the affair was entirely in the hands of Messrs. Wilfred Hall and R. Dixon who deserve much credit for the capable manner in which they supervised all arrangements that could lead to giving the young people an enjoyable evening.

SHE FOUND THE SECRET OF YOUTH

Dodd's Kidney Pills Made Her a New Woman

Mrs Tremblay, sixty-one years of age, finds a cure for Headaches, Sleeplessness and Kidney Troubles in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

Allan's Mills, Portneuf Co., Quebec, April 26.—(Special)—That years do not make a person old if perfect health is that person's portion is shown in the case of Mrs. Eustache Tremblay, of this place.

"I am a new woman. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it," Mrs. Tremblay explains. "Yes, I am sixty-one years old. But now that the headaches, from which I suffered are gone, my Kidney trouble has disappeared and I can sleep at night. I do not feel my age. Yes, it was Dodd's Kidney Pills and nothing else that took away my pains and aches and made me a new woman."

Perfect health means perpetual youth. And perfect health can only be obtained by keeping the mainspring of health, the Kidneys, in order. The one sure way to do this is to use the old reliable Kidney cure, Dodd's Kidney Pills. It never fails

The Lure of the Sea Shore

From time immemorial the sea has been calling the children of men. Sea faring men are lost ashore. The dwellers of inland cities and towns hearing the call come down to enjoy the cool breezes that are found by the sea. There is always life and action, even the coming and going of the tide, the eternal restlessness have a lure. People are looking for a change of scene and new places to visit each year, and Canadians cannot do better than to spend their summer this year at Long Island Sound in the vicinity of New London, Conn. The Grand Trunk Railway System will make it easy for their patrons as a new train service will be inaugurated. A handsome booklet entitled "The Seashore," has just been issued and can be secured for the asking, from A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Room 308 Union Depot, Toronto.

W.C.T.U. TO HOLD MEDAL CONTEST

Mrs. Payne Read Paper on the Temperance Movement

The local W.C.T.U. held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Ellis, 708 Harvey street, Friday afternoon. After devotional exercises and routine business, the union discussed plans of work. It was decided to hold what White Ribbon women call a medal contest.

An excellent paper was read by Miss Payne, giving a short history of the temperance movement, from which we quote the following:

"The W.C.T.U. was organized at Cleveland, U.S., in 1874. In 1907 it had branches in every State of the Union, with an aggregate membership of 350,000. Through the splendid work of Francis Willard the organization became international with branches in some fifty countries, and a total membership of over half a million."

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the hostess.

The next meeting will be under the department of "Moral Education and Mothers' Meetings," and will be held in the room over the Public Library. All mothers will be welcome to this meeting—last Friday in May.

COMBINED CHOIRS DELIGHTED LARGE AUDIENCE

Peterborough singers from the choirs of St. John's and All Saints' gave a two hours' choral program in Christ Church, Norwood, last night to a crowded congregation. The chancel space being limited, twelve less than at first proposed, made the journey, but a splendid presentation was made by the choirs, and at a reception given to them in the rectory, the leading members of the congregation, voiced by the Rev. Mr. Pickford and Mr. Cuffe, expressed their deep gratitude to the singers for their program.

The main work was Stainer's "Crucifixion," but in addition two choruses from Mendelssohn's "Come Let Us Sing," were given, the climax number being Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus."

Messrs. H. W. Morphet and G. E. Chandler, tenors, and Mr. A. J. Flowers and Mr. Spence, bass, sang the solo work finely, and the unaccompanied quartette was sung by voices from both choirs. Mr. R. J. Devey conducted, assisted at the organ by Miss Flowers.

THE rich browns and the lifey greys in spring and summer fabrics are shown in the new Semi-ready models.

It's a pleasure to show them.

Most of the good mills in the great English woollen district have contributed their best patterns.

Semi-ready buyers are in England the year round, and because they represent the highest type of tailoring in Canada all the latest designs from the woolen artists are first laid before them for approval.

That is why we get such a superior lot of patterns—oftimes a whole season ahead of the retail tailoring trade. Suits at $35, $30 and $25, and others equally well tailored at $15, $18 and $20.

There's a book here for you, entitled "Sir!"

Jack Frost's Master
McCLARY'S
"Sunshine" Furnace

Jack Frost had the time of his life last winter. He warred against all elements and froze them stiff. Lakes and rivers he turned into solids; he also put a razor-like edge on the wind. He even bit into steel rails making them as brittle as burned glass. Outside, Jack reigned supreme, but his chilly majesty was licked to a frazzle inside by "The Understudy of the Sun"—McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace.

Think of the past winter when the mercury swung timidly below the freezing point—not for a day or a week, but for months at a time. How you shovelled coal, and how you talked about the appetite of that poor old furnace in the cellar. It simply ate up coal and then fell down when it came to heating the house evenly and comfortably.

McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace makes the most of very little fuel, and distributes a much greater percentage of heat throughout house than the ordinary furnace.

Ashes cannot bank up between the active fire and the walls of the Fire-pot in the "Sunshine" Furnace. It is an absolute guarantee of balmy June weather in the home, when Jack Frost's icy garments are jingling in the Arctic cold without. That's why the "Sunshine" is called "The Ice King's Master." The "Sunshine" Furnace is an excellent investment—It will last a life-time with ordinary care—and return you a handsome interest on the investment every year by the actual saving it effects.

Now, we want you to do us a favor—we want you to call on the McClary agent and ask him to prove every claim we make for the "Sunshine" Furnace—ask him to prove every claim true.

Ask him to show you—The fuel-saving features of the "Sunshine" — The mechanical reasons which make balmy healthy June weather possible in the home when Jack Frost is in his element without—Why the "Sunshine" saves money which other furnaces burn up, and—Why the largest makers of furnaces in the British Empire so amply and so fearlessly guarantee the "Sunshine"—The Understudy of the Sun.

Your decision will please us and pay you. If you don't know the McClary agent, write us at our nearest address.

FINES OF $10 AND $25 IN BLACKLIST CASE

Jas. Wilson Drank, and Albert Crouter Had to Pay the "Shot."

James Wilson appeared in the Police Court this morning and pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk while on the black list. He was not like the ordinary blacklister who forgets where he obtained the liquor but admitted he got it from Albert Crouter. His Worship imposed a fine of $10.

PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

Albert Crouter was charged with supplying, to which he pleaded, not guilty.

James Wilson was the first witness called, and testified that he had placed money on the table which indicated liquor was to be purchased with it. Liquor was brought into the house and Albert Crouter opened the bottle, and everybody present had a drink. There were other bottles in the house and all had a jollification.

Mrs. Pearl Wright was next witness, but she did not see any drink in the house, although their was liquor on hand. She remained in the house about 15 or 20 minutes in the morning but was not present in the afternoon. She returned at night, but did not see any liquor, although her husband was under influence of liquor that day.

Brock Wright gave evidence to the effect that he had been in Crouter's house and had a few drinks. He had purchased one flask for Crouter, from which they all had a drink, but did not see Wilson get any liquor from Crouter or anyone else.

Albert Crouter, the defendant denied giving liquor, to Wilson. They had a few drinks in the house, he said, and he poured them out. He was positive he did not give Jim Wilson a drink. When questioned by the Chief, he said Wilson came there the night of the 25th, and stayed in his house all night, and in the morning Wilson had a small amount of whiskey in a flask, but did not obtain it from him.

Magistrate Dumble considered the evidence enough to convict Crouter and fined him $25 or 30 days in jail. His Worship remarked that a man that helped another to destruction must suffer the consequence.

CITY IS SHORT OF RECREATION GROUNDS FOR THE BOYS

With the ball-playing season on the verge of breaking, and with the many irresistable calls for out-of-door recreation, the question arises of suitable playing grounds in the city. No one, who is conversant with the city's condition in this respect, will say that it is well provided with suitable and convenient grounds, when sport loving youth can readily resort to engage in any of the games of the season and particularly the game of baseball. In the western part of the city, the growth has been particularly rapid and houses have sprung up on formerly vacant lots, which means that the young lads of that section are deprived of their previous recreation fields. The boys of the neighborhood feel these trying conditions, and many of them are complaining bitterly.

Tis true there are some fields which are ideal in every way, but they are not numerous, neither are they open to you to disport at will The owners will rent them, but it is rather hard that the users, especially school boys should be forced to pay for their fun, as school boys possess very little money. The boys in the West End want a place if it can be found, where they may congregate, without disturbing the neighborhood, and which will be allowed them free of charge. If the city, or any benevolently disposed possessor of a suitable property, will place it at the disposal of the young people, they will be assured of an everlasting debt of gratitude.

PROGRAM FOR OPENING OF THE NEW PROTESTANT HOME

The formal opening of the new building, which will take place Tuesday, 30th, at eight p.m., promises to be a function worthy of the splendid efforts of the directors, and the imposing and well equipped building on the hill off Anson street.

The public are cordially invited to attend the opening and inspect the building.

The short dedicatory service is in charge of the Ministerial Association of the city.

The band of the 57th Regiment and Mr. Gliddon's orchestra will discourse sweet music during the evening which will add greatly to the pleasure of the visitors.

His Worship Mayor Bradburn will occupy the chair and short addresses will be given by Lieutenant-Governor Colonel Sir John Gibson, K.C.M.G., Dr. Bruce Smith, His Honor Judge Roger and E. A. Peck, M.P.P., J. H. Burnham, M.P., will give a short history of the Home.

It is expected that Senator Cox, who never loses interest in Peterborough, will be present.

A vocal solo by Miss Howell and violin music by Miss Palmer will be attractive features of the evening.

PASSED OVER COURSE TAKEN BY THE TITANIC

Another Large Party of Newcomers in Charge of P. H. Collings.

One of the busiest men in the city to-day, was immigration officer, G.H. Howson, whose office on Water st., has been a great agricultural rendezvous ever since last night. All types of tillers of the soil were represented, some dressed in serviceable homespuns and a white collar, and others in their working clothes and high boots, but each and all with eyes sharply peeled for farm help. Saturday is always a hustling day for the officer, as it is the most convenient time for farmers to make their weekly trip to the city. The extraordinary brisk business to-day, however, was caused by the arrival last night of a party of forty-seven Old Countrymen, all experienced farm hands and chaperoned by Mr. P.H. Collings, of the firm of Collings and Company, licensed passage brokers, North Finchley, London, Eng. It will be remembered that Mr. Collins brought a party to Canada last summer, and was interviewed by the Review, an account of which appeared in an immigration publication in the Old Country.

Genial and conversational as ever, Collings chatted for a few moments this afternoon with a Review representative. He stated that his party were snapped up like the proverbial hotcakes, immediately on their arrival. A bunch of farm employers were at the G.T.R. station last evening as the train pulled in, and eighteen out of the forty-seven were taken off with their future employers without any delay. The remainder were placed this morning and yet this afternoon, the office of the immigration office was filled by other farmers, all clamoring like the old maid for a man. It was a case of first come first served, the early bird getting the worm.

ROUGH PASSAGE

Mr. Collings stated that his boat, the "Royal George" had a very rough and disagreeable voyage. She sailed from Bristol on Wednesday, April 17, and being one of the speediest boats of the C.N.R., docked at Halifax, just one week later on April 24th, despite the rough sea. She sailed just one day after the news reached port of the disaster to the "Titanic" and Mr. Collings stated that a heavy spirit prevaded all on the vessel on her trip over.

OVER TITANIC COURSE

The captain stated that their course was directly over over where the "Titanic" and several pieces of wreckage were noticed on the ocean surface, such as chairs and pieces of floatsam. The passengers also saw eight large icebergs, but the vessel gave them as wide a berth as possible. The weather was cold and disagreeable.

Mr. Collings intends to remain in Canada til the latter end of May, leaving for Toronto this afternoon. He is greatly impressed with Canada, and loses no opportunity of boosting it in his home land. He states that this will be a record year in the numbers of immigrants who will seek the shores of Canada, and he intends to keep Mr. Howson as busy as possible.

BANK CLERKS, TOO.

He expressed surprise at the number of bank clerks, about fifty in all, who were on board the "Royal George," destined for Canada, to fill banking offices. The young men were mostly Scotch. There were also on board about three hundred carpenters and joiners who were going through to the West.

BUTTER SOLD AT THIRTY CENTS; COULD BE BOUGHT AT TWENTY

There was a large market this morning and a good deal of buying was done in the butter and eggs line. A large number of young pigs for raising were on sale and went at prices ranging from $6 to $8 a pair.

The farmers from all directions report that the roads have improved wonderfully in the last three days. Some of them stated that the roads on Saturday last were in the worst condition that they had ever seen them. All report now that only an occasional mud hole has to be crossed, and that the driving is not too bad. One man from eight miles west of the city, in Monaghan, said that there was no trouble at all making the drive now, although at the first of the week it was a very bad travelling. Farmers from Smith, Otonabee and from six miles up the river road, said that except for the scattered mud holes the driving was good, and if the present dry windy weather continues the roads will be completely dried up by next Saturday.

An example of the peculiar conditions that sometimes prevail at the market is illustrated by the fact that one woman was selling butter at 20c, a pound, and another not more than ten feet away at 30c. a pound, and yet the latter was selling her goods just as rapidly as the former. Both were aware of the price the other was selling at, yet neither offered to make a charge.

WHY SHOULD NOT OLD PEOPLE RETAIN THEIR YOUTHFUL VIGOR

No Reason Why Men And Women Of Sixty, Seventy And Eighty Should Not Be Well—The Secret Of Happy Old Age

"Fruit-a-tives", The Famous Medicine Made Of Fresh Fruit Juices, Again Proves Its Great Value In Curing Kidney Trouble.

Old age pays the cost of living. Few men and women of fifty, sixty and seventy are free of Kidney Trouble. Hard work, mental strain and general debility, tell in the long run. And many men and women show they have Kidney Trouble by suffering with pain in the back, headaches, rheumatism, sciatica, bladder disease.

To such people "Fruit-a-tives" has proved one of the wonders of the age—and the most remarkable discovery of the century in modern medical science. This fruit medicine has performed hundreds of cures where the sufferer had been told that the case was incurable.

Take, for instance, Mr. Geo. W. Barkley, a prosperous farmer and one of the leading citizens of Dundas County, Ontario.

At seventy-six, he is the picture of health—with the vigorous actions and the sprightly step of a man of fifty.

Yet for twenty years, he suffered with Kidney Trouble. He took "Fruit-a-tives" and it cured him.

CHESTERVILLE, ONT., JAN. 25th, 1911

"For over twenty years I have been troubled with Kidney Disease, and the doctors told me they could do me no good, and said I would be a sufferer all the rest of my life. Nearly a year ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives". I have been using them all the time since and am glad to say that I am cured. I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible."

GEO. W. BARKLEY.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit, and is the only one that acts directly on the kidneys. It cures. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

SPORTS AT Y. M. C. A.

The Brownie basketball team and the Nemos, of the city league, will play two games next week for the Intermediate championship. The first game will be played on Monday night, the second on Friday. A good exhibition of the game is assured on both nights.

The swimming campaign is progressing very favorably. Over fifty boys have been out every day in the past week, and already about twenty have qualified for the swimmers' buttons. A number of men are taking advantage of the opportunity also, among whom are some who are making a keen race for the buttons. Fifty feet is the distance to be navigated by those who would carry off rewards.

FOOTBALL

A meeting of the Peterborough Church Football League was held last night at the Y.M.C.A. The business was not proceeded with because all the churches were not represented. If the clubs wish this league to be a success it is necessary for the representatives to be present on Wednesday evening when another meeting will be held.

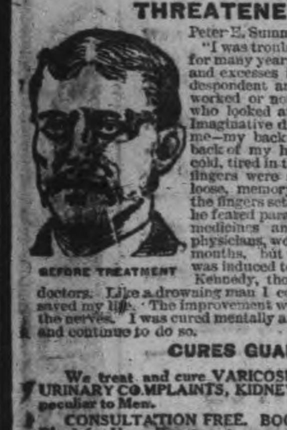
NERVOUS·DEBILITY

OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT will cure you and make a man of you. Under its influence the brain becomes active, the blood purified so that all pimples, blotches and ulcers heal up; the nerves become strong as steel, so that nervousness, bashfulness and despondency disappear; the eyes become bright, the face full and clear, energy returns to the body, and the moral, physical and mental systems are invigorated; all drains cease—no more vital waste from the system. You feel yourself a man and know marriage cannot be a failure. Don't let quacks and fakirs rob you of your hard earned dollars.

NO NAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS



BEFORE TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

A Large Egg

A hen belonging to Mr. John Walpole, of Glenvale, probably holds the world's record for big eggs. This morning Mr. Walpole laid on the managing editor's desk an egg which by actual and impartial measurement sized up to 9 1-2 inches around lengthwise and 7 1-2 in. around the middle. This egg was laid by a yearling hen, a cross between a Wyandotte and Plymouth Rock. The hen in question appears to be a valuable accession to Mr. Walpole's live stock, because she has frequently produced eggs of abnormal size.—Kingston Standard.

GIANT SWORDFISH.

Monsters Fifteen Feet Long Armed With Three Foot Weapons.

A queer fish is the swordfish. It is found in the tropical and subtropical zones of both the eastern and western hemispheres. Some of the tropical species are of enormous size and measure from twelve to fifteen feet in length, with swords at least three feet long.

The sword is much the shape of a cone somewhat flattened, the end sharply pointed. It is smooth on the top and sides, but the under part is rough. It is really an elongation of the bones of the upper jaw and is possessed of very great strength, for with these weapons they have been known to pierce the copper sheathing of vessels and heavy plates and timbers, but, although they can drive the sword far into these substances, they cannot draw them out, so break them off and swim away without them.

A large fin extends nearly the length of the back of the creature, which is folded back when the fish is swimming in order that its progress may not be impeded if speed is desired, but when quietly swimming it is often erected and acts as a sail to carry it through the water. The swordfish is very aggressive in its disposition and will often assail fish much larger than itself. Even the whale is not exempt from its attacks. The food of the swordfish consists of smaller fish, which it kills by stabbing them with its sword. There is quite a large business done in swordfishing, as the flesh is used for food. The larger species are caught by harpooning, the smaller in nets.

Jenny Lind In the Pork House.

When Jenny Lind made her tour of America in the early fifties under the management of P. T. Barnum, Madison was the only Indiana city in which she would sing. The city still boasts of how the diva stopped there on her way down the Ohio river from Cincinnati to Louisville. The city had no auditorium large enough, so one of the largest pork warehouses was emptied and scoured and filled with flowers to remove any lingering odor. Men and women traveled from all parts of the state to hear Jenny Lind sing in the pork house, some of them spending from three to six days on the journey.—Argonaut.

TROUBLE WITH THE FIRE CHIEF AND FIREMEN

The Guelph Herald says:—The disquiet which has been rumored in the fire brigade for some time has apparently reached a head, where the Council will have to take the question up and decide upon a course of action. There have been rumors for some time that all was not well between the chief and his men, both regulars and volunteers, and, as related the other day in the Herald, an investigation was proposed by the majority of the committee, and temporarily abandoned when the city solicitor reported that the authority of the council must first be obtained.

PETITION FROM FIREMEN.

The question was not allowed to rest, however, and a climax has been reached, it is reported by a petition which has been handed Mayor Thorp, which virtually means that either the members of the brigade are to resign or else Chief Finch must go.

Owing to the reluctance of all parties to speak, a copy of the petition could not be seen. Inasmuch as Mayor Thorp would not deny receiving it, however, it would appear that some such a communication has been received. The firemen are not placing the city in any jeopardy whatever; their action appears to be more with a view to securing some definite action with regard to removing conditions complained of. They are not deserting their positions by any means, and the work will go on just the same as usual, so there need be no alarm as to the city being prepared so far as any fires are concerned.

ALL SIGNED IT

The petition is said to have been signed by every man on the brigade but two—naturally the chief was not asked to sign, and one of the new men was also not requested because he has only just gone on the force. It includes not only the regular brigade, but the volunteers. The communication is said to complain of exisiting conditions under which the men labor, and the council is asked to effect a remedy by the 1st of July, otherwise the resignations of the signors are to be considered. It is said to practically and respectfully request the Council to adopt one of the two courses—let the chief go or the firemen will retire.

MAY LEAD TO INVESTIGATION

Just what action the Council will take is difficult to comprehend. An investigation seems the proper course so that both sides can be heard. In fact, it is understood that this is what Chief Finch desires.

SOUR RISINGS FROM STOMACH

Those Who Experience Fullness and Pain After Meals, Stomach Disorders, and Indigestion, Should Read Below.

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had an attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels, for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness, and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. Today I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

A NEW DEPARTURE

The announcement that the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. will this summer begin to run a series of Observation Car Services on the Austrian State Railways through the Tyrol, marks an epoch in the growth of the importance of Canada in the old world. Under a contract with the Austrian State Railways, the Canadian Pacific has arranged to build several observation cars in Austria on Canadian Pacific plans. The design is that of Mr. Vaughan, head of the C.P.R. Angus shops at Montreal, who has made a personal visit to Austria to study local conditions. They will differ slightly from the type as used in Canada, and each car will have platforms at both ends. The cars will be the longest four-axle cars in Europe. They will have a very spacious interior, and will seat thirty-two passengers. There will be accommodation for a typist, whose services will be at the disposal of the passengers; and an up-to-date library with all the latest magazines, just as on the C.P.R. transcontinental trains, will be among the features of the cars.

Both Austria and the Canadian Pacific Railway will benefit from the consolidation of the new scheme. The attention of vast numbers of travelling Canadians and Americans will be diverted from other parts of Europe to Austria, not only to see that interesting country but to learn how these Canadian Pacific observation cars fulfil their mission. There will be three observation services to begin with. By arrangement with the Swiss Government, the first of these these will run between Zurich and Innsbruck over the Arlberg Route via Landeck. The second will be between Innsbruck and Vienna via Zell-am-Zee and Salzburg. The third will be from Salzburg to Trieste over the Tauern and Karawanken Railways by way of Badgastein, Villach, Veldes and the Valley of the Isonzo. This last is a new route only recently completed by the Austrian Government, which has spent immense sums of money to provide a short cut from the north to Trieste, its greatest seaport.

The Austrian State Railway is particularly well favored in the country it feeds as regards scenery, and seen as it will be under the most favorable auspices in these new C.P.R. observation cars, the beauty of the land will be a most interesting part of any European tour.

$100 FOR TITANIC RELIEF FUND CONTRIBUTED BY CITY COUNCIL

Subscription Lists Will be Left at the Banks and Newspaper Offices—Fund For Bereaved Families Nearing $1,000,000

"That the Council establish a relief fund for those dependant upon the unfortunate victims of the Titanic disaster, and that contribution lists be left at the various banks and at the offices of the daily newspapers, the Mayor, Ald. Gordon, and the City Treasurer be the trustees of the fund, and that the City Council head the list with $100."—Carried.

The above recommendation was brought in last evening by Ald. Johnston, at the meeting of the committee appointed to enquire into the creation of a relief fund for the aid of those who lost their only means of support in the Titanic disaster. The funds were mainly, Ald. Gordon stated, to alleviate want among the widows and orphans and those dependant upon the crew of the vessel which went down. There are something like nine hundred families altogether dependant, who chiefly reside at Southampton and Liverpool. Ald. Gordon reported that close to one million dollars had already been subscribed. He was of the opinion that the steamship company might eventually be involved in numerous suits for damages laid by survivors, and that the judgments secured in that manner would assist in the fund. Under the Ontario Compensation Act each family would be entitled to $1,500, which amounts if applied in the case of the families bereaved would aggregate a very large sum.

Ald. Anderson saw no reason why the city should not take her share in assisting in the fund, but considered it unnecessary that the city should contribute an abnormally large amount. It was a case of where every little bit helped. It is not likely that the motion will have to go before the Council for endorsement, the majority of the members being present last evening, and no dissenting vote against the recommendation of what the city should contribute was taken.

Those present at the meeting were Ald. Gordon, Mayor Bradburn, Ald. Morgan, Anderson, Brown, Johnston and Graham.

WATER COMMISSIONERS WANT 10 PER CENT REVENUE ASSURED BEFORE ADDING HYDRANTS

A communication from the Water Commissioners asking the Fire Water and Light Committee to place two hydrants on Bonacord street, evoked a spirited little argument last evening at the meeting of the latter. The commissioners will not proceed with construction work at the street mentioned until they are assured that they will derive their usual ten per cent. revenue from the work, and two hydrants on this street are required to obtain it. Out of the discussion which followed, several of the committee remarked upon the evident unfairness of residents just outside of the city's boundaries, taking full advantage of the corporation water mains, and yet paying their taxes to the township. Byersville was referred to, as being an example.

Ald. Brown, however, contended that Byersville had actually paid more for their water than city dwellers, as they met the cost of laying and digging their own water mains.

Mayor Bradburn failed to be convinced. He considered that the responsibility largely could be laid at the door of the commissioners. He could not see the justice in having the city load themselves with expenses, simply because the Water Commissioners refused to give water service.

AN EXPENSIVE SERVICE.

Ald. Johnston referred to Mount St. Joseph, which paid $800 to get water service to their institution in order to allow the Water Commissioners their ten per cent. revenue. The Brinton Carpet Company had done the same. They in return were guaranteed fire protection and other privileges.

Ald. Johnston said he didn't feel disposed to criticise the workings of the Water Commissioners, and thought they had a good system. Ald. Brown didn't agree with him on this point.

It was decided to have the chairman interview the Water Commissioners respecting the placing of hydrants on Bonacord street.

TWELVE HYDRANTS.

A petition for a hydrant on Dufferin street was left for the chairman, to decide on its location. The chairman has provided this year for twelve hydrants and these are the first petitions received.

The matter of placing incandescent lights at several points in the city, where they are badly needed, was left over, until the committee make a tour of investigation inside of a couple of weeks. Two places mentioned as in urgent need of better illumination were, Concession street and Thomas street.

SMITH STREET CURVE.

The possibility of improving the street railway curve at Smith and George was again in the limelight.

It appears that any alterations at this point offer considerable of a snag. The chairman of the Board of Works and the City Engineer personally inspected the roadway and track at the point, and the engineer pointed out that if the track is moved out to allow a wider and gentler turn, it will interfere with the width of right of way regulations. Mr. J. H. Munro, of the Radial Railway Company was there at the time of the inspection. It is possible to shift the car track farther west but this will create a danger point for equestrian traffic. At present the curve is too close to the curb on the east side.

No definite action was adopted in the matter.

WHO OWNS "JERRY."

Ald. Buller brought up the question of the ownership of "Jerry" the horse. The steed properly belongs to the Board of Works and is required for street cleaning operations. Half the time, said Ald. Buller, it is used as relief horse at the fire hall. If this was persisted in Ald. Buller said another horse would have to be purchased for the Board of Works.

Ald. Johnston promised that in future "Jerry" would be at the disposal of its owners any time.

MR. J. L. HUGHES GAVE FINE ADDRESS TO Y.M.C.A. BOYS AT THEIR ANNUAL SPREAD

The members of the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. held their annual banquet last evening at the Y.M.C.A. and had a most enjoyable time, and the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. deserve great credit for the manner they assisted the department in giving the boys a good time.

Mr. R. F. Downey occupied the chair. He made a few remarks urging the boys to conduct themselves in a gentlemanly way and read a letter from Mayor Bradburn who could not attend on account of important business. In the letter the Mayor wished the boys every success and praised them on the good work they were doing in the city.

Mr. Downey then introduced Inspector Hughes who was the main speaker of the evening.

BOYS WERE COMPLIMENTED.

Mr. Hughes complimented the boys on their splendid Department and presented to M. Huycke a shield which he had won for being the champion all round athlete in a meet which was held in the Y.M.C.A. a short time previous. Mr. Hughes is a strong believer in true sport, because he believes a boy cannot be bright in his studies if he is not physically developed. Time is not wasted which is spent in sport as it gives a man power to do a thing in great speed which he could never achieve from a book. He mentioned the play grounds of cities and was sorry to see Peterborough had very few places for the boys to play and hoped that the matter would be considered and steps taken to give large play grounds to the boys of this city.

Mr. Hughes addressed those present on a talk to the "Fathers and Sons." "Elders should be reverent to their boys," he said, "and not have them look at you as if you were some superior being to be feared, but one who he can consult in trouble and who will help him to carry out his plans which he forms."

Speaking directly to the fathers present, he said, "You will never find out what great power is concealed in your boys if you do not get things which will bring it to the surface as every boy is the possessor of some great power. The boy is not a little man but just a boy and it is foolishness to think he is anything else. Let him be what he wishes because he has a life to live and it is impossible to make him a minister, doctor or teacher if his power is not centred on one of these, although many parents make this mistake and try to get the boy to be something what he is really not. Interest him in something, in modern thought and get the material for him to carry out his plans and if necessary help him but do not in any way plan for him. He never objects to a father's guidance if the father is decent with him and allows the boy to work out his own salvation.

"Drill is most beneficial to boys and it will alter their character when they are between the age of 11 and 16, although many people think it money wasted to buy new uniforms and rifles for the cadets," continued the speaker. "I am sorry to see that the Peterborough Cadets have not uniforms and I think steps should be taken to obtain them for the boys as the work of the cadets cannot be successfully carried on because a boy in a nice new uniform takes interest in his work, while a boy without one does not make a success as it is not attracting to him. It is not our object to make quarrelsome men out of these cadets but to develop manly men who will defend our country.

THE SAVING HABIT.

"Get the boy interested in saving money which he earns himself and this will make him independent and not always borrowing money which is a very bad habit any boy can acquire. There are different methods by which a boy can earn money and it learns him to be a business man and look after his own interests.

VALUE OF KIND WORDS.

"I do not believe in keeping a boy from bad company because there is no boy in the world, although his armour is wickedness, that cannot be made better by treating him right. People look at the bad boy in scorn and he naturally begins to think he is really bad and does not attempt to do better, where a few kind words or advice would help that boy to be a great man of the world.

"There is no other question in the way of training your boys; be their partner and friend, give them things by which to work out their plans and you will find the boys will derive great benefit from this when they find they have someone interested in their work and they will make a success of life.

Judge Huycke moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Hughes which was seconded by Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., and the boys showed their appreciation by a hearty hand clapping.

Mr. Hughes replied that he was very grateful and appreciated the interest the boys had shown. He hoped the things that he had said would get into their lives and they would live along that line as it is in this manner we climb the hill of progress. He extended a hearty invitation to those present that if they were in Toronto to call and see him at the Toronto University.

The banquet was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem and the boys were well satisfied with their annual gathering.

THE AD. CLUB

The final arrangements in connection with the Ad. Club dinner on Tuesday evening, April 30th, when Mr. Fritz Kuhn, of Ottawa, an expert on publicity and store management, will address the local business men, are yet to be completed. It is desired that accommodation sufficient to enable all those who wish to hear Mr. Kuhn to signify the same by 'phoning on Monday morning, the secretary, Mr. J. McNichol, at 1333, or Mr. C. W. Hardy, convenor of the program committee, at 606, in order that reservations may be provided.

The committee wish it to be understood that all local business men and others, whether members of the club or not, are welcome to be present to hear Mr. Kuhn talk on "Increasing the efficiency of the store service, to back up local advertising and make it most profitable.

57TH REGIMENT N. C. O.'S CLASS

Sergt. Instructor McKay arrived here to-day to take up instructional work in connection with the 57th Regiment. A number of classes will be formed at once for officers, non-commissioned officers, recruits, and in musketry.

On Monday evening, 29th inst., at 8 p.m., all unqualified or provisional N. C.O's, and privates who are recommended by their company commanders are requested to be at the armories, to be enrolled in the non-com. officers' class.

Pumping Station

The chairman and some of the members of the city Board of Works made a visit of inspection yesterday afternoon to the south end pumping station. Several minor improvements it is understood, will be required before the station is in first class working order.

LEAP YEAR BASKET SOCIAL AT PARK STREET

The Leap Year Basket Social held last night in the parlors of the Park street Baptist church was a grand success, socially, musically and financially. A good number of dainty baskets and prettily decorated both outside and inside were bought by the young men present at the close of the program. Deacon Kemp had charge of this department. The pastor of the church occupied the chair, and the following program was rendered in an able manner by all those who took part:

A GOOD REMEDY FOR LITTLE ONES

Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine a mother can give her little ones. They are absolutely safe, being guaranteed by a government analyst to contain no opiates or other harmful drugs. They cure constipation and indigestion, expel worms, make teething easy, in fact cure all the minor ills of little ones. Concerning them Mrs. Murray Marshall, Zephyr Ont., says: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my children and always with the best of results. I can recommend them as a good remedy for little ones to every mother." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MISSION CIRCLE SUCCESSFUL WITH SUPPER

The Young Ladies' Mission Circle of the George street Methodist Church gave a successful "5c supper" last night in the Sunday school of the George street church. The supper started promptly at five minutes after six and shortly after that time the tables that had been provided for the hungry comers were fully occupied.

A novel idea was used in paying for the supper. It was necessary to part with five cents to enter the room, then four courses were provided and for each course, appetizing and irresistible, five cents was the price.

The number who took advantage of the tasty offering was large and the young ladies in charge of the affair realised a handsome profit, which they will devote to missions.

The Sunday school orchestra rendered a number of pleasing selections during the progress of the supper.

Homeseeker's and Settler's Train to Camrose, Edmonton and Western Canada.

WHY A WATCH WEARS OUT
Neglect is responsible for most Watches going wrong. A Watch should be thoroughly overhauled, at least once a year. Dust collecting in a Watch causes it to run dry, the grit will then wear away the delicate bearings. SIMPLE WAY TO PRESERVE EGGS
Put Them Into a Solution of Water Glass

With the continued drop in the price of eggs the wise woman is planning to put down her next winter's supply of this important household commodity, that she may not be caught napping and be obliged to pay a high figure for eggs when cold weather comes again.

First of all she must have the eggs as fresh as possible; in fact, if only a few days old the eggs will be better, when used. Get a crate from some one on whose word you can rely absolutely.

The water glass method of preserving is probably the most generally satisfactory one, for eggs kept in this solution retain their original flavor to a remarkable degree. The water glass may be obtained at most department stores. In purchasing it, it is well to ask the proportion of water to use with that particular water glass, for this mucilaginous substance varies in strength. Usually 16 parts water to one part water glass is the proportion recommended.

See that the water is boiled and then perfectly cold. Have a large utensil for packing away the eggs. If many dozen are to be preserved, a small sized ash can with a tight fitting cover is as good as anything, and the cost is not great. Crock jars are excellent, but unless one has a supply of these, the cost is an item to be reckoned with.

Whatever utensil is used, see that it is absolutely clean, so that the solution is not contaminated. Proceed to put in your eggs; it is not necessary to pack them pointed side up; simply pack them in, taking care that none is broken.

Make the solution of the cold boiled water and water glass and pour it over the eggs so that there is a sufficient quantity to cover the top of the eggs by at least two inches. Put the eggs in a cool but not freezing place. This done the eggs will keep for months and will surprise you by the way that the white and yolk separate and beat up when the eggs are opened.

It is not necessary to put down all the eggs at once. Make the water glass solution, pour it into the receptacle on what eggs you put down, and then add more eggs as you will; if necessary, add more to the solution the one thing essential is to see that the eggs are covered to a depth of two inches with the liquid.

Before using any of the eggs, wash off the shell with cold water.

A trial of preserving eggs in water glass will convince the most skeptical that it is a worth while economy.

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM
Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pain, But the Trouble Lies In the Blood.

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild to cold, the raw, damp winds start the aches and twinges, or in the more extreme cases, the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism. The trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be driven out. Liniments and rubbing may give temporary relief, but cannot possibly cure the trouble. The sufferer is only wasting time and money with this kind of treatment and all the time, the trouble is becoming more deeply rooted—harder to cure.

There is just one speedy cure for rheumatism—Dr. Williams Pink Pills They act directly on the impure, acid tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and thus root out the cause of the rheumatism. Here is strong proof of the above statements Mrs. Robt. Luffman, Midland, Ont., says—"About three years ago, my grandson, Robt. Luffman was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism. He became so bad he could only walk when someone helped him about. One arm he had to carry in a sling, and we felt sure he would be a cripple for life. The trouble also affected his heart. The doctor said his blood was turning to water and we had little hope for his recovery. The medicine the doctor gave him did not do more than soothe the pain a little, then he would be as bad as ever. On a former occasion Dr. Williams' Pink Pills had cured my daughter of rheumatism, and we finally decided to try them in Robert's case. After the use of three or four boxes there was a slight improvement and he continued taking the pills, until he had used 12 boxes, when the trouble had completely disappeared, and he has not been afflicted with it since."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOW MUCH WAS THE GROCER SHORT
Puzzle for Some Clear Headed Person to Solve

A well dressed, smooth talking young man entered a grocery store and asked for a five cent jar of mustard. He gave a ten dollar bill in payment, and upon receiving his change remarked that he thought he had handed the grocer a one dollar bill.

"'You certainly are an honest man,' he said. "You might have given me only ninety-five cents in change, and I would not have discovered the mistake."

Then the customer produced a one dollar bill, placed it with four of the dollar bills. "I can do better in change and asked the grocer if he would mind letting him have a five dollar bill for the five one dollar bills. The man behind the counter threw a five dollar bill on the counter.

"Here, I'm robbing you of all your change," said the customer picking up the five dollar bill, and the five one dollar bills. "I can do better than this. Just let me have my ten dollar bill back, and I'll let you have this five dollar bill and the one dollar bills."

The change was made and the customer left the store. Later the grocer, in going over his cash, discovered a shortage. He said he was not sure, but thought he was out about $5.05. Another customer insisted he was shy $9, and the clerk at the store to whom the report was made, figured the shortage to be $6.

CRITICISM EASY

It is easy to sit in the sunshine,
And talk to the man in the shade,
It is easy to float in a well-trimmed boat
And point out the places to wade.

It is easy to sit in your carriage,
And counsel the man on foot,
But get down and walk and you'll change your talk
As you feel the peg in your boot.

It is easy to tell the toiler
How he can carry his pack,
But no one can rate a burden's weight
Until it has been on his back.

The upcurled mouth of pleasure
Can preach of sorrow's worth,
But give it a slip, and a wryer lip
Was never made on earth.

HOW TO KEEP FLOWERS FRESH

Proper care of cut flowers will double their lease of life. Even hothouse roses usually the shortest lived of blossoms can be made to retain their beauty and fragrance for two weeks if one will take the trouble to boil the steams.

To do this set a pan of hot water on the stove, and when the water begins to boil place the stems of the flowers in the water to the depth of one inch. Hold the flowers carefully to prevent their touching the sides or bottom of the pan. Allow them to boil fifteen or twenty minutes. Remove the flowers and clip off the portions of the stems that were in the water. They are then ready to be arranged in the vase or bowl.

Many persons have poor success in keeping out flowers because they do not put fresh water into flower vases every day. The stems of the flowers should be clipped every day to enable them to take up more water. Never leave out flowers in a warm room over night. Set them in a cool place.—Kansas Industrialist.

Calls Smith a Bully.

London, April 27.—The Nation, alone, among the weekly reviews which will appear to-day, finds much that is praiseworthy in the Senatorial investigation at Washington into the Titanic disaster. The Nation says:

"It would have been a deplorable mistake to permit even a week to pass between the occurrence and its record from the mouths of survivors. If we are to get the truth, it is absolutely essential to secure as much as possible of the primary unreflected and unguarded impressions and expressions of those present at the scene."

The Saturday Review terms Senator Smith, chairman of the investigating committee, a "blustering ignoramus" and "ignorant bully," and it calls on the British Government to protect its subjects.

Canadian Heroes.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 27.—Many acts of heroism received substantial recognition yesterday in the form of money, medals, pensions, etc., when the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission announced its awards. The awards are as follows:

Canadians who shared in the awards are Norman McIntosh and Mark Cheverie, fishermen, who saved Henry Hayden, captain, and his two sons when the schooner Marcella was wrecked in Souris harbor Oct. 8, 1907. McIntosh and Cheverie each receive a bronze medal and $1,000.

Taxicab Blown to Pieces.

Paris, April 27.—By the explosion of a bomb a taxicab was blown to pieces Thursday in the Rue du Lyon, two people being injured.

The cab had just set down a fare, who hailed the cab in Montmartre, when suddenly a terrific explosion occurred.

The chauffeur was lifted from his seat and was picked up badly cut about the head. The cab was completely wrecked, fragments being hurled to a great distance.

Isn't it queer that only sensible people ever agree with you?

Chest Inflammation
Suffered From a Heavy Cold, Pleuritic Pains in Side — Constant Coughing.

"Anyone that goes through all that I suffered last winter will appreciate the value of a remedy that cures like Nerviline cured me." These are the opening words of the solemn declaration of E. P. Von Hayden, the well-known violinist of Middleton. "My work kept me out late at night, and playing in cold drafty places brought on a severe cold that settled on my chest. I had a harsh racking cough and severe pains darted through my sides and settled in my shoulders. I used different liniments, but none broke up my cold till I used Nerviline. I rubbed it on my neck, chest and shoulders, morning and night, and all the pain disappeared. Realizing that such a heavy cold had run down my system, I took Ferrozone at meals, and was completely built up and strengthened. Since using Nerviline I have no more colds or pleurisy, and enjoy perfect health."

Nerviline CURES CHEST COLDS

It's because Nerviline contains the purest and most healing essences and medicinal principles, because it has the power of sinking through the pores to the kernel of the pain—these are the reasons why it breaks up colds, cures lumbago, stiffness, neuralgia, sciatica, and rheumatism. Refuse any substitute your dealer may suggest—insist on Nerviline only. Large bottles, 50c, trial size 25c. Sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

SEGREGATED DISTRICT TO PASS FROM WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Dec. 27—"The segregated district of the city of Winnipeg has got to go go and go quick." This was the decision reached by the police commission following the murder on McFarlane street, when an unfortunate was found choked to death in bed, and following too, a sensational series of shootings and hold-ups covering several months which have placed the red light district luridly before the public.

The commission, consisting of the chairman, Controller Douglas, Police Magistrate Hugh John MacDonald, Judge Myers, Mayor Waugh and Ald. Potter, were unanimous, and seventeen women were brought up in the police court and given from two days to a week to get out of town. There are fifty-five houses in all, of which nine are empty, and last night's raid emptied five more.

They will be raided at short intervals until all have been cleaned out and the district closed up. All the women will be given a chance to leave the city, failing which they will get hard labor terms.

TITANIC GAVE INACCURATE POSITION TO HER RESCUERS

An Error of Eight Miles In Her Estimate of Where She Was Cost the Titanic Her Safety, Says Captain Moore of the Mount Temple — He Saw a Tramp Steamer Which May Have Been the One That Ignored Rockets.

Washington, April 29.—Failure to give her exact position, a great field of floating ice that offered a frigid barrier to ships hurrying to the rescue, and the mistake of her own captain in rushing at top speed through an ice-covered sea—all these combined to send the Titanic and her 1,600 victims to their watery grave in the North Atlantic. This was strongly indicated Saturday in testimony before the Senate committee investigating the ocean tragedy.

Captain James H. Moore of the steamer Mount Temple, which was hurried to the Titanic in response to wireless calls for help, told of the great stretch of field ice which held him off.

Within his view from the bridge he discerned, he said, another strange steamer, probably a tramp, and a schooner, which was making head way out of the ice. The lights of this schooner, he thought, probably were those seen by the anxious survivors of the Titanic, and which they were frantically trying to reach.

Captain Moore denounced as most "unwise" the action of the Titanic's commander in rushing at 21 knots through the night when he had been advised of the proximity of ice. The Mount Temple's commander testified that he had spent 25 years in the North Atlantic. Whenever ice was around, he said, he doubled his watch and reduced speed, and if he happened to get caught in an ice pack, he stopped his engines and drifted until he was clear.

The witness also was emphatic in his declaration that the position sent out by the Titanic was wrong. He said the ship was eight miles further eastward than its operators reported. This, he declared, he proved by observations taken the first thing in the day following the disaster.

With what virtually was a fleet of steamers within a radius of fifty miles of the Titanic, the officer said that this mistake in fixing accurately the position of the steamer was a fatal one. With icebergs and floating ice covering the northern sea, a ship of even the size of the Titanic might well be overlooked through such a variance.

J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the International Mercantile Marine Co., was much cheered by the testimony in the afternoon. Throughout the week he has had a troubled look, and during the long daily sessions he has sat silent, seldom speaking to his associates who accompanied him. Saturday, however, he listened eagerly to the accounts of his conduct at the lifeboats as told by the stewards and seamen who came in contact with him the night of the disaster. He looked pleased when Steward Crawford told how he had called for women to go in one of the boats, and had said to a woman who told him she was a stewardess, "You are a woman, take your place in the boat."

Ismay listened intently too as Steward Bright testified that he had not left the ship until after all the large lifeboats had gone and only one of two collapsible boats were left on deck. Bright had seen Ismay working with the others on the starboard collapsible boat, the last to leave the ship from that side. Bright, who left on the very last boat, the port collapsible, said he knew Ismay had not left the ship until just before the port collapsible was lowered into the water in time to et only a hundred yards from the Titanic before she went down.

AUTO BANDITS ARE KILLED

Paris, April 29.—Bonnot, the leader of an organized gang of automobile bandits, who have been terrorizing the country for months past, and Dubois, a notorious anarchist, were shot to death yesterday in the most thrilling encounter in the annals of French crime. A garage at Choisy-LeRoi, near Paris, in which the bandits had taken refuge, was blown up by dynamite after these men had kept at bay for hours a large part of the police force of Paris, a contingent of gendarmes, two companies of Republic guards and a company of engineers. Ten thousand spectators view the battle from points of vantage.

Bonnot and Dubois, after wounding two policemen yesterday, took refuge in the garage. They were trapped in the building, which was at once surrounded. Reinforcements were despatched to aid the police, composed of gendarmes, Republican guards and engineers. A battery of artillery was on the way from Versailles, when a small detachment of soldiers succeeded in placing dynamite against the structure and blowing out the front wall.

Bonnot was captured alive. He was riddled with bullets, and died on the way to a hospital. The great crowd that had gathered, with cries of death to Bonnot, almost tore the bandit from the soldiers, several of whom were injured.

FOURTH VICTIM OF BLASTING

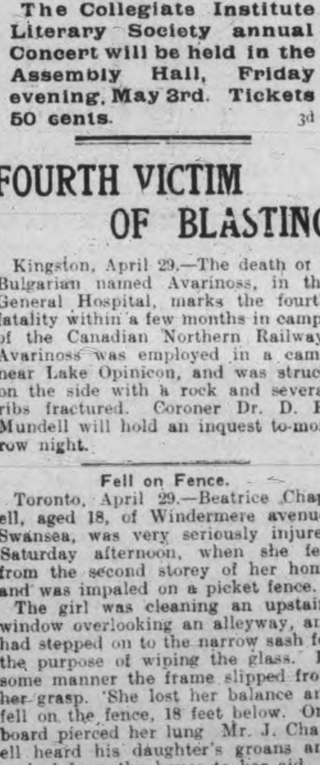
Kingston, April 29.—The death of a Bulgarian named Avarinoss, in the General Hospital, marks the fourth fatality within a few months in camps of the Canadian Northern Railway. Avarinoss was employed in a camp near Lake Opinicon, and was struck on the side with a rock and several ribs fractured. Coroner Dr. D. E. Mundell will hold an inquest to-morrow night.

Fell on Fence.

Toronto, April 29.—Beatrice Chapell, aged 18, of Windermere avenue, Swansea, was very seriously injured Saturday afternoon, when she fell from the second storey of her home and was impaled on a picket fence.

The girl was cleaning an upstairs window overlooking an alleyway, and had stepped on to the narrow sash for the purpose of wiping the glass. In some manner the frame slipped from her grasp. She lost her balance and fell on the fence, 18 feet below. One board pierced her lung Mr. J. Chapell heard his daughter's groans and rushed from the house to her aid.

Dr. Ricker of Mimico was summoned and reports that Miss Chapell's condition is very serious.



MR. J. H. BURNHAM, M.P.
He will give a short history of the Protestant Home at the formal opening of the new building to-morrow night.

LICENSE TANGLE IN HARWICK

Chatham, April 29.—The East Kent license commissioners at a meeting held in this city on Saturday granted licenses to the Walker House and the Fullarton House in Harwick Township.

Judge Dowlin recently gave a decision after a recount to the effect that local option was defeated in this township last January, from which decision, it is understood, there will be an appeal by the temperance forces.

The commissioners, however, decided to leave it with the Provincial Secretary to say finally whether the licenses should be granted.

Farm Hands Are Scarce.

Chatham, April 29.—Farm labor is scarce and hard to get at any price. Farm hands are asking as high as $35 and $40 a month and board and the farmers of Kent are fearing a late season with a dearth of help to aid them in getting their seed into the ground.

At the present time there is no legitimate excuse for any strong, healthy man being out of a job. Employers of labor are advertising broadcast for help and offering better wages than have ever been offered in this part of the province.

Rural Mail Delivery In Brant.

Brantford, April 29.—Announcement has been made here of the commencement of a rural mail delivery daily between Brantford, Mount Pleasant and Oakland.

The Brantford Carriage Co., affiliated with the Cockshutt Plow Co., has been re-organized with John Sanderson, president, and T. H. Whitehead, vice-president. An enlargement of $50,000 will be made to the factory.

ELABORATE PREPARATIONS FOR ARRIVAL OF DEATH SHIP

The Mayflower Rink Has Been Converted Into a Great Morgue and Undertakers Will Be on Hand—Special Car Has Arrived For Body of C. M. Hays and Another For Astor's Remains.

Halifax, April 29.—The cable ship Mackay-Bennett, with its burden of Titanic victims will probably arrive here to-day, and will be tied up at the Government docks, but as it will serve no good purpose to be present, friends are earnestly urged in their own interest not to visit the dock. It will probably interfere with the prompt accomplishment of the very purpose they are here for.

The identified as well as unidentified will be sent to the Mayflower Rink, which has been secured as a temporary morgue.

At that place separate partitions have been built so that the work of embalming the bodies and their preparation for identification may be conducted in privacy. As fast as this is done, they will be removed to a place for the observation of friends, and thereafter removed for shipment to destination. The bodies will be taken from the dockyard where the Mackay-Bennett will moor with no delay. A transfer company has been engaged for this purpose. The undertaking rooms will be filled first, and then the harvest of death will be carried into the rink.

It appears that the body of C. M. Hays is not on the Mackay-Bennett, but on the Minia, Capt. De Carteret of this ship confirming the previous report that he has this body. A message sent yesterday from the Minia that no bodies were taken Saturday was painful news to those who have been waiting here in the hope that the names of friends or relatives might yet appear in the list. The bodies of only a little more than ten per cent. of those who perished have been recovered, and Capt. De Carteret plainly says that he does not think many more will be found.

Vincent Astor came yesterday from New York with three private cars to claim the body of his father.

A Grand Trunk special train is here for Mr. Hays' body. Mr. Isadore is here representing Mrs. Victor Penasco, hoping to find the body of her husband. Mrs. Penasco's sister is married to the brother of Premier Canalejas of Spain, and is related to the royal family.

SENATOR COX
It is expected he will be present at the opening of the new Protestant Home.

TO SELL THE SMALL CONCERNS

Sir Wm. Mackenzie Said To Be Concentrating on Transcontinental.

Winnipeg, April 29.—It is believed here that Sir William Mackenzie has come to a decision to sell out all of his interests in the way of municipal electric lighting and municipal street railway service, not only in Winnipeg, but in Toronto, and that he has both these things now under negotiation with a very powerful syndicate who are willing to pay him his own price provided they can get the franchises good and firm as far as municipalities are concerned. It is believed that the deal for here is practically settled and that negotiations are now on for the purchase of the electric light franchises in Toronto and neighborhood, also the Toronto Railway and perhaps some the radial lines connected with the city of Toronto as well.

One proposal here is that if the deal goes through in connection with Winnipeg that the right of expropriation be secured for the city to take over the franchises at a valuation, even if they do pass to an American syndicate. In fact, the agitation will be all the stronger if the interest is acquired by outsiders.

It is further said that Sir William Mackenzie desires to put all his energy, time and money into a great transcontinental system, and that he finds the smaller things call for too much on him personally.

PEUCHEN TO GO TO ENGLAND

Toronto, April 29.—Major Arthur Peuchen of Toronto, it is understood, intends to go to England to appear before the court of enquiry appointed by the House of Commons, of which Lord Mersey is chairman, which will investigate the Titanic disaster. It was stated in Toronto yesterday that Major Peuchen had received a cable from London asking him to appear before the special court to tell his story. He will leave probably in a few days.

PROBABILITIES

North-west and east winds; cool and showery. Tuesday, northerly winds, clearing, with a little higher temperature.

DESPERATE PRISONERS REPEAT THEIR EFFORTS TO OBTAIN FREEDOM

Attacked and Beat Guards in Kingston, and Used Their Clothes—Four Were Recaptured, Two of the Men Surrendering After Pursuers Used Revolvers.

Special To The Review.

Kingston, April 29—Five desperate prisoners, four of them the same men that beat up the guards in a train at Toronto, a few weeks ago, and the fifth Vincent McNeil of Woodstock, made a break for liberty, shortly before noon. Four were captured inside an hour and Frank Jones, one of the westerners, was still at large this afternoon.

The men attacked Dr. Phelan and two guards, beating them, and then binding and gagging them after removing their clothing, which the prisoners donned. They raced across the jail yard to the gate keeper. As they passed, the fact that three of them wore stolen clothing, confused the man at the gate, but the chase was immediately taken up. Five shots were fired at McNeil and Bonner before they surrendered.

MORE TROUBLE FOR THE BIG SHIP OWNERS

Special to the Review.

Liverpool, April 29—The Seamen & firemen's Union, passed resolutions to-day, making additional demands upon the owners. Union members will refuse to sail on any vessel unless a union official is present when the men sign, and no vessel will be coaled, loaded or provisioned, which carries non-unionists or Chinese seamen. Several boats failed to get crews to-day, pending granting of wage increases demanded yesterday.

Must Inspect Boats.

Liverpool, April 29.—The Liverpool branch of the Seamen and Firemen's Union adopted a resolution Saturday that on and after April 29 the men will refuse to sail on any steamer unless representatives of the union are allowed to inspect the lifeboats.

The union also demands that the seamen's wages shall be increased to £4 10s. (approximately $22), and the firemen's wages to £5 per month.

VEDRINES MAY NOT RECOVER

Special to the Review.

Paris, April 29 — Jules Vedrines, France's most celebrated aviator, was probably fatally injured this morning, at St. Denis, a suburb of Paris by a fall with his aeroplane. He was attempting to make a flight from Douai, France, to Madrid.

Chatham Mishaps of a Day.

Chatham, April 29.—There were no less than seven serious accidents in Chatham on Saturday, mostly children injured at play. The child of Mr. and Mrs. Scholfield fell down the steps and broke its leg; the 12-year-old son of Charles Smith was thrown from a horse and badly kicked; the daughter of Mr. Connibear had her ankle severely sprained in getting over a picket fence; the son of Frank Sparks was struck on the temple with a baseball bat and is in sreious condition; the son of Thomas Clark was run over by a bicycle seriously injuring his neck; Harold McDonald of the Gray factory had his hand badly lacerated in a joiner, and Mr. Pretty of the Chatham Business College sprained his ankle badly in a baseball practice.

TOWNS SWEPT BY TORNADO

Terrible Storm Visits Oklahoma and Texas.

Lawton, Okla., April 29.—Originating early yesterday afternoon in the vicinity of Childress, Texas, and proceeding in a quarter circle covering nearly 100 miles, a tornado visited a great region of southwestern Oklahoma, killing scores and wounding many.

It passed near Altus, Okla., but did little damage there. Blair, on the Orient Railroad route, was the next town visited. Much hail and rain accompanied it at that point, but no casualties were reported.

Orient freight train No. 19, going north, was blown from the track a mile west of Lugert. The 15 cars were overturned and all of the train crew were injured, Fireman Murphy seriously. The engine was run back to Blair for physicians, who went to the scene.

At Lugert two were killed and several injured.

Passing on through the country between Hobart and Lone Wolf, it struck next at Hinton, where several were injured. In many localities telephone and telegraph wires are down and details are meagre.

Throughout the country near Hobart many children were away from home and have not yet returned and their parents feel much uneasiness.

From latest reports the greatest damage seems to have been done in the rural district, with which little or no communication is yet possible.

As the tornado proceeded along its course, traveling from southwest to northeast, it lost none of its force. From many of the larger towns in the stricken district, relief and doctors were hurried to the stricken towns.

Altus, Hobart, Lone Wolf and several other large towns were touched on the outskirts by the tornado, otherwise the death list and seriously injured would likely run to hundreds.

BODY FOUND IN MILL RACE

Brantford Girl's Death Surrounded by Peculiar Circumstances

Brantford, April 29.—The body of Lottie Gibson, the 18-year-old daughter of Samuel Gibson, Lawrence street, was recovered from eight feet of water in the mill race Saturday evening. All day long firemen and police had dragged the bed of the canal. The body was removed to the morgue and an inquest ordered by Coroner Ashton.

The girl left the mill where she was employed Friday at noon. Her mother had just visited her with a letter which had arrived at her home and which the mother opened. It was of a threatening nature and anonymous. As soon as the contents were revealed to the daughter, the latter was greatly disturbed. She was seen by several residents look behind repeatedly, as though to see if she were being watched.

Reginald Robbins, aged 26, who resides at Holmedale, appeared in the police court Saturday charged with sending threatening letters. He pleadde not guilty and was released on bail. This occurred prior to the finding of the body.

Miss Gibson left the house at noon on Friday to go back to work. She wore no hat, and she hadn't any money with her. Half an hour or so later it appears that Mrs. Gibson, the girl's mother, discovered the letter. She immediately started out for the mill to show her daughter the letter. It threatened to expose the girl, and the writer complained of her failure to keep an appointment with him.

After a short conversation Mrs. Gibson went home again, and a little later her daughter left her work and was seen going along the bank of the millrace. When she failed to arrive home Friday night, her parents became alarmed, with the result that the search was instituted Saturday morning.

Miss Gibson, it is stated was engaged to be married to a young man out west, and her parents say that Robbins was continually watching for her in the vicinity of her home.

Just what relations had existed between the couple is not determined. The Gibson family assert that Robbins was a rejected lover, while Robbins' story is the reverse.

The inquest will be held Thursday.

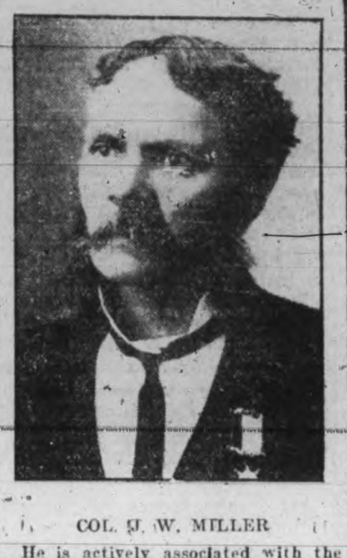
Esson Will Know Fate To-day.

Port Huron, Mich., April 29.—When court adjourned Saturday in the trial of George Esson, the Petrolea youth, who is accused of the murder of Thomas Major, a local yatchsman, the opposing attorneys were well along in their closing arguments. It is expected that Esson's fate will be in the hands of the jury by to-night.

To Bring Back Americans.

Washington, April 29.—The Government has decided to despatch transport to the western coast of Mexico for the purpose of bringing back to the United States all American citizens in that part of the country who may desire to return. The greater number of these now in Mexico are returning by steamship lines from eastern ports, or by rail. This movement, which is being assisted by the War Department, leads to the belief that the decks are being cleared for action by way of invasion in the near future. This belief is strengthened by the informal announcement that a number of steamship lines are under contract to furnish vessels for the transport of troops whenever notified.

MAGNATES WITH TAFT SAYS COL. ROOSEVELT



COL. J. W. MILLER
He is actively associated with the Independent Order of Oddfellows.

Ex-President Stirs Up a Huge Gathering to Enthusiasm by Comparing His Backers With Those of the President—He Admits That G. W. Perkins Is His Supporter—Dislikes Campaign of Personalities.

Boston, April 28.—Boston gave Col. Roosevelt Saturday night the most demonstrative welcome which he has seen since beginning his campaign for the Presidential nomination. Speaking in the arena before a tumultuous throng, the former President again criticized Mr. Taft. He, however, did not repeat the severe denunciation which he brought into his speech at Worcester Friday night.

"I do not wish this to be a campaign of personalities between Mr. Taft and myself," said Col. Roosevelt. "Last night I felt compelled to answer Mr. Taft at length. To-night I shall refer to him only as I feel that I must.

"I am more fortunate than Mr. Taft in my friends. When Mr. Taft came here Thursday he came here having lost Illinois. I came here having lost New Hampshire. In Illinois, Mr. Taft's chief lieutenant had been Mr. Lorimer. In New Hampshire, my chief lieutenant was Governor Bass. Mr. Taft came here to explain that he didn't like Mr. Lorimer, having kept his dislike private and confidential until after he lost Illinois. I come here and say that, win or lose, I am with Governor Bass.

"Mr. Taft originally was against Senator Lorimer. He asked me not to attack Mr. Lorimer lest it might help him. I kept silent until I became convinced that the attack was being conducted with such excessive secrecy that even Mr. Lorimer did not know about it. I then took up the cudgels against Mr. Lorimer, and I didn't attack him in Massachusetts after the primary. I did it in Illinois before the primary."

Holding up a sheet of paper, Col. Roosevelt said: "I've got two parallel columns here; in one are my chief supporters; in the other Mr. Taft's."

Among his own supporters the colonel mentioned western governors, who asked him to run, and Gifford Pinchot. "Where's Perkins," someone in the audience shouted. "He's for me," the colonel called back, "you can't put a question to me that will embarrass me for a moment. You can search my record and you will find that I never have done as I never will do for Mr. Perkins or any other human being, one thing I don't tell to you in detail."

As representing Mr. Taft's supporters, the colonel named amid hisses of the crowd, Senators Lorimer, Penrose, Guggenheim and Gallinger. "You can judge for yourself on whose side the bosses are," he went on. "Mr. Taft says I have accepted the support of bosses. So I have when they went my way, but they had to go my way, or we parted company."

"That's all I have to say of the personalities in this campaign. I will say I will support any man so long as he served the people of the U. S., and when he ceases to do so I will not support him."

Col. Roosevelt then turned to a defence of his position in regard to the courts, repeating the arguments which he has made throughout the campaign.

At the end of his speech Col. Roosevelt called out, "Now you have me. Am I preaching anarchy?"

"No," the crowd roared.

NOMINATIONS IN QUEBEC MAY 8 ELECTIONS 15

Liberals and Conservatives Are Lining Up In Quebec Elections.

Montreal, April 29.—By to-night both Liberals and Conservatives will have all their candidates nominated in the eighty-two constituencies, some four or five taking place Saturday and one yesterday on each side. So far there is no indication of a saw-off, although Arthur Plante, Conservative, and Honore Mercier, Liberal, may be elected at the last moment by acclamation in Beauharnois and Chateauguay respectively.

One of the strongest men put up so far is E. A. Robert, president of the Montreal Tramways Co., who was nominated by the Government side in Beauharnois, but if the saw-off is concluded he will retire. As the tramways question was a political issue in the Legislature there was considerable surprise when Mr. Robert accepted, although his strength is admitted.

Nominations will be held May 8 and polling May 15, except in Gaspe, where voting is two weeks later than in other counties. Sir Lomer Gouin has command of the Government forces in this district, while Hon. Adelard Turgeon has charge of the Quebec district. On the Opposition side Leader Tellier commands the Montreal counties, numbering forty-two, while Armand Lavergne is in charge of Quebec.

MACKAY-BENNETT MEETING WITH BAD WEATHER

Will Not Reach Port Till To-morrow Morning

Special To The Review.

Halifax, April 29—A wireless message received from the morgue ship, Mackay Bennett says, that owing to bad weather, she will be unable to reach port before nine o'clock Tuesday morning.

"Comparisons Are Odious."

When little Amy was three years old she was taken to visit her maternal grandmother. During her stay the entire household made much of her, and on her departure she was hugged and kissed and wept over by each member of the affectionate family in turn. The scene made a deep impression on her young mind.

A visit to her father's home followed. At the conclusion of it her paternal grandmother and her Aunt Mabel stood smilingly waving their adieus to the little one until the carriage was out of sight.

Amy's mother was beginning to wonder what made her so unusually quiet when a solemn little voice rang out from her corner of the carriage:

"Not a tear shed!"—Youth's Companion.

TRAIN CAUGHT IN LANDSLIDE

North Bay, Ont., April 29.—Two accidents of an unusual nature occurred on the Canadian Pacific Railway Toronto-Sudbury branch, near Parry Sound, resulting in serious injury to two employes.

The first accident occurred late on Saturday afternoon. A freight train was passing through a deep cut when a landslide of rocks and earth engulfed the train crew. The wrecking train from North Bay was despatched to the scene, and by some miscalculations crashed into the wrecked train in the darkness, demolishing the big steam crane completely.

The car containing the wrecking crew was badly damaged, and the car foreman, J. E. Hughes, of North Bay, was seriously injured, while J. Bailey of the bridge and building department received injuries which are painful, but not considered serious. Both men were taken to Parry Sound Hospital.

DR. MacMURCHY PASSES AWAY

Toronto, April 29.—Dr. Archibald MacMurchy, aged 80 years, of 133 East Bloor street, died in St. Michael's Hospital at 10.15 Saturday night, from injuries received when he was struck by a Belt Line street car Thursday evening on Bloor street. Dr. MacMurchy did not regain consciousness, and his skull was severely fractured.

Postmaster at Falls Quits.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 29.—It became known yesterday that Herman Fischer had sent in his resignation as postmaster at the south end postoffice, after serving only five months. He is the third man to hold the job in two years.

Although it still holds, the ice jam in the upper river that caused the American falls to run dry, is much diminished in size to-day, about a quarter of its usual amount of water is passing over the cataract.

"FEEBLE STOMACH"

Causes Digestive Weakness and Poisons the Entire System.

"No one can have suffered more than I did with stomach trouble," writes Phil. E. Pascalar, well known at St. Andrews Corners. "My doctor told me my indigestion and sleeplessness were due to poisons in the blood. Certainly my condition was desperate, and it seemed from the despondent feelings that swept over me that I would lose my reason. I happened to read about Dr. Hamilton's Pills and bought five boxes from the druggist. Such body-cleansing pills I never used; they were mild and yet quite strong enough to drive all the humors out of the blood. My stomach gained strength rapidly with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I improved so much that in eight weeks I could eat and digest all ordinary food. Depression and weariness passed away and I am, thanks to Dr. Hamilton's Pills, enjoying robust good health."

No remedy for biliousness, indigestion, headache, sick stomach, or constipation that compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Refuse substitutes. Sold in 25c boxes. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

UNION LABEL

AN ENDORSATION

Mr. Rowell has slated his platform on the question of bi-lingual schools. He takes his time to make a pronouncement, and of course his endeavor is to formulate a policy upon which to attack the Whitney Government and appeal to the people against that administration. In regard the schools he says:

"Make such a provision as to the training of teachers, the inspection of schools, and the curriculum that the children in every school in the province shall receive a thorough English education."

In taking this ground the Opposition enunciates a policy that the people will approve, but fortunately they will not have to wait for it to be put into force until the time, in the distant future, when Mr. Rowell will be called to office. Sir James Whitney has not only announced in the Legislature that that course will be followed, but the Government is taking the steps necessary to remedy any defects there may be. The regulations will be carried out, and where necessary assistance will be given in order that they may be complied with.

The Opposition complains of conditions in certain schools, but they do not explain that they grew up under the Liberal administration of the Education Department. The present Government has shown that when its word is given a thing is as good as done. In its hydro-electric policy, in the administration of the license law and in other departments it has shown that it is a Government of action, and one that gives effect to its policy and promises. In the matter of the schools the same characteristics hold good, and Mr. Rowell's announcement of policy becomes an endorsation of the policy of the Government.

A PARTY RESPONSIBILITY

Fault is found by the Toronto Star with Conservative journals because they have argued that the legislation which caused the disputes with the Senate was of merit, and that the Senate amendments were wrong. "What ought to be discussed," says the Star, "is not the legislation, but the Senate itself, its place in the constitution and its powers." The Senate itself may be a proper subject for discussion, but so is its action in blocking important parts of the Government's policy. It is true that the Senators who took this action cannot be voted out of their positions, not even at a general election, but they are not the only ones responsible. They are part of the Liberal party. They carried out the Liberal plan of campaign, and would not have followed the course they did had not it been suggested and approved by the Liberal leaders.

For their rejection of the legislation by which the Ontario Provincial railway would have been aided, as are other railways, and a grant would have been made to improve the highways, the Senators who so voted must share the blame. But the effort to place all the fault on their shoulders is a futile one; others must share the burdens, and these others are Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Liberal leaders, who instigated or countenanced the Senate's refusal to permit the Government's legislation on these matters to become law.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The general public should not get the idea that the Sanitary Inspector or the Garbage Collector, is supposed to clean up the backyards. Much depends on the middleman if the scheme is to be successful.

The rich and poor went down together with the Titanic and now the ocean shows no distinction in giving up her dead. While it is true, wealth will be used in the final act of man, in some cases the lesson has been taught.

President Taft got Mr. Roosevelt's consent before he concluded the reciprocity pact with the Laurier Government, but what was needed and not obtained was the consent of the Canadian people. And now, Mr. Roosevelt has gone back on him.

To avoid unnecessary suffering of condemned prisoners, in certain parts of China, the use of chloroform is to be adopted. The executioners are said to be very bad shots, and the bullets are apt to hit anywhere but a vital spot. Probably the idea is to facilitate target practice.

The Ottawa Citizen believes that the objection to the proposal to allow each municipality to choose its own methods of taxation would result in "checkerboard" legislation has no force. It would surely result in some funny moves when the councils were striving to provide for funds and yet keep down the rate.

In future, all ships equipped with wireless, must have an operator on duty day and night. When the Titanic was in peril and sinking, the operator on the Parisian slept, and the calls for help passed unanswered by the liner, which might have been able to provide for the safety of every one on the Titanic, had the messages been caught.

Attention has again been called by the proceedings in connection with the arrest of Dr. Beattie Nesbitt in Chicago to the fact that a person extradited can only be tried upon the charge upon which he is handed over. This is as it should be. But it is difficult to understand why, especially between such countries as Canada and the United States, all offences that are recognized in both countries as crimes should not be covered by the extradition treaty.

The town council of Brockville will contract with the Hydro Electric Commission for a supply of power, the freeholders having voted this authority. While a small vote was cast, the verdict was strong for Hydro power, the majority being one of 491 out of 555 votes recorded. In the centre ward of the town, the result was 102 for and 2 against. The largest number of votes against, in any one ward was 10.

COWANSVILLE, April 27.—At the regular meeting of the Eastern Townships Dairymen's Association, held here this afternoon, 19 factories boarded 810 packages of butter. Nine buyers were present; 565 packages of butter sold at 26c; 245 packages of butter unsold.

Fire In Belleville Institution.

Belleville, April 29.—A large brick building in connection with the provincial institution for the deaf and dumb, which is situated just west of the city limits, was on Saturday afternoon badly damaged by fire. The building is three storeys in height and the two upper storeys were wrecked, entailing a considerable loss. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Knowledge.

The pleasure and delight of knowledge far surpasseth all other in nature. We see in all other pleasures there is satiety, and after they be used their verdure departeth, which showeth well that they be but deceits of pleasure and not pleasures, and that it was the novelty which pleased, not the quality. But of knowledge there is no satiety, but satisfaction and appetite are perpetually interchangeable. —Bacon.

Out of the Mouths of Babes.

Father—What a boy you are to ask questions, Johnny! I never used to ask so many questions when I was a boy.

Johnny—Perhaps if you had you would be able to answer mine now!

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

When the ladies reappeared from the interior of a roadside restaurant he was in his place, ready to start. He did not offer to put them in the car, adjust their wraps, and close the door. If Miss Vanrenen liked to keep her promise, that was her affair, but no action on his part would hint of prior knowledge that she intended to ride in front.

Nevertheless, he could not repress a smile when he heard Mrs. Devar's distinctly chilly, "Oh, not at all!" in response to Cynthia's polite apology for deserting her until they neared Brighton.

Somehow, the car underwent a subtle change when the girl took her seat by his side. From a machine quivering with life and power it became a triumphal chariot. By sheer perfection of mechanical energy it had bridged the gulf that lay between the millionaire's daughter and the hired man, since there could be no question that Cynthia Vanrenen placed Viscount Medenham in no other category. Indeed, his occasional lapses from the demeanor of a lower social grade might well have earned him her marked disfavor, and, as there was no shred of personal vanity in his character, he gave all the credit to the sentient creature of steel and iron that was so ready to respond to his touch.

Swayed by an unconscious telepathy, the girl almost interpreted his unspoken thought. She watched his deft manipulation of levers and brakes, and fancied that his hands dwelt on the steering-wheel with a caress.

"You have a real lovely automobile, Fitzroy," she said, "and I have a sort of notion that you are devoted to it. May I ask—is it your own car?"

"Yes. I bought it six months ago. I learnt to drive in France, and, as soon as I heard of the new American engine, I—er—couldn't rest until I had tried it."

He was on the point of saying something wholly different, but managed to twist the second half of the sentence in time. What would Miss Vanrenen have thought had he continued: "I sent my chauffeur to England, and, on receipt of his report, I had this car shipped within a week?"

There are problems too deep for speculation when a man is guiding a ton of palpitating metal along a hedge-lined road at forty miles an hour. This was one.

Cynthia, knowing nothing of any "new American engine," would rather die than confess her ignorance. Moreover, she was pondering a problem of her own. If it was not his master's car he might be open to a bargain.

"Simmonds is an old friend of yours, I suppose?" she said.

"Yes, I have known him some years. We were in South Africa together."

"In the war, do you mean?"

"Yes."

"How dreadful! Have you ever killed anybody?"

"Not with petrol, I am happy to state."

There was an eloquent pause. Cynthia examined his reply, and discovered that it covered a good deal of ground. Perhaps, too, it conveyed the least little bit of a snub. Hence, her tone stiffened perceptibly.

"I mentioned Simmonds," she explained, "because I think my father might arrange—to the satisfaction of all parties, of course—that you should carry through this present tour, while Simmonds would come into our service when we return to London."

Medenham laughed. In its way, the compliment was graceful and well meant, but the utter absurdity of his position was now thrust upon him with overwhelming force.

"I am very much obliged to you, Miss Vanrenen," he said, venturing to look once more into those alluring eyes, so shy, so daring, so divinely wise and childishly candid. "If circumstances permitted, there is nothing I would like better than to take you through this Paradise of a June England; but it is quite impossible. Simmonds must bring his car to Bristol, as I postively cannot be absent from town longer than three days."

Cynthia did not pout. She nodded appreciation of the weighty if undescribed business that called Fitzroy and his Mercury back to London, but in her heart she mused on the strangeness of things, and wondered if this smiling land produced many chauffeurs who lauded it in such phrases.

Up and down Handcross Hill they whirred, treating that respectable eminence as if it were a snow bumb in the path of a flying toboggan. Medenham had roamed the South Downs as a boy, and he was able to point out Chnctonbury Ring, the Devil's Dke, Ditchling Beacon, and the rest of the round-shouldered giants that guard the Weald. In the mellow light of a superlatively fine afternoon the red and green—decked, too, with ribands of white roads and ruffs of rose-laden hedges.

Cynthia forgot many times, and he hardly ever remembered, that he was a chauffeur, and the miles, too, were disregarded until the sea sparkled in their eyes as they emerged from the great gap which the Devil forebore to us when he planned to swamp a land of churches by cutting the famous dyke.

Then the girl awoke from a day-dream, and the car was stopped on the pretense that this marvelous landscape must be viewed in silence and at rest. She rejoined Mrs. Devar, and began instantly to expatiate on the beauties of Sussex, so Medenham ran slowly down the hill through Patcham and Preston into Brighton.

And there, sitting in the wide porch of the Hotel Metropole, was a slim handsome Frenchman, who sprang up with all the vivacity of his race when the Mercury drew up at the steps dusty after its long run, but circumspect as though it had just quitted the garage.

"Mrs. Devar, Miss Vanrenen! what a delightful surprise!" cried the stranger with an accompaniment of wide smiles and hat flourishing. "Who would have thought of meeting you here? Voyez, donc, I was moping in solitude when suddenly the sky poens and you appear."

"Deoe ex machina, in fact, Monsieur Marigny," said Cynthia, shaking hands with this overjoyed gentleman. Mrs. Devar, not understanding, cackled loudly.

"We've had a lovely run from town, Count Edouard," she gushed, "and it is just too awfully nice of you to be in Brighton. Now, don't say you have made all sorts of engagements for the evening."

"Such as they are they go by the board, dear lady," said the gallant Count, who had good teeth, and showed them in a succession of grins.

"Ten to-morrow morning, Fizroy," said Cynthia, turning on the steps as she was about to enter the hotel. He lifted his cap.

"The car will be ready, Miss Vanrenen," said he.

He got down and scowled, yes, actually scowled, at a porter who was hauling too strongly at the straps and buckles of the dust-covered trunks.

"Damage the car's paint and I'll raise bigger blisters on yours," was what he said to the man. But his thoughts were on Count Edouard Marigny, and, like the people's discussion of the Derby, they took the form of question and answer.

"When is a coincidence not a coincidence?" he asked himself.

"When it is prearranged," was the answer.

Then he drove round to the yard at the rear of the hotel, where Dale awaited him, for Medenham would intrust the cleaning of the car to no other hands.

"You've booked my room at the Grand Hotel and taken my bag there?" he inquired.

"Yes, my lord."

"Make these people give you the key when the door is locked for the night, and bring the car to my hotel at nine o'clock."

He hurried away, and Dale looked after him.

"Something must ha' worried his lordship," said the man. "First time I've ever seen him in a bad temper. An' what about Eyot? Three to one the paper says. P'raps he'll think of it in the morning."

HEALING IN NINEVEH.

Medical Science as It Existed In the Ancient City.

The patient work of the archaeologist enables people of today to form a very fair idea of medical science as it existed in Nineveh 650 years before the birth of Christ, says the New York Sun. Of the 20,000 tablets taken from the library of Assurbanipal, the great king of Assyria, who conquered Egypt and Bablyonia and established his subjects in the deserted cities of Samaria, hundreds deal exclusively with medicine and contain numerous prescriptions:

"If a man has colic make him stand up and pour over him a decoction of hypericum and he will recover.

"Or make him crouch down on his heels and pour cold water over his head."

Faith healing seems to be indicated in a prescription which runs: "If he is in a weak state, make him bend down, then raise his legs and say, 'May you get quite well.' Strike him also on the head fourteen times with your thumb."

Many prescriptions deal with the cure of a disorder which was very common at Nineveh and which seems to have been due to overindulgence in food and drink: "When a man is bilious rub him with an onion and let him drink nothing but water and abstain from food altogether."

Among the medicines used by the physicians of Nineveh were sesame, olive oil, castor oil, sirup of dates, honey and salt. Fasting and massage were frequently ordered.

A woman always wants to dictate the way her husband shall part his hair, even when he has to do it with a towel.

SANOL

The new discovery will positively remove Gall Stones, Kidney Stones, Gravel in the Bladder, and will effect a complete Cure. GIRL GUIDE IS COMING

VIOLET TEMPLE STARTED SCOUT MOVEMENT FOR HER SEX.

Sixteen-Year-Old English Lassie Was Not to Be Outdone by a Mere Boy and She Now Stands as Pioneer of a Corps Numbering Eight Thousand Members—Miss Baden-Powell Speaks Highly of Idea.

As if to prove the truth of Rudyard Kipling's theory that "the female of the species is more deadly than the male," the girls of England are out to beat their brothers in scouting. Within a year or so their movement has assumed dimensions far out of proportion to what was anticipated at the outset. Now they aim to spread their enterprise across the seas, and have selected one of their number as a first missioner for Canada and Australia.

Time was when the appearance of the girls—clad in khaki skirts and the regulation Baden-Powell headgear, with staves and water bottles—in the streets of English cities, roused more ridicule than sympathy. But they stuck to their scouting with enthusiasm, and marched along with military precision and a sense of responsibility sufficiently marked to indicate that they were bearing a large share of the Imperial burdens. To-day the prejudice has almost gone. Serious-minded people see in the movement an outlet for energy that can be turned to the benefit of the community.

Eight thousand girls, on their own initiative, joined the scouts before influential people overcame their prejudices and volunteered to lead them. They provided their own clothes, found their own drill instructors, appointed scout "masters" from their own ranks, and displayed a respect for discipline and a power for organization that excited the astonishment of their elders.

VIOLET TEMPLE.

A girl of sixteen, named Violet Temple, was one of the first to catch the scout fever, and to her may be said to be due the beginning of the Girl Scout movement in this country. When asked to explain how the movement had grown so rapidly, she replied: "It grew of itself, because it possessed within it all the elements of healthy amusement for girls who desired to occupy their spare time usefully and intelligently."

Miss Temple herself claims no special capacity for organizing, but Miss Baden-Powell, the sister of the famous originator of the Scout movement, believes her to be a genius, and to test her abilities further it has been arranged that she shall make this world tour during the present year in the interests of the "Baden-Powell Girl Guides"—the name the movement has now assumed.

Miss Baden-Powell, who is playing the leading part in the organization and government of the Girl Guides, claims that the movement provides inducements for its followers to become proficient in all the womanly essentials. She believes it will bring out most useful qualities, inculcate healthy habits, and stimulate kindness and "camaraderie" to all around them.

There are others like Lady Massie Bloomfield and Major H. T. Stafford, who look upon the movement as a blessing to the state, in so far that it has found an occupation for the leisure time of work girls of an impressionable age, who, in numerous cases, up to now have been thrown entirely upon their own resources. Instead of congregating at street corners discussing the latest variety shows, the girls now go to their local "headquarters," where they receive instruction towards their comprehensive equipment as Guides. When they are not at "headquarters" they may be seen at exercises in Hyde Park or on Hampstead Heath to their physical, mental, and ethical betterment.

It Wasn't a Dream.

Archbishop Thompson was greatly surprised when he was given the archdiocese of York. He had been suffering acutely from toothache and upon medical advice had resorted to narcotics. After a particularly bad night he set out for his doctor, though his wife had besought him not to submit to further narcotics, as after them he was "not himself" for some hours. On the way he met the postman, who handed him a letter announcing his preferment from Gloucester to York. He rushed back and burst excitedly into the house, the toothache all forgotten. "Zoe, Zoe," he cried, "what do you think has happened? I am Archbishop of York!" "There, what did I tell you?" rejoined his wife. "You've been taking that horrible narcotic again and are quite out of your head."

The Interior Department expect an immigration of 400,000 this year.

Who is Your Customer?

HAVE you ever met your real customer? Have your salesmen a speaking acquaintance with him? Have you told him about the merits of your product? Have you explained why he should give your goods the preference? Have you done anything to stimulate his desire for your goods?

In short, have you made any attempt whatever to sell your goods to him?

"Most assuredly," you say. "Every dealer in Canada is known to our travelers, and we certainly wouldn't pay a salesman who couldn't tell our customers all——"

One minute, please. The dealer isn't your customer. He's simply a part of your sales organization, and a decidedly independent part of it at that. He is distributor for other concerns in whose goods he is just as much interested as he is in yours. And he isn't particularly interested in your product, any more than in your competitors'.

The dealer realizes that he can serve six who order their goods by a well-known trade name as quickly as he can serve one to whom he has to demonstrate that a product is good.

Your real customer is the Public—the Public who wears your clothing, eats your pickles, uses your safety razor. You've got to sell your goods to the Public.

When the user wants your goods and won't take any other—then you are independent of all but him, your real customer.

To make the user want your goods, you must do two things:

(1) Produce an article of value.

(2) Tell him what you make, and why he should prefer it.

That's advertising.

When are the makers of piano actions, for example, going to discover that they do not know their real customers; and, what is worse, that their real customers do not know them? So the public have to buy pianos in blind ignorance of the quality of the most important mechanical part of the piano.

What is it going to be worth to the piano-action maker who first discovers that his real customer is the Public, and not the piano manufacturer who incorporates the action into the complete instrument?

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any recognized Canadian advertising agency, or through the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503 Lumsden Bldg., Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write, if interested.

MEETING OF THE RETAIL MERCHANTS

The eighth annual meeting of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada will be held at Montreal Monday and Tuesday. The delegates leave Toronto tonight as follows:—Ald. B. W. Ziemann, President, Preston; A. W. Weslough, Berlin; E. C. Matthews, Toronto; N. C. Cameron, Goderich; M. Moyer, Toronto, and E. M. Trowern, Dominion Secretary, Toronto. Among the matters to be discussed are the proposed taxing of mail order houses and parcel houses. It is felt that while the local merchant pays his business tax, the catalogue houses are enabled to do business in all localities, free from any tax in such localities. The tax, if imposed would be under returns to the Government on the business done, and would accrue to the province, in the first instance, and eventually to the municipalities.

TIME IS EXTENDED

The time has been extended for receiving Tenders for the erection of the two School Buildings until 12 o'clock noon Saturday May 4th. Also for the Heating and Plumbing of these buildings, which is extended, until May 15th 1912, at 12 o'clock noon. By order, Chairman Building Committee, Board of Education.

Ad. Club to Hear an Expert With Live Subject

Everything is in order for an interesting and profitable time for the members and others who will attend the Ad. Club dinner to-morrow evening, April 30th, to hear Mr. Fritz Kuhn, an expert on publicity and store management, from Ottawa, who will discuss the matter of increasing store efficiency.

The dinner will be held at Hooper's Palm Parlor, and commence at 6.15 sharp. All will be over promptly at eight o'clock, in order that those in attendance may get away to fulfil other engagements they may have for the evening.

It is not too much to anticipate that Mr. Kuhn will give out suggestions of inestimable value to local business men, who will be present to profit from meeting together with other business men at this dinner and hearing what Mr. Kuhn has to say. Tickets for the dinners should be reserved early, and may be had from the secretary, Mr. J. McNichol, at 'phone 1333, or Mr. C. F. Hardy, 'phone 606.

THEATRICAL

"LEAH KLESCHNA"

A rather slim attendance greeted the return of Hamilton Deane and Marie Leonhard to the Grand on Saturday night, when assisted by the same capable company as With Edged Tools, they presented the powerful and cleverely written drama, "Leah Kleschna."

The latter vehicle has been styled the greatest psychological play of the century, meaning thereby that a large portion of the conclusions and moral benefits derived from the play, are left for the mind and soul to extract. The story however, is one of extreme strength, with plenty of virility and with a strong moral lesson running through it.

Kleschna is the alias borne by a big, masterful and skilled thief, who with the aid of his beautiful and well-educated daughter, makes a practice of burglarizing wealthy families in France. They are assisted by a deformed but devoted servant who worships Kleschna's daughter with a mighty but unreturned affection.

The beautiful girl "Leah" by name, becomes fascinated with the noble character and manliness of Paul Sylvaine, of the Chamber of Deputies, who is aware of the ignoble transactions of Kleschna and his accomplished daughter. The girl repents of her base thieving but is prevailed upon and forced by her father to undertake the theft of a priceless set of jewels from the residence of a man whose name is unknown, but which turns out to be the palatial home of Sylvaine, the man whom she adores. The dramatic discovery of "Leah" by Sylvaine, as she is in the act of opening the safe, and the pleading of the former with the girl to forsake her methods, form some of the most touching episodes of the play. The girl confesses her sorrow, and defies her father, fleeing to the home of her childhood, where she is found years later by Sylvaine and they are married. The various other characters incidental but very necessary to the play are, Raoul Berton, son of General Berton, a libertine and dissipated young man, Valentine Favre, a journalist and others of minor character parts.

Marie Leonhard's emotional and dramatic exposition of the part of Leah Kleschna was greatly admired. In the title role, of Sylvaine, Hamilton Deane was as popular and manly as ever. Both had to respond to numerous curtain calls.

MR. WM. MILLER RETURNS FROM TRIP TO ARIZONA

Where One Potato Does for the Family Meal.

DON'T WANT RECIPROCITY

Canada Would be Swamped by American Manufacturers

Mr. Wm. Miller, who resides at the corner of Water and Dublin streets, is home again, after spending the past winter with his son, who is owner and proprietor of nearly two hundred acres of rich and productive land in the State of Arizona. Mr. Miller, being a modest man, endeavored to keep his arrival in the city quiet for a few days, and to that end, hired a closed cab when he left his train in Peterborough, to convey him home. Consequently he expressed considerable surprise when a Review representative interviewed him this morning at his home, and enjoyed an hour's chat on the many interesting things which came under Mr. Miller's observation during his protracted and enjoyable visit.

Arizona, from Mr. Miller's enthusiastic descriptions, must be an ideal state in which to dwell. Last November it was made one of the United States, previous to that time being known only as a territory. The remarkable jump in land values which followed speaks volumes for the fertility of the soil and the general desirability of the state as a dwelling place. Property outside of Phoenix, the capital city, jumped at a bound from $15 an acre to $45; while in other sections land is almost unpurchasable. All farm land, however, is irrigated, although dry farming is now being adopted, and proving of immense satisfaction.

Mr. Miller was asked if the people in Arizona wanted reciprocity.

"They do not," was his reply; "in fact they know very little about it, being satisfied as they are." One old sheep owner, with whom he conversed, told him that if reciprocity ever carried, American manufacturers would simply swamp Canada. The same man had imported a number of sheep from Canada, and claimed that they were of very poor stock, and that many of them had died. But it was in reference to the productiveness of the soil and the large growth to which products attained that Mr. Miller's talk was most surprising. Think of a whole family sitting down and making a good meal off a solitary potato. Potatoes there grow from five to twenty pounds in weight. The Irish potato, however, is not used, the sweet potato being used most extensively. The method of planting is also widely different to Canadian methods. The potato is taken whole and planted in a rich bed, over-laid with straw. Soon sprouts cover it thickly shooting above the surface. These myriad sprouts are pulled off and planted, each one of which in the end representing a large potato. Two crops are also grown off each original potato.

Another vegetable which reaches surprisingly large proportions is the melon. One man cannot carry an Arizona melon. Three or four of them constitute a wagon load, and sell at $50 a load. Then peanuts are extensively cultivated and grown from two to five inches in length. Mr. Miller gave a Review representative a couple, as samples, out of a bag which he brought home with him. His son captured several prizes at the Phoenix Fair for various exhibits.

Butter in Arizona brings 25 to 30 cents per pound. Eggs bring 16 cts., and in fact prices are very reasonable and if anything are lower than in Canada. Mr. Miller also has some samples of cactus, and muskeg. The latter grows a species of bean which is excellent food for cows. Wheat will grow in Arizona, but oats gives a superior crop. Apples are plentiful, especially the Ben Davis, which is considered one of the highest grade apples in the State.

Mining is also carried on principally copper and silver being obtained. Mr. Miller descended two thousand feet into one of these mines.

The scenery in Arizona, Mr. Miller says, is particularly rugged and grand. All manner of rock formations, cliffs, ravines and canons, meet the eye as one speeds along the "Sunset Route" in a comfortable observation car.

Mr. Miller could talk indefinitely on the merits and lure of Arizona, and is eminently qualified to do so. The information to be obtained from him could not be ascertained so interestingly and clearly, except from a personal jaunt to the places he describes.

THE LATE ROBERT SCOTT OF SMITH

The township of Smith lost another life long resident, yesterday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, when Mr. Robert Scott, of Lot 8, on the 5th line, passed away. He was in his sixty-fourth year.

In his passing the sixth link in the family chain is broken in as many years. His mother was the first to depart from this earth, six years ago, and three years later the father, the late George Scott, passed to his reward. The other departed ones are brothers and sisters.

The deceased was born on the old homestead on the 4th line, and remained with his parents till the year 1879, when he married Sarah A. Graham, daughter of the late William Graham, of Smith, who with a family of two sons and four daughters, is left to mourn the loss of one who was ever kind and loving. All his life had been spent in farm work, in which he had been most successful. He was well known, not alone in his own township, but throughout the county of Peterborough, and will be remembered for the deeds done as opportunity presented itself.

The late Mr. Scott was an active member of Gilmour Memorial Baptist church, and filled the position of deacon before his illness. Always had he been in his place, and in his passing the church suffers a genuine loss.

His sons are Messrs. Norman, of Saskatchewan, and William G., at home, and his daughters, Mrs. Herbert Sharon and Miss Annie Scott, of Saskatchewan, and Misses Mary and Lillian, at home. The brothers are Messrs. George, of Brandon; John, of Souris, Man.; Alexander, of Smith, and Dr. W. D. Scott, of this city, while the sisters are Mrs. Robt. Newton, of Brandon; Mrs. Robert Moffat, of Elgin, Man.; Mrs. Percy Edmison, of Smith, and Miss Sarah Scott, at home.

The funeral will take place from the late residence on Wednesday afternoon, at two o'clock, and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery.

"At Home"

The 57th Regiment Chapter Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire, will hold an At Home in the Armories Recreation Room, on Tuesday afternoon and evening, April 30th. Tea from 4 to 6 and in the evening. The public are invited. Silver collection. Band in evening.

HEROISM WAS THE SUBJECT

Annual Sermon to I. O. O. F. by Rev. Isaac Couch

The Independent Order of Oddfellows, to the number of over two hundred, attended the George street Methodist church in a body last night The occasion was in commemoration of the 93rd anniversary of the Order and the Oddfellows met in their rooms at the corner of George and Hunter streets, and forming a procession, marched to the George street church.

The musical service was greatly appreciated. The anthem, "Hark, Hark My Soul," was rendered by the choir, and Miss Josie Callander and Mr. Chas. Thornton in a duet gave Silmore's "Happy Days."

The sermon was preached by the Rev. Isaac Couch, who took as his subject "Heroism."

In the opening, Mr. Couch congratulated the Oddfellows on the great work of benevolence and love they were carrying on. The mission of visiting the sick, clothing the orphans and providing for the poor had been cheerfully undertaken by them as a society. Other fraternities were engaged in the same work of the alleviation of the world's suffering, but particularly had the Oddfellows been a force in that direction.

Then the speaker showed that in much of this work, heroism of the noblest kind was needed. He cited the instance of Grace Darling, and her father, the lighthouse keeper, telling how, by exercising the greatest heroism, they, together, saved nine shipwrecked people from drowning. This he gave as an illustration of true heroism and the willingness to help others at great personal risk.

Mr. Couch went on to show how each man was dependent on his fellow beings. The rich needed the poor, and the poor needed the rich. All should treat one another as brothers and be ready to help other people in danger in spite of the possible cost of ourselves.

After the service, the Oddfellows returned to their rooms and held a short meeting. Col. Miller occupied the chair, and resolutions were passed thanking the George street church, the pastor, the officials and the choir, and expressing gratitude to the ladies of the Rebekah Lodge for their loyalty to the Order in attending the service.

The turnout of Oddfellows last night, was the largest in many years, and a number of visitors from outside lodges were in the city for the occasion and were present at the service.

BODY OF TRAPPER IS FOUND IN THE WOODS WITH TWO BULLET WOUNDS

Special to the Review.

Kinmount, April 29.—The body of Luke Porter, a trapper, was found in the woods three miles from Indian Village, Saturday morning with two bullet holes in his body.

The unfortunate man left here last Thursday to visit his traps, and no further word being received from him, a searching party was organized, with the result that the men came across the lifeless body.

He was a married man with a family of five children. There are statements made to the effect that Porter was very unpopular in the vicinity where he operated. It is also said that he terrorized some of the people. Attempted revenge is being connected with the cause of his death. The facts in connection with the finding of the body and the position of the wounds are such as could not be connected with suicide.

An inquest is being held at Minden.

"EXCUSE ME" DON'T MISS IT

The Funniest Farce of the Season at the Grand To-morrow Night.

New York is laughing yet at "Excuse Me," the Rupert Hughes' farce that ran all last season and last summer and for several weeks this season at the Gaiety Theatre, a total run of nine months on Broadway. Say "Excuse Me" to anybody in New York and you'll send that person into peals of laughter. It doesn't matter for what reason you say "Excuse Me," it's always a laugh, even when it's an apology, for the expression suggested the farce and even a hint of the play produces bowls of glee. Therefore, prepare for the laugh of your lives on Tuesday, 30th April, for "Excuse Me" will be here then to show those who see it that they have more laughs in their system than ever they dreamed of. Nobody knows how many kinds of laughs and how much laughter they are capable of until they see "Excuse Me." Here is a play that is gaiety and laughter and merriment and glee and hilarity and everything else in the mirth line from the moment the curtain goes up until next year, for there'll be laughter at the very thought of "Excuse Me" for twelve months to come. It is a comedy on a railway train. All the action is on an overland express running across the continent. The scenes are in the cars and the characters are the passengers and train crew. More things happen on this trip than one could imagine, and everything is laugh. It is laughter every mile and every minute of the way. Those who miss "Excuse Me" will be ashamed. They'll have to say "Excuse Me" when they're asked about their failure to enjoy the jolliest, merriest, cleverest and best farce ever. You really ought to laugh, you know. It does one a heap of good. See "Excuse Me" and laugh all the way from Chicago to Reno.

Some of the girls with Henry Savage's big production of "Excuse Me" which comes to "The Grand" to-morrow (Tuesday) A genuine treat is promised patrons, this being the first "Savage" production to visit Peterboro.

Famous Pens.

The collecting of pens that have been owned by or associated with famous personages is a hobby that has attracted some collectors, though the pursuit is an expensive one. A well worn gold pen used by Charles Dickens brought $200 at a sale of his effects. A pen made out of wood from a box owned by George Washington, the box having been made from a desk brought to America by the Mayflower, is valued at $2,500.—Exchange.

Mr. A. Sullivan, of Toronto, is in the city on business.

Mr. O. King is spending a few days at his home in the city.

Mr. T. J. Drain, of Vancouver, B. C., is in the city to-day.

Mr. T. McLaren, of Galt, is transacting business in the city.

Mr. P. W. Arnold, of Brantford, is in the city on business.

Mr. T. McIntee has returned to Toronto after spending the week with his mother.

Mr. Charles N. Brown leaves to-morrow for British Columbia with the intention of taking up permanent residence. Mrs. Brown will leave the city at a later date.

Mr. James Davidson left this morning for St. Catharines, where he has accepted a good position. Last evening a few of his associates in the Marlborough Club assembled at the Boston Cafe to say good-bye to him at an informal little supper.

WHAT ABOUT INTERMEDIATE OR CITY LEAGUE BASEBALL?

Because the Canadian League Ball League will have a live team in the city this year, is no reason why baseball should halt as far as other organizations who wish to play the game are concerned. For instance, a City League, whether intermediate or senior, has been suggested as quite feasible, and its up to all lovers of the game, fans and baseball enthusiasts generally to make an attempt at getting a league under way. Matial is known to be abundant and what is required is some one to get busy and get the thing going. Experience in the past will be of valuable assistance. While an intermediate league has been advanced as the best yet if senior ball was desired it would be fully as satisfactory. There should be no difficulty in launching three teams in the league race, and one suggestion is that the use of the Riverside Park grounds, could be secured on Saturday afternoons from one thirty to say three o'clock, prior to the big games.

It means that if no City League ball is played this season, a degeneration in baseball enthusiasm among the younger fry will ensue, a condition of affairs to be decidedly shunned. On the other hand, with the Canadian League stimulating interest, what is more likely than the old City League material would find an outlet for their interest and admiration is putting up as classy a brand of amateur ball as is possible.

Those desirous of taking up the proposal should get in touch with with Mr. J. J. Thompson, of the Y.M.C.A., who is interested in the suggestion himself.

FRED WHITCROFT HAS THE BALL BUG THINKS PETERBORO WILL DO WELL

Hamilton Spectator — Fred Whitcroft, the former hockey player and ex-Peterboro boy, was a visitor in the city yesterday, and attended the practice at Britannia park. "Whittie" is now a resident of Edmonton, where he has done exceedingly well in real estate speculation, but this has not prevented him from taking stock in the Peterboro club, and he is naturally pulling hard for the Petes to win the pennant. He was greatly surprised at the form shown by Joe Keenan "I have heard of Keenan for years, but never saw him before, and expected to run across a pretty old looking chap," said Fred. "Much to my surprise, Keenan was just the opposite, and from his play to-day it will take a pretty good youngster to beat him out of a job." Whittie is a great ball fan, and he has great faith in the future of the Canadian League. He is satisfied that Peterboro will prove a pretty good baseball town. "If they meet with any degree of success at all this year the success of the game there is assured," he said "I was down there the other day, everybody is right on edge for the season to start. The interest that is being taken is indicated in the story they tell of one of the leading manufacturers of the city who is taking a deep interest in the club. This chap has never mixed much in sport, and his interest in baseball is surprising everybody. The club had ameeting a couple of days ago, and while discussing plans for the season, this chap, who had been sitting back with little to say, startled the whole crowd with the remark, "We should go to the mayor and have him declare a half holiday for May 22." This f[illegible]k the rest of the officers off their feet but they had sense enough to get busy and follow up the suggestion before anyone else could back down. Whitcroft gave it as his opinion that St. Thomas would play to 5,000 people on May 22 if the half holiday was declared. He also looks for Berlin to play to about 7,000 people in Ottawa on May 16, while it is his opinion that St. Thomas, billed for Ottawa on May 23, 24, 25 and 26, will come out of the Capital with enough money to run them for a month or two.

Baseball for T. A. S.

The boys of the T.A.S. held a baseball meeting for the purpose of forming a league for the coming season. They appointed a committee to look after a ball grounds, and discussed the prospects for such a league. They intend holding a meeting at a later date, and full arrangements will be made

DIAMOND DUST FROM THE CIRCUIT

Second Base—Kifilea and Marshall.

Shortstop—Martin.

Third Base—Keenan.

Centre Field—Purdy.

Right Field—Lee.

"Lefty" McDonald of Toronto has signed with the London team. McDonald reported this spring to the Lowell Club of the New England League, but was desirous of coming to the Canadian League and succeeded in getting his unconditional release.

The Ottawa team will play its first game on May 5, an exhibition affair, with Adrian of the South Michigan League. The game will be played in Adrain.

Ottawa Free Press—"I believe the Canadian league will prove a big success and that the game will become immensely popular in Ottawa," said L. N. Bate yesterday, in discussing the prospects. "The club is in good hands and the management has been going about things in the right manner. The elimination of Sunday ball will give the club a great deal of additional prestige with the best class of sportsmen." Mr. Bate has been one of the leading figures in Ottawa sport for many years and his opinion should count some.

Diamond dust.

Brantford, April 29—President Nelson this morning received the following telegram from Manager Amby Kane: "Will arrive on Tuesday.' Transportation has been forwarded for the following players: Pitchers, Igo, Coose, Donovan, Bickford, Boyle, Tasker and Bakey; catchers, Lamond, and Conley; infield, Ivers, Enoch, Farrell, Weddege, Slattery, Novak, Alden, Hess, Brasel, Courtney; outfield, Kane, Burrill, Hart, Zetter.

"In all 27 men have signed contracts with the Red Sox," remarked President Nelson this morning, "and if we can't find 15 first class men out of the bunch we wil sign as many more, for Brantford shall have a winning team this summer."

One of the finest specimens of a totem pole ever brought down from the North is that which Capt. C. H. Nicholson, amanager of the G.T.P.'s steamship service, has secured for the Fort Garry, the Grand Trunk Pacific hotel at Winnipeg. The pole has been brought over from Victoria where it was recently re-painted and is now lying at the Company's Vancouver dock. The pole which is about 60 feet long, was presented by the Haida Indians of Graham Island and is about three chiefs (three generations) old, or about 200 years, judged by the way in which these old Chiefs cling to the land of the living. While the log in which the queer images of the Indians are cut shows signs of great age, it is in a fair state of preservation and will probably be the first totem pole in Winnipeg. It will stand in front of the hotel grounds on Broadway and should appeal to the traveller's instinctive desire to visit a country endowed with such picturesque environment.

THE ROSE SCARF

A Tale of the Far East

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"I believe Mrs. Hanford has a tale to unfold," observed that lady's husband as he placed a chair for her.

"Good!" exclaimed Professor Trayle heartily. "Now, Alex, spread the carpet of truth on the deck and let Mrs. Hanford begin at once."

A little laugh ran around the group of seven friends touring the world on the steamer Neptune. Each one had had a story to relate concerning some adventure encountered in quaint street, noisy bazaar or primitive environs of foreign cities. Every night after dinner the seven had gathered on deck and in the moonlight had told stories and exchanged opinions on many matters of mutual interest.

The carpet of truth to which the professor had referred was a precious bit of oriental carpet that Alexander Felton had brought from a remote Turkish province, and the Neptune story tellers had each told his tale sitting upon its breadth of silken richness. Now Mrs. Hanford removed her chair so that she sat upon the carpet, and the six listeners composed themselves for an hour's enjoyment.

"My story is about this rose colored scarf," began Mrs. Hanford, opening one plump hand to display a crumpled ball of pink silk and silver tissue. She shook out the airy fabric, and it floated a shimmering length that seemed woven of sunset and moonbeams. The airy scarf undulated like a thing alive, leaped at Arthur Clayton's eager, interested face and clung to it with a caressing motion and then left him to brush Mr. Hanford's bronzed cheek, to tweak the golden eyeglasses from Professor Trayle's dignified nose and finally to rumple Alexander Felton's hair into untidiness. Then it settled down in Mrs. Hanford's lap and was quiet.

"The darling!" cried Arthur Clayton enthusiastically, with a dizzy look at the pink scarf.

"Why, did you see her, too?" demanded the other three men in bewildered chorus.

"Yes—you don't mean—I say, Mrs. Hanford, what sort of a juggling game is this?" Young Clayton stared first at the rose silk scarf and then at Mrs. Hanford's sensible, motherly face above it.

"You ought to explain it, Mary," assured her husband with some concern.

"What is it all about?" demanded Miss Emeline Gray, the strong minded aunt of Arthur Clayton. "What has happened to turn all of their heads? I'm sure I saw nothing save a pretty pink silk scarf. What did you see, Madeline?"

"I see an eastern city, a beautiful houri with a pink scarf on her head, a space left for the eyes, trousers a la Turk and gold coins hanging over her forehead."

"We are missing the story. Pray, begin, Mrs. Hanford," urged Miss Gray practically.

Mrs. Hanford folded her hands over the pink and silver thing in her lap and fixed her eyes on the molten silver track that led across the Mediterranean to the rising moon.

"This is the only secret I ever kept from James," she said, not looking at her surprised husband. "When we were in Cairo he was busy hunting for scarabs to carry home to souvenir loving friends. I was seeking gauze scarfs to take to the girls at home. The dealer in scarfs had sold me several beauties, and woven in each one was some romantic story that the wily old fellow invented as he went along.

"One of the scarfs had belonged to that daughter of Pharaoh who found young Moses among the bulrushes; another of apple green and seed pearls had been the gift of Antony to Cleopatra; a third one of black and gold and crimson had jealousy and murder for its setting.

"When he brought out this dream of pink and silver I was skeptical at his air of exaggerated concern in handling it, at his respectful tone when speaking of it, at the almost fear in his voice.

"'Madame, this is the wedding scarf of the Princess Anem,' he murmured, looking over his shoulder at the dark interior of his little shop. 'She had a lover, Fedar by name, a handsome, worthless scamp, of whom her respected father strongly disapproved. There was another lover, a prince of royal blood, who sought the hand of the Princess Anem, and it was he who brought to her this royally beautiful scarf.

"It much enhances the beauty of all who wear it tenfold, but the Princess Anem would have none of its magic, for she was beautiful herself beyond compare, so she flung the prince's gift back in his face, and—and tradition says that the scarf turned to a lovely woman who became the prince's bride. As for the foolish Princess Anem'—the seller of scarfs turned his venerable head and inclined a listening ear toward the rear of his shop. I looked and thought I could make out a dim, shadowy whiteness, like the form of a young girl clad in a flowing robe.

"'As for the foolish Princess Anem,' I prompted.

"'She married the handsome Fedar and was happy forever afterward!' cried a sweet, mocking voice from the rear, and then the white shadow vanished, leaving me to stare helplessly at the seller of scarfs.

"'She is a heartless jade,' he muttered bitterly, turning the scarf in his brown fingers.

"'Is that the Princess Anem?' I asked bluntly.

"He shook his head. 'Nay, that is my graceless daughter Leila. She was promised this scarf for her marriage if she chose wisely; but, alas, she is breaking my heart and bringing my gray hairs to the grave's edge!' He forgot the bargaining instinct that usually overpowers all other sentiment in the Egyptian bazaars and beat his head against the low stone table.

"'I am very sorry,' I murmured. 'Are you quite sure your daughter has not chosen wisely? Does she love?'

"'Aye, she loves the wrong man, even as did the Princess Anem, who was never a greater coquette than my saucy Leila. Leila believes she is in love with Fedar, the water carrier, when my neighbor here, Hashour, the silk merchant, is impatiently waiting to carry her off as his bride.'

"I peeped into the next bazaar and was rewarded with a glimpse of the desirable Hashour, an enormously fat man as old as Leila's father and very ugly of feature. He was asleep and snoring audibly.

"'You want her to marry that?' I almost shrieked at him, and as I spoke I was conscious that the white shadow had returned to the shop. It paused behind the seller of scarfs as if waiting for his answer.

"The old man nodded. 'He is rich,' he said briefly. 'She could have had the scarf of the Princess Anem for a gift if she had been obedient. But she is saucy and will not wait upon her stepmother as she should, and, worst of all, she swears she will marry the water carrier or disgrace me by remaining single. I am afflicted indeed—but madame has not chosen to buy the rose scarf? It is the choicest of my stock.' His voice changed magically to a bargaining whine.

"'You cannot want to sell it. You better forgive your daughter, let her marry Fedar and wear the rose scarf,' I blundered.

"He dashed the scarf impatiently down. 'Never! If madame does not buy it I will sell it to the next comer, and I will soon have a customer for it,' he ended craftily, and I lifted my head and looked behind me to see a group of American women coming post haste toward the bazaar.

"That was enough for me. I paid an absurd price for the scarf. James, you shall never know. As I tucked it away with the other purchases I had made I heard a long drawn sigh from the white shadow as it vanished.

"It was in the next street that a girl came flying up to me and lightly touched my arm. A pair of dark flashing eyes shone above the gauze that veiled her face, and—well, any girl with a pair of eyes like those must have been exquisitely beautiful. I knew at once that it was the embodiment of the shadow that had lurked behind the seller of scarfs, and I guessed that it was his daughter Leila, she who loved Fedar the water carrier.

"She addressed me in a low, musical voice, a mixture of broken French and fluent Arabic. She thanked me for the words I had spoken to her father concerning her marriage. She giggled with delight over my horror at the fatness of Hashour, the silk merchant and her despised suitor. Then she made an appeal. She wanted to come with me as my maid and traveling companion, only as far as Alexandria, where her water carrier had gone to work on the new wharfs as a sort of foreman."

Mrs. Hanford stopped abruptly. The great vessel was drawing near to the Egyptian city, lying like a jeweled necklace along the blue Mediterranean. In the roadstead the great anchors rattled down into the moonlit water, myriads of little boats surrounded the ocean liner, and a steam tug bustled from the shore. All was confusion below on the Neptune.

"Well?" inquired Mr. Hanford, breaking the silence that had fallen upon the group.

"Let us see if all is well," murmured his wife, and so the seven, half understanding the real romance they had been listening to, followed her to the ship's rail.

As they leaned over, watching a small boat whose single oarsman was especially insistent in getting close to the Neptune's landing stairs, Mrs. Hanford uttered an exclamation of delight, and they all turned to see such a vision of beauty as is seldom vouchsafed to western eyes.

It was Leila, daughter of the seller of scarfs. Her exquisite face was unveiled and shone a vision of rose and ivory and melting onyx eyes from the background of a long hooded black cloak. "Madame, it is farewell!" she half wept, holding out little white hands to Mrs. Hanford.

Mrs. Hanford tossed the rose scarf over the lovely head and then impulsively kissed the lips of Leila. "Go to thy Fedar, Leila, and be happy forever after," she whispered, and, with a joyous laugh, the girl went. Later they saw her enter the boat with the single oarsman, and the two disappeared down a silvery track of water.

"Yours is the only story that has had a real ending," murmured Madeline Trayle as they went back to their chairs.

"All stories have a real ending if one only waits long enough," laughed Mrs. Hanford.

"I wonder—I wonder what was in that scarf?" mused Arthur Clayton aloud.

"The spirit of the east," returned Professor Trayle promptly, and nobody contradicted him.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed "Tenders for Dredging Ontario," will be received until 4 P. M., on Monday, May 13, 1912, for dredging required at the following places in the Province of Ontario:—South Lancaster, Gananoque, Kingsville, Blind River, Cobourg, Honey Harbour, Port Hope, Trenton, Deseronto.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

A separate cheque for each place for which a tender is submitted must accompany the tender. This cheque must be equal to five per cent (5 per cent) of the amount of the tender, based on the approximate quantities set opposite the name of the place, but in no case must the cheque be for a less sum than $1,500. The cheque must be accepted, on a chartered bank, and payable to the order of the Honorable the Minister of Public Works. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

ELOQUENT DISCOURSE

By Rev. W. E. Halpenny at Park Street Baptist Church

Value of Personal Work as a Means of Saving Our Companions

Rev. W. E. Halpenny, the General Secretary of the Provincial Sunday Schools Association, was in the city on Sunday, and preached in Mark street Methodist church in the morning and the Park street Baptist at night. He also addressed a very large gathering in Knox church school room in the afternoon, and on each occasion delivered a strong and ennobling message. He will speak this afternoon and evening at the Sunday School City Union convention, being held at Park street Baptist church. Mr. Halpenny is a familiar figure up and down the province, his activities being indefatigable along the lines of Sunday school education, and in which sphere he has met with a large and well-earned degree of success.

His evening discourse was based upon the text found in Genesis 44. 34: "For how shall I go to my Father, and the lad be not with me." In opening he recited a few lines of beautiful and expressive poetry illustrative of the grandeur and opportunities of life. Continuing he said:

"The only permanent investment in life is that which we make in the soul life of another. Echoes have come to us recently of the wealth that went down at sea. How useless it is after all! We have to leave everything in life when we die except what we have imparted to the soul life of another.

TWO CLASSES OF PEOPLE.

"All people are divided into two classes; either they are self-centred and selfish, or they are unselfish. Which class do you belong to? The one who is self-centred is morally cross-eyed, but the one who is unselfish is Christ centred and clear visioned. The joy of Jesus Christ is the only joy that is satisfying on earth, despite the other things which we are apt to call productive of joy, but which in our innermost souls we know are not real.

"All the food we eat represents death unto life; we kill to sustain life, but soul life means the crucifixion of earthly lusts and unreal fleeting joys. Contrast the impaired and the unimpaired life. So many men and women have so long sought the satisfying things of the world that they have lost the pleasure which comes from doing good. There are men, whose giving, for example, does not have the reflex effect. Their giving is superficial out of their abundance of wealth, and it does not touch the personal element that comes from real giving.

PERSONAL CONTACT.

"In commencing Christian work the indispensable and all powerful element is that of personal contact. This is shown by the fact that two hundred and fifty boys in a preparatory school were asked what turned them to Christ. In all three hundred and ninety-one answers were received, three hundred and seventy of which replied that it was the personal touch and inspiration, while twenty-one answered that their turning was due to inanimate things of nature.

"The only thing, then, that we have that is really of value in the world, so far as permanent results in life in the other world are concerned, is our personal influence upon the lives of others.

COMPANIONSHIP.

There are three things of outstanding importance, however, to be regarded and practiced in this life. The first of these is what is called companionship. To be without a friend is certainly a doleful condition. But to be a companion to any one always means an additional responsibility. If you have a chum, you have great influence and opportunity to accomplish some good to him. Every one with whom you come in contact is either lower or better than you, is either beneath you or nobler than you. Therefore are each of you using your influence to enoble your companion as far as in your power. One consoling thing about the effort also, is that if you set yourself to lift them, your companion will be bettered, and you yourself infinitely improved.

ANOTHER PRIVILEGE.

Then there is the great privilege that is ours as Sunday school teachers, and the myriad opportunities possible thereby of doing good. Will you ever have reason to say, "How can I go up to my Father if the lad be not with me?"

"Third and last there is the responsibility that rests upon us as fathers and mothers. I take off my hat to that sublime thought: "Be ye creators together." We are caring much about our children's education, their appearance and their position in society, but there is the one thing that so often does not concern us, their position with Jesus Christ. Let no parent risk the possibility of ever being brought to say, "For how shall I go to my Father and the lad be not with me."

MR. GEO. N. GRAHAM TO GIVE UP BUSINESS AT THE ORIENTAL HOTEL

From present indications it would appear that on Wednesday, May 1, Mr. Geo. N. Graham, who for the past twenty years has been in business, at his premises known as the Oriental Hotel, will sell the hotel equipment and vacate the property, which is part of the Dickson estate.

The lease held by Mr. Graham expires on the last day of April, tomorrow. The owners of the building offered to extend the lease for ten months, if, at the end of that time, Mr. Graham would give up his liquor license to the owners or whoever they would appoint. An arrangement such as this would mean that Mr. Graham would have to give up business on March 1, 1913, after running the hotel over the winter, on a small margin of profit, possibly at a loss, owing to the high cost of foodstuffs, fuel and other incidentals.

Such an arrangement is not satisfactory to the present proprietor and he has decided on the step, noted above. This hotel has been accommodating one half of the transients of the city for a number of years, and with the passing of this house, comes a serious loss to the city. It is not known just what the owners of the property will do.

One thing is certain, and that is, it will be a difficult matter to procure a liquor license. No action they might take would effect the license held by Mr. Graham. This is one of the hard and fast laws of the Ontario Liquor Act.

It is well known that the hotel accomodation of the city, is not what it should be. Under normal conditions, the service is for the most part adequate, but during the summer trade, or in the event of conventions or affairs of like order, accommodation is a big difficulty.

TRIO OF DISORDERLIES MADE TROUBLE FOR THE POLICE ON HUNTER STREET

EDWARD SHRIMPTON.

Charged with assaulting P. C. Brown, pleaded guilty; sentence, two months in jail at hard labor.

JOSEPH SMITH

Charged with assaulting Detective Newhall, pleaded not guilty; fined $30 or two months in jail.

HENRY LOWERMAN

Charged with assaulting Detective Newhall; fined $30 or two months in jail.

Its funny what a little booze will do. Hunter street west of George street, was as peaceful on Saturday evening at 7.30 o'clock as one might wish for, but a few minutes later, the scene was one of turmoil and excitement. It all happened because the eagle eye of P. C. Brown detected a misbehaving drunk on Hunter st., and sought to escort him to the Water street shelter. Hundreds of people gathered in an increditable short space of time and for about ten minutes there was all kinds of excitement. Clerks left their places behind the counters and looked on through the windows, policemen rushed to the assistance of their brothers in blue, and the crowd grew. Some spoke, not too wisely, as the police officers took their men to the station and it is just possible there will be some more police court cases. The sympathy of a crowd is sometimes misplaced.

FINE OF $2.

The aftermath this morning at police court, tells the story. The first case was that of Joseph Adams, charged with being drunk and disorderly. He pleaded guilty and was a $2 fine. He was picked out from the crowd which followed Detective Newhall and Lowerman down George street.

THE MAN IN BLUE

Edward Shrimpton was charged with assaulting P.C. Brown, when he attempted to make an arrest, to which he pleaded not guilty. P.C. Brown testified that he met the accused in front of the American House when he was arresting a prisoner. He interfered and a struggle took place. "Two young men tried to help me, and Henry Bowerman also interfered," said the witness. "P.C. Meagher arrived on the scene and we got the prisoner, Shrimpton, to his feet. He still resisted arrest. There was an angry crowd behind us and someone threw stones with the result that P.C. Meagher was struck on the back of the neck. After considerable difficulty, we got the defendant locked up.

P. C. Meagher gave evidence to the effect that he assisted P. C. Brown and gave a statement similar to the one given. Detective Newhall also gave evidence.

COULDN'T REMEMBER

Edward Shrimpton, the defendant, did not remember striking the officer but the Magistrate thought the evidence was sufficient to convict him. His Worship remarked that the police intended to keep order, and as the people should know that it was a serious thing to assault an officer of the law, he would sentence Edward Shrimpton to two months at hard labor in the county jail.

Joseph Smith was charged with assaulting Detective Newhall with intent to prevent the lawful apprehension of Shrimpton, and pleaded not guilty to the charge.

LANDED ON THE DETECTIVE

Detective Newhall gave evidence that he was assisting the officers to bring Shrimpton to the station when Smith pushed through the crowd and struck him on the left jaw. A street railway man interfered and knocked Smith into the gutter and he got away. "I arrested the prisoner in a house on Aylmer street at 9.20 p.m. and he was very sorry for what had happened, but I brought him to the station," said witness. Magistrate Dumble imposed a fine of $30 to be paid forthwirth or 2 months in jail.

HE WAS HANDCUFFED.

Henry Bowerman pleaded not guilty to the charge of assaulting Detective Newhall while he was making an arrest.

Detective Newhall testified that the prisoner put his arm around his neck and prevented him from assisting the officer. "I arrested him and brought the accused to Minicolo's fruit store and later took him to the station. This man was handcuffed.

Henry Bowerman the defendant denied Newhall's statement and stated he was trying to give the prisoner, Shrimpton, his hat, and that he had no intention of interfering with an officer.

Bowerman said Detective Newhall struck him on the head, with what he called a "life preserver" while in the corridor of the police station, and also tried to strike him about the face, but he managed to protect himself with his hands. Later while they searched, he said the officer struck him in the stomach.

Detective Newhall explained that the prisoner attempted to hit him, which is quite likely, judging from the manner the men behaved on Hunter street.

His Worship imposed a fine of $30 or two months in jail.

FINE OF $5.

A local young man was charged with using profane language in a public place. C.P.R. Detective Pinchin gave evidence that he was assisting a traveller who was under the influence of liquor to a hotel when this fellow called him vile names and threatened to "knock his block off."

His Worship imposed a fine of $5, and stated he would not tolerate such a thing on the streets of Peterborough.

ANNUAL WEEK OF PRAYER AND SELF DENIAL

The attention of our readers is called to the annual week of self-denial and prayer, in connection with the work of the Salvation Army in Canada, from May 5th, to 11th, inclusive. The purpose of this special effort, as is now generally well understood, is to raise funds for the maintenance and further extension of the many and varied branches of this wonderful organization in both the home and foreign mission fields.

In addition to the personal contributions given by the individual members of the Army themselves, an appeal is made to all who are interested in religious and philanthopic work to join with them in this worthy effort, and hundreds of Canada's citizens of every rank and station in life esteem it an honor and privilege to thus associate themselves with the good work.

Locally, the amount to be raised is $500.00, and a general canvass of the city will be made during the next two weeks. All collectors will be furnished with special self-denial collecting books duly certified by the commanding officer. Donations by mail will be promptly acknowledged, if sent to Ensign J. H. Merrett, 320 King street, city. It is sincerely hoped that all friends will respond liberally to this appeal, and thus give encouragement to the work of the local corps, as well as to the organization as a whole.

AMATEUR SKIPPER WAS CAUGHT BY THE CURRENT

One of the members of the T.A.S. had a very exciting experience the other day. He went down to see about fixing up T.A.S. Park for the coming season and found to his surprise the property was covered with water. He built a raft and sailed about, but went too close to the current and was carried down about half a mile where he was picked up by some people who noticed his predicament from the shore.

ASTRONOMICAL

The Astronomical Society meets in the Collegiate next Monday evening, when Dr. Marsh will give a free lecture on "The planets as seen from the giant telescope." The public is cordially invited to be present. Bring the ladies.

A Morning Run

The Fire Brigade had a run this morning at 10.40 o'clock to the residence of Mr. Thos. O'Hara, 251 George street. The cause of the alarm, which was rung in from box 23, was a blaze in the shed of the shed of the house caused by some hot ashes being put there. The chemicals were used on the flames and little or no damage was done.

The Dominion Government has voted $10,000 to the Titanic fund.

Mrs Holcombe spent Friday and Saturday last in Peterboro.

Mr. Bill Miller of Norwood spent Sunday in town.

Mr. Bob Elliott spent Monday in Tweed.

Mr. Stanley Holcombe is in Toronto

Mr. J. Knox and Mr. L. Bennett attended the dance in Hastings on Monday last.

Miss E. Sanderson of Madoc was the guest of Miss M. Seeney last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Torritt and son, William, of Tweed, spent last week here the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Patterson.

The Japanese Tea and Sale of work which was held in the basement of St. John's church on Friday last, proved a great success. The Japanese tea room opened at 6 p.m., and the girls of Junior W.A. dressed as Japanese, waited on table. The little tea room was prettily decorated with Japanese parcels, lanterns, and fans, and on each table was a daffodil flower.

Mr. Smith Clixby, a former resident of Havelock, passed away at Mrs. Henderson's, at Peterboro, on Wednesday last. The remains were brought down on the noon train and taken to Mr. Ben Chambers', where the funeral took place to Maple Grove cemetery.

PHILIPPINE SAVAGES.

The Uncouth Tingians Are Fond of Ornaments and Gay Colors.

There are many strange, uncivilized people among the Asiatic Americans of the Philippine Islands.

The Tingians are a very uncouth tribe of savages. Their head women have their arms almost completely covered with strings of beads, wound so as to form beautiful and striking designs. A long, heavy string of beads is also twisted around the hair and hangs down the back like a braid. The skirt of these head women is white, with a blue border, and the waist is of light yellow. They smoke pipes of solid silver, ornamented with bangles, in the bowls of which pieces of cigar are inserted.

The typical young Tingian chieftain wears a stiff collar of beads and a gayly colored calico shirt, over which is a sort of scarf trimmed with many silver coins. The members of this tribe are very fond of silver. They make a large number of finger rings from silver coins, and each man usually has from five to ten of these rings about his person, but not necessarily on his fingers.

The Tingians are fond of a peculiar dance. The music is produced by beating with the palms of the hands on "gansas" or tomtoms. The dancers, a man and a woman, with arms outstretched, circle about each other in a spiral, the man pursuing the woman with a quick, jerky step. As they approach the center of the spiral he suddenly swoops upon her, when she always eludes him by suddenly darting out of his reach.—Forrest Clark in Leslie's.

SLEEP AND REST.

Every Organ of the Human Body Has Its Periods of Repose.

All the organs of life rest in some way or other. The heart has an interval of rest between each combined act of contraction and expansion and the beginning of a fresh act. Between each expiration of the lungs and the succeeding inspiration there is a period of repose. Physiologists have calculated that the heart reposes during about one-fourth of the time. Certain of the other organs suspend their activity in part during sleep.

Old physiologists supposed that sleep was caused by the pressure of the blood on the brain. But modern physiology, with a tendency to regard the brain as the origin of all force and of all functions of the body, inclines to the view that sleep is caused by a withdrawal of blood from the brain.

As a rule, the larger the brain the more sleep it requires. Webster went to bed at 9 o'clock and rose at 5. General Grant used to say during his campaigns, "I can do nothing without nine hours' sleep."

A curious trait has marked men of large brain—that of sleeping at will. Bonaparte used to throw himself on the ground and go to sleep within a space of two minutes. Pitt was a sound sleeper and slept night after night in the house of commons while his colleagues watched the debate and roused him when it was necessary that he should speak.—New York Herald.

Good Business.

A famous pistol shot told a shooting story at a supper in San Francisco.

"There was a party of amateurs here in Frisco," he said, "who thought they would do some live pigeon shooting, so they ordered thirty birds from a suburban dealer.

"The shoot came off duly. It was a wonder. To give you a correct idea of it I must quote from a letter sent by the dealer to the amateurs the next day. The letter ran:

"'Gentlemen—I thank you for your order and beg to state that I will be only too happy to supply you with birds for all future shoots. The entire thirty pigeons, for which you paid me 15 cents a head, returned home safely and, moreover, brought two strays with them. My price to you hereafter will be 1 cent per pigeon.'"—Los Angeles Times.

Where They Resemble.

"A man, like a watch, is known by his works," observed the epigram maker.

"And by the hours he keeps," added the wife.

"And by the spring in him," said the athlete.

"And by his being sometimes fast," remarked the reformer.

"And by the way his hands go up," put in the pugilist.

"And by his not always going when we want him to," finished the girl who'd been robbed of her beauty sleep.—Boston Transcript.

Reading Character.

No Change.

Little Willie had been present at a christening of a baby cousin and had taken great interest in the ceremony. A few days later he had to be vaccinated, and when the operation was over he inquired of the doctor, "What's my name now?"

There Is a Difference.

What is the difference between a cradle and a Scotsman's baby? The one is a child's cot and the other is a Scot's child.—London Tit-Bits.

Let us believe we can and hope for the rest.—De Finod.

EASTERN INTERESTS IN WESTERN PROJECTS

Strong Group of Eastern Capitalists Behind Peace River Investment Company, Which Has Secured 100,000 Acres in Block.

Toronto, April 29— Messrs. Gundy & Gundy of Toronto and Calgary announce to-day, that arrangements have been completed here for the organization of the Peace River Land and Investment Company Limited, with an authorized capital of $1,000,000, of which $675,000 is now issued. A strong group of financial interests in both Eastern and Western Canada have become largely interested in the enterprise and the first Board of Directors in the new company will include such well-known Canadians as Hon. Geo. Taylor, Senator Gananoque, Ont.; Thomas Gigson, Esq., General Counsel; Lake Superior Corporation, Toronto, Ont.; Hon. Peter Talbot, Senator Lacombe Alta., John Flett Esq., Toronto, Ont; Hon. Peter McLaLren, Perth, Ont.; J. A. Harvey, K.C., Vancouver, B.C.; H. W. Gundy Esq., Calgary, Alta.; Dr. D. B. Neely, M.P., Humboldt, Sask.; Hon. Valentine Ratz, New Hamburg, Ont., Mr. J. F. Gundy of Toronto is Secretary-Treasurer.

The Company has purchased 100 000 acres of agricultural land in the Peace River District of British Columbia, the land been situated on both sides of the Halfway River, immediately adjoining the Dominion Government block in British Columbia. The Company by its charter, also has the right to deal in town sites, timber, coal, and other minerals and on this account should play an important part in the future growth and development of the entire Peace River District. A year ago the British Columbia Government, by an Order in Council, withdrew from sale all lands not previously disposed of in the Peace River District and the land purchased by the Company was the only tract of its size secured from the B.C. Government previous to the withdrawal of the land from sale. It is understood that negotiations are already under way by which the Company may sell its entire holdings en bloc to German interests for Colonization purposes.

Java's Boiling Lake of Mud.

One of the greatest natural wonders in Java, "the fire island," a large lake of boiling mud, is situated almost in the center of the plains of Grobogana, fifty "paals" to the northeast of Solo. It is almost two miles in circumference, and in the center immense columns of soft, hot mud may be seen continually rising and falling like great black timbers thrust forth and then suddenly withdrawn by a giant's hands. Besides the phenomenon of the columns there are two gigantic bubbles near the western edge which fill up like huge balloons and explode on an average three times per minute.

London will likely build a 26 mile electric railway to Port Burwell.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dredging Ontario," will be received until 4 P.M., on Monday, May 13, 1912, for dredging required at the following places in the Province of Ontario:—

Goderich, Napanee, Picton, Telegraph and Nigger Islands.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

A separate cheque for each place for which a tender is submitted must accompany the tender. This cheque must be equal to five per cent. (5 per cent.) of the amount of the tender, based on the approximate quantities set opposite the name of a place, but in no case must the cheque be for a less sum than $1,500. The cheque must be accepted, on a chartered bank, and payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

CONVICTS ENJOYED ONLY ONE HOUR AND A HALF OF LIBERTY

The Four Western Bad Men Who Tried So Hard to Get Away at Toronto While Being Taken From Manitoba to Kingston, Have Made Another Break for Freedom, But Failed.

Kingston, April 30.—The last of the five prisoners who escaped from the penitentiary yesterday was caught shortly after one o'clock, in a shed on the Straubenzie property, half a mile away. It was found that he was in prison garb. He put up quite a fight when the guards came upon him, but it was a case of ten to one.

The five prisoners — including the four from the west who made a desperate effort to escape at Toronto not long ago have been confined to the isolation ward, and one of them, who was allowed out in front of his cell to sweep the floor, overpowered Keeper Madden and Guard Ross, severely injuring the latter. Dr. Phelan, the penitentiary surgeon, was also attacked, and with Madden, was stripped of his clothing, and afterwards locked in a cell.

Taking the keys away from the officers, the one prisoner then set the other four free. They then raced to the north gate, where Gatekeeper Rutherford, seeing the officer, as he supposed, opened the gate and was promptly knocked on the head, and pushed aside.

Then it was an easy matter for the men to get into the open. The men ran to the Warden's grounds, where they knocked Keeper McCarthy, who tried to intercept them, over the head.

They then ran in the direction of the prison quarry, where Brown was overpowered by a mounted guard, sent out with a rifle. He surrendered, and was turned over to the quarry gang, and returned to the prison.

Another of the prisoners, Kelley, was caught by Watchman Clark in Portsmouth, with the assistance of another officer. Two of the others were caught at Cataraqui Creek, on the front road, after endeavoring to elude and escape five officers by jumping into the water and ducking their heads under the water when shots were fired. After a time they surrendered, and were returned to the penitentiary.

The other convict, Frank Jones, in uniform, was caught about 1.15 p.m., hiding in a shed in Portsmouth. A little girl found him there, and notified the authorities. He said he was a guard from the penitentiary, and that he was looking for the men who had escaped. He was hustled into a rig, and was soon back at the penitentiary. All of them will be charged with escaping from the penitentiary.

The fifth man of the party was Vincent McNeil, sentenced six months ago to five years for burglary. He hails from Detroit.

Guard Davis was alone seriously hurt of the officials attacked. He is in the General Hospital, but will recover. The rest are all at their homes, nursing sore heads.

It was announced on Saturday that a thorough investigation was to be made by the Government into the work of the penitentiary. This is the second daring escape inside a short time. Chartrand, an insane convict, escaped last month, and the investigation over that has not been completed yet.

The western quartette who made the break for liberty are well remembered, for on March 12 they figured in a sensation attempt to get away at the Union Station, Toronto, just after the train began to move on the way to Kingston. Their sudden attack on the guards was unsuccessful only because Toronto police were able to catch the moving coach and get into the fight in time. The Mecum brothers (otherwise Jones and Kelly), were sentenced at Winnipeg for highway robbery and shooting a policeman. Their companions, Bonnar and Brown, are also under long sentence for crimes of violence.

BAD FIRE IN DAMASCUS CITY

Constantinople, April 30.—The great bazaar quarters in Damascus have been destroyed by fire. Several persons were killed and many injured, and the damage is estimated at $10,000,000.

The fire began at midnight Friday, and lasted until late Saturday night.

Damascus is one of the holy cities of the Mohammedans; capital of the vilayet of Syria, and is noted among other things for its numerous bazaars.

These are designated by the name of some particular trade or community. The bazaar quarters comprise long streets covered in with high woodwork and lined with shops, stalls, warehouses and cafes. The Greek bazaar, one of the largest, was rebuilt after its destruction by fire in 1893.

In the midst of the bazaar stands the house of Asad Pasha, one of the handsomest in Damascus. There are many miles of these bazaars, all of which are luxuriously fitted up.

Explosion In Maternity Hospital.

Montreal, April 30.—An explosion of gas in the pharmacy of the Maternity Hospital of the Sisters of Mercy, at the corner of St. Hubert and Lagauchetierre streets, yesterday, started a blaze which caused much alarm, but which the firemen subdued before it could spread to other parts of the building.

Rev. Mother Ste. Alphonse was burned about the face and hands, but is in no danger.

Cheap Marconigrams.

London, April 30.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the Commons yesterday Postmaster Samuel said he had completed arrangements for accepting Marconigrams from Canada to New York. The full rate from Montreal to New York is eight pence a word with corresponding reductions for other points. For deferred messages, in plain language, the charge is four pence from Montreal to New York, and from other pro rata. The company will not guarantee speed in transmission.

Smyrna, April 30.—The steamer Texas belonging to the Archipelago American Steamship Company, struck a mine at the entrance to the Gulf of Smyrna last evening and sank. One hundred and forty persons aboard were drowned.

NO POSTMORTEM TO BE HELD

Developments Promised for the Inquest on Thursday.

Brantford, April 30.—Coroner Ashton decided here yesterday that a postmortem examination in the case of Lottie Gibson, the 18-year-old girl; whose body was recovered from the mill race Saturday, was entirely unnecessary, and, greatly to the relief of the family, the body was conveyed to her father's home.

Coroner Ashton announced that there was nothing unusual in the girl's condition. It was his belief that some overpowering worry put the girl into a state of distraction which caused the act. The letter received doubtless was the cause of the trouble. Just what epistle is referred to is a matter which will, it is thought, be cleared up at the inquest on Thursday night.

It was largely through the untiring efforts of Fire Chief Lewis that the recovery of the body was made just before night set in.

Developments are promised at the inquest Thursday night. Friends of the girl, members of the family and others are being summoned. Samuel Gibson, father of the dead girl, is determined on the fullest enquiries possible.

The Collegiate Institute Literary Society annual Concert will be held in the Assembly Hall, Friday evening, May 3rd. Tickets 50 cents. 3d

AWAITS FOR ACCURATE REPORTS

London, April 30.—Francis Dyke Acland, Parliamentary Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, on behalf of the British Foreign Office, replying to a series of questions on the subject of the Titanic disaster, yesterday said:

"May I suggest that it is undesirable to make any more references to imperfect and possibly inaccurate reports of the proceedings of the committee of the United States Senate. The President of the Board of Trade is taking steps to obtain an authoritative report of the proceedings of the committee in case it may be of use in the enquiry here.

"No complaints have been received by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of the detention of British subjects. The committee has statutory powers to summon witnesses and no treaty or convention is required to give the United States jurisdiction over British subjects while they are on United States territory. The position appears to be that the Senate committee is within its rights in holding the enquiry and requiring the attendance of witnesses."

SHOT HIS WIFE AND HIMSELF

New York, April 30.—Mrs. Pauline de Brahms was found dead by the police yesterday in the bathroom of her apartments on West 35th street, her body unclothed and partially covered with sawdust and old rags, and several bullet wounds in her head and body.

In the closet of an adjoining room they found the body of her husband. It was still warm. There was a bullet wound in his temple, and in his lap lay an automatic revolver.

Work on New C.P.R. Line.

Belleville, April 30.—Construction work on the new line of the C.P.R. will be commenced just west of this city on Wednesday, and the two gangs will work eastward and westward. It is expected that the C.P.R. will have the right of way over the C.N.R., and then through this city.

MORGUE SHIP MAKES PORT WITH BODIES

One Hundred and Ninety of Titanic's Victims on Board---One Hundred and Sixteen Buried at Sea---All Bodies Discovered Had Life Preservers.

Special to the Review.

Halifax, N.S., April 30. — While church bells tolled and flags fluttered at half mast, the cable ship MacKay-Bennett came slowly to dock shortly after nine-thirty this morning. Her crew with bared heads manned the rails as the death ship was received by twenty sailors from the Niobe. On the aft deck was a huge pile of coffins containing bodies and on forward deck lay fifty uncoffined bodies covered with tarpaulin. It was announced that the cable-ship had on board one hundred and ninety bodies and had found it necessary to bury at sea no less than one hundred and sixteen. Every body picked up, it was stated, had a life belt on, and none bore bullet marks. Two of the bodies were those of women. When the tarpaulin was removed from the corpses on the forward deck all were seen stretched on their backs, many in attitudes of repose but others with horribly contorted features. Capt. Lardner was satisfied with the identification of Astor's body but said he could not be sure whether that body identified as Widener was that of the traction magnate or his valet.

Not until noon were all uncoffined bodies removed and work then started taking off those in caskets which will occupy most of the day. The number of identified dead won't be known till to-night, when the White Star line will issue an official statement. Captain Lardner states he couldn't accommodate the large number of bodies recovered but thinks the only passenger buried at sea was Widener or his valet. Others were members of the crew. Only eighteen bodies of women were found and most of these were buried at sea. Lardner states the sea for an area of thirty miles square was dotted with wreckage and bodies. The majority of corpses were held upright in the water by the life belts. They floated in groups sometimes numbering fifty.

Hearse Ship Delayed.

Halifax, N.S., April 30.—This has been a dreary day of suspense for many awaiting the Mackay-Bennett with the bodies of friends. Early in the forenoon they became aware that another night must pass before the ordeal of claiming and identifying should begin. This notice came in the form of a message from Capt. Lardner, that he would brings his ship into the harbor to-day.

It has been difficult to understand why the Mackay-Bennett has been so long in making the trip. The Florizel, en route for New York, left a point equally distant from Halifax about the same time that the cable ship started on her journey to Halifax. The Florizel arrived Sunday afternoon, and the Mackay-Bennet does not arrived till to-day.

A shipping man thought the reason was that Capt. Lardner had probably come by a route south of Sable Island in order to avoid the possibility of ice, for the Mackay-Bennett is not equipped to fight ice.

HOTELKEEPER IMPLICATES COMMISSIONER AND BANKER

Chairman of License Board is Said to Have Guaranteed Renewal for $500

Goderich, April 30.—That William Patterson, chairman of the Centre Huron License Board, offered to guarantee, if given $500, that the license of the Union Hotel, conducted by Michael Farr, would not be cut off when the prescribed reduction of licenses was carried out, was the accusation made by Farr at yesterday's opening sitting of the court of enquiry, presided over by Eudo Saunders.

Farr also swore that License Inspector Asquith had given him the impression that he would do well to accept the terms named by Patterson.

L. E. Dancey, counsel for Patterson, endeavored to get an adjournment until to-day, as he had not seen the declaration made by Farr to the Provincial License Department, but the commissioner said that he intended proceeding.

Farr swore that he had first been approached by another party, who intimated that his license might be saved. About a week and a half after the reduction bylaw passed, Patterson and the other party came to his hotel. He told Patterson he spent $4,000 on his hotel, and asked Patterson to spare the axe so far as he was concerned. Patterson replied that there were two to be cut off, and said that he had worked over in Hullet against local option, and that he did not purpose doing anything for nothing.

Farr finally said that the man who first approached him was Andrew Porter, local manager of the Sterling Bank, who had told him his license was in danger. Porter had said he had influence with the commissioners. On Feb. 29, or March 8, Porter phoned him that the license commissioners were meeting in town, and Farr went down to the bank. Porter told him they were talking of the transfer of the British Hotel license, and said that would change their plans. Then Porter had said witness did not go after Patterson hard enough on the night of the meeting in his hotel. After the next meeting of the commissioners, Patterson came down to his hotel.

A Loss to Art.

Two pictures that were much admired at the recent exhibition of the Canadian Art Club, notably the "Sheep Shearer," by Horatio Walker, and the "Magic Circle," by George Bridgeman, were damaged in transit to their home in the Albright Gallery in Buffalo recently. The Horatio Walker was but slightly hurt, but the "Magic Circle," by Bridgeman, was irretrievably ruined, being smashed by being run into with a shunting train at the Suspension Bridge. This picture by Bridgeman (an old Toronto boy) was felt to be a fine work of art, and its loss is one that cannot be replaced in the world of art.

Swans Carried Over Falls.

Old river men say more swans are here this year than have visited Niagara at one time in the past two decades. Many are killed by being carried over the cataract. Twenty-three dead swans were taken from the river below the falls in one day recently.

Mabee Has Appendicitis.

Toronto, April 30.—Hon. J. P. Mabee, chairman of the Dominion Railway Board, is ill in St. Michael's Hospital with appendicitis. Mr. Mabee was taken ill after the sitting of the board yesterday, and his physician, Dr. J. E. Elliott, was summoned. He was immediately removed to the hospital and his physician reports that he will be unable to sit on the board for some time. It is understood that his condition is not critical, and it is uncertain as to whether an operation will be necessary.

FORTUNES IN SEAWEED.

Turning It Into Food, Clothes, Boots Medicine, Furniture and Fertilizer.

Seaweed is rapidly establishing a claim as the greatest friend of man, and many new uses are being discovered for it in foreign countries.

If the experience of the Japanese and the dwellers on the western shores of Norway, Scotland and Ireland is to be accepted, there are huge fortunes to be made from seaweed. The Japanese, including the Formosans, employ some 600,000 persons in the seaweed industries. These are mainly engaged in preparing edible products, China alone consumes $600,000 worth of the gelatinous articles every year.

The edible seaweeds of Great Britain and Ireland are advancing in popularity even among London epicures. They should be boiled thoroughly. In summer 12 hours is required for this culinary process, but in winter two hours is stated to be sufficient. Served with roast meats they are said to be extremely palatable. It is claimed by English champions of the seaweed that the development of the industry would provide lucrative employment for thousands during the winter and establish an inexhaustible supply of food for war time.

The London industry which employs Devonshire and Japanese seaweed in the manufacture of such diverse objects as cloth, stout shoes, golf balls, policemen's boots, picture frames, marbled floors and electric switchboards, by no means monopolizes its uses. In Cornwall seaweed is used as a fertilizer for the land, in France it finds utility as a stiffener for mattresses and a size for straw hats. The native fishermen of South Australia make ropes and fishing nets from local varieties.

Iodine, a chemical of great medicinal value, claims seaweed as its principal source. The production of "kelp," or burned seaweed, which is the first stage in its preparation, is an industry that is rapidly developing in northwestern Europe. The hardy kelp burners of the Hebrides and Irish coast have now strong rivals in Scandinavia, and in one Norwegian province at least the revenue from this work already exceeds that derived from fishing and agriculture.

In America it has been found to be a valuable source of potash, greatly needed as a fertilizer.

Chemong Bridge

Some of the farmers to-day stated that the Chemong bridge was about a foot under water and when they drove over it the water was up nearly to the hubs of the wheel.

RAILWAYS DISCRIMINATE

Give Preference to Through Grain Says Millers.

Toronto, April 30.—Complaints made by the Dominion Millers' Association regarding delay in the shipment and transportation of grain eastward from Port Arthur and Fort William caused a lively discussion at the session of the Dominion Railway Board yesterday afternoon.

C. B. Watts, secretary of the Dominion Millers' Association, presented the case from the millers' standpoint, while the C.P.R. was represented by E. W. Beatty, their solicitor, and the C.N.R. by George Shaw general traffic manager.

Mr. Watts claimed three things in particular. One was that the railways showed discrimination in favor of the export trade in shipping grain eastward from Port Arthur and Fort William. The grain destined to St. John, N.B., or Halifax, got the preference as regards speed in shipment and transportation, over the grain destined to points in eastern Canada. Another point claimed by Mr. Watts is that the different railway companies show discrimination by giving first shipping to the grain from the terminal elevators that has been brought there over their own lines.

Mr Watts' third complaint was that all the railways lack the facilities for handling the traffic. These three matters regarding grain shipments eastward have been complained of by the Dominion Millers' Association since 1905, and they have not yet been settled.

The hearing was adjourned until to-day.

A number of cases were left over till next week when the commission meets again at Ottawa.

FUND FOR THE CAPTAIN'S WIDOW

New York, April 30.—American friends of Capt. Edward J. Smith, late commander of the Titanic, propose to arrange for some testimonial to his bravery, and to create a fund for his widow and daughter, who live in Southampton, England.

After a conference at the Union League Club it is announced that a committee of arrangements, including J. P. Morgan, jr., Charles Lanier, and a number of other well-known men, had been appointed. Wm. A. Nash of the Corn Exchange Bank was named to act as treasurer.

Major-Gen. Grant Left $10,000.

New York, April 30.—The will of the late Major-Gen. Frederick Dent Grant, U.S.A., filed in the Surrogate office yesterday, leaves his entire estate, valued at over $10,000, to his wife, Ida Honore Grant.

WILD GOOSE RAISING.

This Man Has Wild Ducks For Use as Decoys by Hunters.

Farming wild animals! What with the rapid decrease in all kinds of game, and especially of the fur-bearing quadrupeds, it really begins to look as though this might be a sound commercial proposition. That is what the Canadian Government is doing with the last remnant of the big buffalo herds, and this spring an addition of two hundred calves is expected to the band of bison in the huge park at Wainwright, Sask.

Not so very long ago some enterprising gentlemen in the west bred wolves. When the pups had grown to big, ugly fellows with an insatiable appetite for dead horse, they were shot and their heads taken to the authorities for the bounty. A fifteen-dollar per was quite a profitable game until the law found out.

Others go in for foxes or skunks. While in an application just come to hand at Toronto, a request is made for a tract of rough land in Northern Ontario whereon the grantee may farm everything from bears to weasels.

When the Belgian hare craze was rife here some twelve years ago, many Canadians had hutches in their back yards. Of course, these last-named animals can hardly be termed wild, but purchasers of the rodents at $25 a pair were wild enough when they found out what an unprofitable business they had embarked in.

A well-known citizen, a great sportsman with a farm on the Credit River, has had wonderful success in raising wild geese and ducks. He is a member of a duck-shooting club, with large leases on Lake Scugog, and here in the fall of the year the wild ducks bred in captivity are made useful for decoying their roving brethren.

Painted wooden imposters are usually anchored out to tempt the wild ducks within range of the blind behind which the hunters hide. Oftentimes the keen eyes of the birds will detect something wrong in even the best of these decoys. But when a live duck "quacks" and flaps his wings, even the most skeptical of the breed are prone to think all is right. One of these tethered black ducks is a very deadly bait, and the wild birds very seldom fail to answer his lusty call.

Similarly the wild geese are used in the spring of the year. Just as the ice is breaking up and the warm days of April make one long for outdoors, the grey Canada goose in thousands come into the feeding grounds at Lake Scugog to fill their crops with the remnants of last year's wild rice. It is then that Toronto hunters make their bags. Impossible to approach in any other way, the wary wild goose is inveigled to within gunshot of the blind by the blandishments of the tethered captives whose importunate honkings are not to be ignored.

WITNESSES AT ENQUIRY FAVOR AN IMPROVEMENT IN WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY

Women's Memorial to Heroes.

Washington, April 30.—Mrs. W. H. Taft has given the first dollar to a Woman's Titanic Memorial, which it is proposed shall be erected in Washington, to commemorate the men who went down with the ship.

A committee of 100 women from all states has been named, and no contributions will be accepted from men. Mrs. John Hays Mrs. John Hammond and others are interested.

Two Berlin Boys Arrested.

Niagara Falls, Ont., April 30.—Edward Kumpel and Oscar Shebel, Berlin boys, are being held by the police pending the arrival of an officer to take them home. Kumpel is alleged to have stolen money from his father. They were bound for the States when apprehended.

CHAS. GIBSON AS SMITH MAN IN MURDER CASE

Toronto, April 30.—The clouds of adverse evidence gathered even more closely over the head of Charles Gibson, the young man charged with the murder of Joseph Rosenthal at the inquest, continued at the morgue last night. He was positively and dramatically identified as the man "Smith" who had so urgently sought the dead man during the days immediately preceding the murder. His stepmother and younger brother flatly contradicted each other in their testimony as to a shirt which another witness swore was one left at his home by Gibson on the morning after the murder, and a witness again told of his arrival at home on the night of the murder with his boots and the bottom of his trouser leg covered with mud.

Meyer Erlock, employed by Eli Dunkelman at his junk yard at 117 West Richmond street, declared that Gibson was the same man who had come to the yard three times on the Thursday before the murder asking for Rosenthal, and saying to tell him that "Mr. Smith" wanted to see him upon very particular business.

John Woodhouse, who roomed with Mrs. Britt at 149 Ontario street, where Gibson's father and family lived at the time of the murder, swore that on the morning after the murder he had heard a prolonged sound, as of somebody brushing clothes in the room across the hall from his own, and in which Gibson slept.

An adjournment was taken until Thursday.

PAYS TO TRAVEL BY FIRST CLASS

New York, April 30.—In a summary of the lessons of the Titanic disaster, Lawrence Beasley, a University of Cambridge man, who was among the survivors, asks: "What was the relative chance of escape for a first-class passenger and a steerage passenger?"

His answer is as follows: "I have worked out the percentage of the saved of the four classes and find it as follows:

"First-class, 63.6 per cent.; second-class, 39 per cent.; steerage, 26.7 per cent.; officers and men, 22.3 per cent. They are instructive, these figures. The payment of about $75, excess of first over third gives you more than twice the chance of your life being saved."

TWO YEARS FOR LANDING PUNCH

Brockville, April 30.—William Barker, who had been found guilty of an unprovoked assault upon Walter Neill, was yesterday sentenced by the police magistrate to two years less one day in the Central Prison.

Barker, who has won some renown as a pugilist, encountered Neill leaving a hotel and without excuse, landed a right swing to the face, breaking the man's nose.

Probing Guelph's Fire Department.

Guelph, April 30.—An investigation will commence to-night into the petition of the local firemen complaining of lack of harmony between the men and the chief. Mayor Thorp will preside, and the fire and light committee will act as jury. Counsel have been engaged by both parties, and considerable interest is being taken in possible developments.

Vedrines Injured.

Paris, April 30.—Jules Vedrines, the most famousr and most popular aviator of France, is probably fatally injured as a result of a fall with his monoplane yesterday morning at St. Denis, a suburb of Paris, while flying from Doual in the Department of the Nord to Madrid.

The Ruling Passion.

A gambler on his deathbed, having seriously taken leave of his physician, who told him that he could not live beyond eight o'clock next morning, exerted the small strength he had left to call the doctor back, which having accomplished with difficulty, for he could hardly exceed a whisper, "Doctor," said he, "I'll bet you five guineas I live till nine."—London Tit-Bits.

Sailors and Officers of Wrecked Vessel Have All Been Examined and Will Be Released To-day—London Man Says the Speed Increased Daily During the Trip—Ismay to Be Quizzed Again.

Washington, April 30.—After a day of discussion intended to discover the needed reforms in the use of wireless telegraphy at sea, the Senate committee investigating the Titanic disaster yesterday entered on the final stage of its enquiry.

To-day the officers and crew of the sunken ship will be released and will be free to return to their homes in England. At the same time J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the International Mercantile Marine, will be quizzed searchingly as to his ideas of regulations to make a repetition of the disaster impossible.

G. Marconi, inventor of the wireless telegraph; F. M. Sammis, chief engineer of the American Marconi Co.; Wireless Operators Bride and Cottam, a passenger, Hugh Woolner of England, and Fourth Officer Boxhall of the Titanic, were yesterday's witnesses. Virtually all agreed that better regulation of wireless communication at sea was essential.

It was made clear early in the hearing that the committee already had made up its mind to advocate legislation preventing wireless operators on shipboard from holding back details of disasters. Mr. Marconi and Mr. Sammis both acknowledged that a mistake had been made in sending messages to Bride and Cottam, on board the Carpathia, not to give anything until they had seen Marconi and Sammis ashore.

Senator Smith held out no promise as to when the officers of the White Star Line would be released, but it was the general understanding that they would be freed as soon as Mr. Ismay is examined. This, it was expected, would not take long unless some additional facts brought out made it necessary.

Hugh Woolner of London, a survivor of the Titanic, was asked to recite his observations on the trip from Southampton until the accident, with especial reference to the speed of the Titanic and her equipment.

"The speed increased daily," said the witness. "One day the record was 314 miles, and the next it had increased to 356 miles. It was the last record posted, I think."

Mr. Woolner said that he inspected the lifeboats and the life apparatus. He said he considered the work of the sailors very slow.

"I made one remark to Captain Smith," said Woolner, "when I heard him say that he wanted all the passengers to go to 'A' deck to get into the boats there. I went up to him and saluted and said: 'Captain, haven't you forgotten that all those windows on 'A' deck are closed?' And he said, 'My God, you're right; call those people back.' Only a few had gone down and they came back. Everything went all right after that."

J. G. Boxhall was questioned about the lights of a steamer seen from the decks of the Titanic the night of the disaster. Boxhall said he was quite positive they were a steamer's lights, repeating the testimony in regard to this given on his previous appearance before the committee.

Boxhall said he saw rockets fired from the Carpathia early Monday morning before she reached the scene of the disaster.

Senator Smith said he had evidence to support the belief that the Californian was but 14 miles from the Titanic.

"Do you think you could have seen the lights of the Californian?" he asked.

"I don't know," said Boxhall. "Five miles is the greatest range the British Board of Trade requires ships' lights to show, but we know that they can be seen further on clear nights such as that. But I should think that we could not have seen the Californian's lights that far that night."

"Had the Californian fired rockets to signal you that night, do you think you would have seen them fourteen miles?"

"I think not."

Boxhall was followed on the stand by Operator Cottam of the Carpathia.

Senator Smith drew from the witness the fact that he had received $750 from a New York newspaper for his story of the disaster. He was asked if he had received a message instructing him to "kill message containing Titanic story?" He said he had not.

At the conclusion of Cottam's testimony, Senator Smith announced that the examination of the officers and crew of the Titanic had been concluded and directed Sergeant-at-Arms Cornelius to arrange for all of them to depart for their homes.

J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the International Mercantile Marine, the Senator said, would be recalled to the witness stand to-day.

FINED $5 FOR TRESPASSING

James Dickson of Keene was found guilty this morning of trespassing upon the property of Fred Easson, also of Keene, and was fined $5 and costs by Police Magistrate Dumble. Dickson encroached upon the Easson property, while trapping muskrats. Messrs. F. D. Kerr and G. N. Gordon acted for the parties interested.

Catarrh and Bronchitis

The Bane of Thousands, and has Hitherto Baffled the Skill of Medical Science.

Catarrhozone

Dry air treatment is the one treatment that will cure these diseases.
What stomach medicine has ever been known to cure Catarrh or Bronchitis?

Catarrhozone is not a stomach medicine, but an air medicine, that carries to the remotest parts of the throat, lungs, and air cells little drops of healing so curative that whenever it touches germ life it kills and eradicates them from the system.

Thousands of doctors and patients have been disappointed by using stomach medicines for coughs and colds. Have you not found it a rather roundabout way to reach the diseased portion of the throat and lungs?

Why not use Catarrhozone, which is breathed to the very root of the disease and heals so quickly and perfectly that every spot is rebuilt with new healthy tissue?

Catarrhozone is the only medicine that will cure. Thousands have testified.

Think for a moment. Is it not sense? Little drops of healing—the air carries them just where disease exists. That is why

SCHOOL HOME WORK

Dr. George Locke, Chief Librarian of Toronto, believes that children should do their studying in school. He is reported as saying:—"Home work is the most arid, most inhuman, and most futile educational method ever perpetrated on the human race. It should be abolished." Dr. Locke always was a sensible sort of man; those who remember him in Peterborough as a young man will agree with this. And the school children will no doubt think that wisdom has increased rapidly with his years.

Educationalists, however, do not agree upon the question of home work. Some, perhaps only a few, do not believe in it; others say that home work is useful so long as it is not overdone, and others agree with the latter view, yet persistently insist that it shall be overdone by loading the pupils up with work that must be done before the morning.

There can be no doubt that if pupils, whether of Public or High Schools, are compelled to study at night until they are overtaxed and tired, and cannot properly carry on their studies next day, and that in the end the wearied brain does not make as much progress as it would have without any home work. There must be time for relaxation and recreation. If this time must be confined between the hours of four and six o'clock in the afternoon, and the evening hours given to study, the pupil may not be injured if the quantity of study is moderate. But it must be remembered by teachers that some pupils have home duties to perform, and that this will cut into the recreation hours. Sometimes the overload of home work is caused by different teachers allotting tasks without knowing or considering what their colleagues are doing in this respect.

Whether home work is always futile, as Dr. Locke says, or not, there can be no doubt that the amount of home work allotted to pupils should be very moderate, and that at times it is not.

MANITOBA SCHOOLS

The present condition of the Separate School question in Manitoba is a puzzle to a great many people. Some think that because the Roman Catholics are satisfied with the treatment given them by the Manitoba Government lately that they must have got all they wanted in the way of Separate Schools. Others think that a national or provincial policy has been adopted as a substitute for the old system of Separate schools, with certain privileges attached to it which has satisfied the Roman Catholic minority. It is manifest that these two positions are entirely different. The facts seem to be that Roman Catholics were entitled to such Separate schools as were actually in existence at the time the Province of Manitoba came into Confederation. When Manitoba proposed recently to have its boundaries extended the Roman Catholic minority asked to have this Separate schools system extended to the whole of Manitoba. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Opposition fought strenuously on this position and refused to agree to the extension of Manitoba's boundaries unless this Separate school policy was adopted but the Borden Government refused to make any conditions whatever, leaving that question entirely to Manitoba and in defiance of the opposition's struggles, extended Manitoba's boundaries to Hudson Bay. Scarcely was this done when the Manitoba Government made a proposition to the minority which was accepted, namely, that the minority should give up all Separate schools as Separate schools. In other words that it should abolish the Separate school system in Manitoba altogether and come in under the Public school system as governed by the Public schools Act. In exchange for this sacrifice the minority was told that it could have Catholic school teachers for its children, wherever in the cities there were forty Catholic children and in rural municipalities where there were twenty-five. This applied also to any Protestant minority in the section, where Roman Catholics were in a majority. But this privilege is subject to Public School inspection and to all the Public schools regulations imposed by the province. This would look to be the obliteration of the Separate school system in exchange for the safe guarding of the teaching of the children by Catholic teachers as above provided over the whole new province. So far this would appear to be a satisfactory settlement. The danger lies in the future. If the administration of the Public school system becomes more public than before, separate privileges will tend to disappear and it will be observed that separate privileges are now wholly amenable to the Public Schools Act, but if in the future, separate privileges become more extended and the Separate schools system is born again, it will be all over the province and not restricted as heretofore, to those localities in which the schools were at the time Manitoba came into Confederation; so that it would appear as if each side is competing for the future, both sides being satisfied with the present. It will be asked, why was this move made at all, and the answer is that it would appear that the minority was not able to finance its growing Separate school requirements in the old localities, and was not permitted to do so in the new. In order therefore to provide for both, the new arrangement was made by which the Government would have to provide school accommodation everywhere. This will take a load off the minority's shoulders, which bore too heavily in some parts, and did not exist at all in others and it was probably for this reason that the minority consented to a compromise which safe guarded the teaching of its children, while providing more ample and more general school accommodation.

TO TREAT OR NOT TO TREAT

There is this difference between the Liberal proposal to "abolish the bar" and the government's policy of prohibiting treating, that the government's policy may become law and be tried before the next election. Its effectiveness will to some extent at any rate, be known. If the government passes the amendment at the next session which will put in force the anti-treating law, as it probably will, there will, in the natural course of events, be a couple of years in which the enforcement of the new law can be observed and its effectiveness judged before the people will be called upon to pronounce an opinion upon it in an election. The Whitney government has a knack of carrying out its promises, and making the laws effective, and there is no reason to think that there will be an exception in this case. Then watch the Liberal Opposition, and see whether it will remain within the lines it has laid down, or whether a further addition will be made to its temperance program. Mr. Rowell's motion was not understood by many to include the abolition of club licenses, nor did his address in moving it make this point as clear as it might be, but it is now stated that the Liberal policy includes the abolition of club licenses along with hotel licenses. This case, if Mr. Rowell so desires, can be put clearly in record next session so that there will be no dispute as to whether he means to stop drinking in clubs, and whether he has his party behind him in this respect.

In view of the developments in the legislature, the temperance people of Toronto have decided not to proceed with their local option campaign in that city. They have concluded that the expense and effort that a local option campaign in the city would cause them may be dispensed with, and that their energy may be reserved for participation in the Provincial political field as circumstances may direct.

Nervousness And Dyspepsia Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

WALKERTON, ONT., MAY 9TH 1911

"My trouble was extreme Nervousness, brought on by Indigestion or Dyspepsia, from which I suffered in its worst form.

I asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, about "Fruit-a-tives" and he advised me to try them.

I took several boxes and am pleased to say I am now enjoying fine health.

I honestly believe I owe my health to "Fruit-a-tives" and strongly advise anyone suffering from Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Nervousness or Sleeplessness, to commence using "Fruit-a-tives" and continue this remedy until a cure is accomplished".

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, April 29.—Forty-eight hours' drenching instead of whirlwinds of dust, and especially in Kansas, forced wheat owners to-day into a selling stampede. Despite a violent reaction the market closed weak, 1⅜c to 1¾c under Saturday night. Corn showed ⅛c to ¼c net gain, oats finished irregular ⅛c to ¼c lower to ⅛c advance, and provisions varying from 12½c decline to 12½c increase in cost.

Liverpool wheat closed ⅜d to ½d lower than Saturday and corn unchanged to a ¼d higher. Berlin wheat closed ½c higher and Buda-Pest ⅜c higher.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, April 29.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 98 carloads, comprising 1798 cattle, 595 hogs, 1184 sheep, 261 calves and 20 horses.

Exporters

There were two buyers of cattle for export. Coughlin & Co. bought for S. & S. Company, 173 export steers, 1250 lbs. each, at $7.39, average price.

Butchers

There were cattle bought for butchers' purposes of export weights, at prices ranging from $7 to $7.30; butchers' cattle, weighing from 1000 to 1100 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; cattle, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $6.50 to $6.75; cattle, 800 to 900 lbs., at $6.25 to $6.40; cattle, 660 to 710 lbs., at $5 to $5.85; cows, $5 to $6, with some extra quality cows at $6.25 to $6.50; bulls, $4.50 to $6.

Feeders

C. Zeagman & Sons bought 20 stockers, 700 lbs., at $5.60 per cwt.

Milkers and Springers

Not many milkers and springers were offered, and these were not of a very high order as regards quality. Prices ranged from $40 to $65 each.

Veal Calves.

Receipts were liberal and prices in general ranged from $4 to $6.50, with a few at $7 to $8, but they had to be good to bring the latter prices.

Sheep and Lambs.

Ontario ewes sold at $6.50 to $7; rams $4.50 to $5.50; yearlings, $8 to $8.50; spring lambs, $3.50 to $7 each.

Hogs.

The market for hogs was reported unchanged at $8.75 for selects, fed and watered, and $8.40, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, April 29.—At the stock yards, west end market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending April 27 were 1300 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 2800 hogs and 1800 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale was 900 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, and 1600 hogs and 375 calves.

Altho the offerings of cattle were much larger than a week ago, there was no important change in the condition of the market, prices being firmly maintained on account of the fact that the quality of the stock generally was much better. Drovers had to pay high prices in the country, owing to the fact that supplies of such are none too plentiful. The gathering of buyers was fairly large. Sales of a few loads of choice steers were made at $7.50 and good at $7, while medium bulls at $5.50 to $6.25 per cwt.

$6, and medium bulls at $5.50 to $6.25 per cwt.

A very strong feeling continues to prevail in the market for hogs and prices since this day week have scored a further advance of 20c to 25c per cwt. The supply was fair, for which the demand was good. Sales of selected lots were made at $9.60 to $9.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars, and contracts were made for delivery next week at $9.75.

Owing to the increasing scarcity of good fat old sheep and the improved demand for the same for local consumption a very strong feeling developed in the market and prices scored a sharp advance with sales at $6 to $6.50 per cwt. Spring lambs met with a fair demand at from $4 to $7 each and choice milk-fed calves brought $10 to $11 per cwt.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $7.75 per cwt.; cattle, medium, $5.25 to $7; common, $4.50 to $5; choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; medium, $5.60 to $6; bulls, $5.85 to $6.75; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; common and medium, each, $60 to $70; springers, $40 to $50.

Sheep—Ewes, $6 to $6.50; bucks and culls, $5 to $5.50; lambs, $7.25 to $7.50.

Hogs—F.o.b., $9.00 to $9.75.

Calves—$1.50 to $10.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, April 29.—Cattle—Receipts 25,000; market steady; beeves, $5.75 to $9; Texas steers, $5.25 to $7.35; western steers, $5.65 to $7.70; stockers and feeders $4.30 to $6.75; cows and heifers, $2.75 to $7.60; calves, $5 to $8.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 55,000; market active 5c higher; light, $7.45 to $7.90; mixed, $7.50 to $8; heavy, $7.50 to $8; rough, $7.50 to $7.70; pigs, $4.90 to $7.10; bulk of sales $7.75 to $7.95.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 16,000; market strong, 25c to 60c higher; native, $5 to $8; western, $6.25 to $8; yearlings, $6.50 to $9. Lambs, native, $6.50 to $9.66; western, $6.50 to $10.20.

CHAPTER III.

Some Emotions—Without a Moral

Not until he was dressing, and the contents of his pockets were spread on a table, did Medenham remember Dale's commission. It was quite true, as he told Mrs. Devar, that he had backed Vendetta for a small stake on his own account. But that was an afterthought, nd the bet was made with another bookmaker at reduced odds. Altogether, including the few sovereigns in his possession at the beginning of the day, he counted nearly fifty pounds in gold, an exceptionally large amount to be carried in England, where considerations of weight alone render banknotes preferable. He slipped Dale's money into an envelope, and took thirty pounds to be exchanged for notes by the hotel's cashier. At the same time he wrote a telegram to his father, destroying two drafts before he evolved something that left his story untold while quieting any scruples as to lack of candor. It was not that the Earl would resent his unexpected disappearance after nearly four years' absence from home, because father and son had met in South Africa during war, and were together in Cannes and Paris subsequently. His difficulty was to explain this freak journey satisfactorily. The Earl of Fairholme held feudal views anent the place occupied in the world by the British aristocracy. His own hot youth was crowded with episodes, yet he would be shocked out of his well-fed cynicism by the notion that his son was gallivanting around the country as the chauffeur of an unconventional American girl and a middle-aged harpy like Mrs. Devar.

So Medenham's message was noncommittal.

> Aunt Susan was unable to come Epsom to-day. Have taken car to Brighton and Bournemouth. Home Saturday, perhaps earlier.
> GEORGE

Of course, he meant to fill in details verbally. It was possible in conversation to impart a jesting turn to an adventure which would be unconvincing and ambiguous in the bald phrases of a telegram.

Then he dined, filled a cigarette case from the box of Salonikas which Tompkinson had not omitted to pack with his clothes, and strolled out, bareheaded, to enrich Dale. He could trust his man absolutely, and was quite sure that the Mercury would then be in the drying stage after a thorough cleaning. Thus far he was justified, but he had not counted on the pride of the born mechanic. Though the car was housed for the night, when he entered the garage the hood was off, and Dale was annoying two brothers of the craft by explaining the superiority of his engine to every other type of engine.

All three were bent over the cylinders, and Dale was saying:

"Just take a squint at them valves, will you?—ever seen anything like 'em before? Of course you haven't. Don't look like valves, eh? Can you break sem, can you warp 'em, can you pit them, can you warp 'em, can you pit reaches the cylinder? None of your shoulders or kinks to choke it up—is there?—and the same with the exhaust. Would you ever have a mushroom valve agin after you've once cast your peepers over this arrangement? Now, if I took up aerotting—if I wanted to fly the Channel——"

He stopped abruptly, having seen his master standing in the open doorway.

"By gad, Dale," cried Medenham, "I have never heard your tongue wagging in that fashion before."

Dale was flustered.

"Beg pardon, my lord, but I was only——" he began.

"Only using the cut-out, I fancy. Come here, I want you a minute."

The other chauffeurs suddenly discovered that they had urgent business elsewhere. They vanished. Dale thought it necessary to explain.

"One of them chaps has a new French car, my lord, and he was blowing so loudly about it that I had to take him down a peg or two."

Medenham grew interested. Like every keen motorist, he could "talk shop" at all times.

"What sort of car?"

"A 59 Du Vallon, my lord. It is the first of its class in England, and I rather think his guv'nor is running it on show."

"Indeed. Who is he?"

"A count. Somebody-or-other, my lord. I did hear his name——"

"Not Count Edouard Marigny?" said Medenham, with a sharp emphasis that startled Dale.

"That's him, my lord. I hope I haven't done anything wrong."

Medenham, early in life, formed the habit of not expressing his feelings when really vexed, and it stood him in good stead now. Dale's blunder was almost irreparable, yet he could not find it in his heart to blame the man for being an enthusiast.

"You have put me in a deuce of a fix," he said at last. "This Frenchman is acquainted with Miss Vanrenen. He knows she is here, and will probably see her off in the morning. If his chauffeur recognizes the car he will be sure to speak of it. That gives the whole show away."

"I am very sorry, my lord——"

"Dash it all, there you are agin. But it is largely my own fault. I ought to have warned you, though I little expected this sort of a mix-up. In future, Dale, while this trip lasts, you must forget my title. Look here, I have brought you your winnings over Eyot—can't you rig up some sort of a yarn that I am a sporting friend of yours, and that you were just trying to be funny when you addressed me as 'my lord'? If you have an opportunity, tell Count Marigny's man that your job is taken temporarily by a driver named Fitzroy. By the way, is the chauffeur a Frenchman, too?"

"No, my l—." Dale caught Medenham's eye, a very cold eye at that instant. "No, sir. He's just a fitter from the London agency."

"Well, we must trust to luck. He may not remember me in my chauffeur's kit, which is beastly uncomfortable, by the way. I must bet you a summer rig. Here is your money—five to one I took. Don't lose sight of those two fellows, and spend this half sovereign on them. If you can fill that chap with beer to-night he may have a head in the morning that will keep him in bed too late to cause any mischief. When we meet in Bournemouth and Bristol, say nothing to anybody about either car or me."

Dale was a model of sobriety, but the excitement of "fives" when he looked for "threes" was too much for him.

"I'll tank him all right, my l—, I mean, sir," he vowed cheerfully.

Medenham lit a new cigarette and strolled out of the yard.

From the corner of his eye he saw Marigny's helper looking at him. Without undue exaggeration, he craned his neck, rounded his shoulders, and carried himself with the listless air of a Piccadilly idler. He reflected, too, that a bare-headed man in evening dress would not readily be identified with a leather-coated chauffeur, and Dale, he hoped, was sufficiently endowed with mother wit to frame a story plausible enough to account for his unforseen appearance. On the whole, the position was not so bad as it seemed in that first moment when the owner of he 59 Du Vallon was revealed in the handsome Count. In any event, what did it matter if his harmless subterfuge were revealed? The girl would surely laugh, while Mrs. Devar would squirm. So now for a turn along the front, and then to bed.

It was a perfect June evening, the fitting sequel to a day of unbroken sunshine. A marvelous amber light hovered beyond the level of the sea to the west; an exquisite blue suffused the horizon from south to east, deepening from sapphire to ultra-marine as it blended with the soft shadows of a summer's night. He found himself comparing the sky's southeasterly tint with the azure depths of Cynthia Vanrenen's eyes, but he shook off that fantasy quickly, crossed the roadway and promenade, and, propping himself against the railings, turned a resolute back on romance. He did not gain a great deal by this manoeuver, since his next active thought was centered in a species of quest for the particular window among all those storeyed rows through which Cynthia vanrenen might even then be gazing at the shining ocean.

He looked at his watch. Half-past nine.

"I am behaving like a blithering idiot," he told himself. "Miss Vanrenen and her friends are either on the pier listening to the band, or sitting over their coffee in the glass cage behind there. I'll wire Simmonds in the morning to hurry up."

A man descended the steps of the hotel and walked straight across King's Road. A light gray overcoat, thrown wide on his shoulders, gave a lavish display of frilled shirt, and a gray Homburg hat was set rakishly on one side of his head. In the hall light Medenham at once discerned the regular, waxen-skinned features of Count Marigny, and during the next few seconds it really seemed as if the Frenchman were making directly for him. But another man, short, rotund, very erect of figure, and strutting in gait, came from the interior of a "shelter" that stood a little to the right of Medenham's position on the rails.

"Hello, Marigny," said he jauntily.

The Count looked back towards the hotel. His tubby acquaintance chuckled. The effort squeezed an eyeglass out of his right eye.

"Aie pas peur, mon vieux!" cried he in very colloquial French. "My mother sent a note to say that the fair Cynthia has retired to her room to write letters. I have been waiting here ten minutes."

Now, it chanced that Medenham's widespread touring in France had rubbed up his knowledge of the language. It is ever the ear that needs training more than the tongue, and in all likelihood he would not have caught the exact meaning of the words were it not for the hap of recent familiarity with the accents of all sorts and conditions of French-speaking folk.

"Jimmy Devar!" he breathed, and his amazement lost him Marigny's muttered answer.

But he heard Devar's confident outburst as the two walked off together in the direction of the West Pier.

"You are growing positively nervous, my dear Edouard. And why? The affairs arrange itself admirably. I shall be always on hand, ready to turn up exactly at the right moment. What the deuce, this is the luck of a lifetime . . ."

The squeeky, high-pitched voice—a masculine variant of Mrs. Devar's ultra-fashionable intonation—died away midst the chatter and laughter of other promenaders. Medenham's first impulse was to follow and listen, since Devar had yielded to the common delusion of imagining that none except his companion on the sea-front that night understood a foreign language. But he swept the notion aside ere it had well presented itself as a means of solving an astounding puzzle.

"No, dash it all, I'm not a private detective," he muttered angrily. "Why should I interfere? Confound Simmonds, and d—n that railway van! I have a good mind to hand the car over to Dale in the morning and return to town by the first train."

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

A relentless war on anarchists has been commenced in France.

Mrs. Sarah Myles of Guelph was fatally burned by her clothing catching fire.

The President of the new Chinese Republic delivered his first message yesterday.

Paul Uhlig committed suicide in Toronto yesterday by drinking carbolic acid.

A great electric railway system, to cover a large portion of the west, is reported to be taking shape.

Thirty-six Industrial Workers of the World men were at Kamloops, B.C., sentenced to from one to three months each in jail for intimidation.

D. Gordon, M.P., of Wallaceburg, denies that he is about to resign the East Kent seat. It is his wish to retire, he states, but he has consented to remain, for the present at least.

Fred. Leahy, a young electrician, was struck and killed by an automobile on Beaverhall Hill, Montreal, yesterday. Two ladies and the chauffeur, who gave his name as Brossard, were in the machine at the time.

George Esson of Petrolea, Ont., was found guilty last night, of manslaughter in connection with the death of Thomas Major, whose body was found under the steps of the First Baptist Church in Port Huron. Sentence was deferred.

James McGinnis, aged 12, of 173 Sackville street, sustained injuries to his left knee and side, and W. Macdonald, 144 West Lodge avenue, one of the conductors, had his face and left leg cut in a trolley accident in Toronto yesterday.

The Difference In Icebergs.

No two icebergs appear to be exactly alike in size and shape. Some look for all the world like Arabs' tents as they glide along and others like cliffs, castles, cathedrals, yachts, and occasionally they resemble some well known animal. Some of the pinnacles of a large berg rise nearly a thousand feet above the water, while the base may occupy an area of ten or twelve acres. Seen through a powerful glass, one may detect waterfalls upon these islands of ice and all kinds of arctic birds and perhaps a few seals. Then the colors are almost beyond description. The stately pinnacles glisten in the sun like powdered glass. At times the berg is pure white; at others it looks greenish.—Harold J. Shepstone in St. Nicholas.

Great Tonic.

Drug Clerk—Say, you remember that bottle of the new tonic you sold Bill Martin? The Proprietor—Yes. What about it? The Clerk—Why, Bill drank the whole bottle and went home and whipped his wife. And she wants to know what we are going to do about it. The Proprietor—Going to do about it? I have it! Sell her two bottles and tell her to go home and get even.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

TIPPING AN ARTIST.

A Great Painter Who Was Not Above Earning an Honest Quarter.

Winslow Homer was a great painter who had the unusual good fortune to have his merit appreciated early in life. But no one ever presumed less on a wide reputation. Affectation was a weakness from which his sense of humor saved him.

In his biography by Mr. W. H. Downs is printed the story of a New York gentleman of wealth and artistic tastes who made the journey to Scarboro, Me., where Homer had his studio, to make the artist's acquaintance.

On his arrival he found the studio door locked; the owner was nowhere to be seen. He wandered about the cliffs for awhile until he met a man in a rough old suit of clothes, rubber boots and a battered felt hat, who carried a fishpole. He accosted the fisherman thus:

"Say, my man, if you can tell me where I can find Winslow Homer I have a quarter for you."

"Where's your quarter?" said the fisherman.

He handed it over and was astounded to hear the quizzical Yankee fisherman say, "I am Winslow Homer."

The sequel of this unusual introduction was that Homer took his new acquaintance back to the studio, entertained him, and before he left sold him a picture.

WILD ELEPHANTS.

When Angry They Can Land a Five Ton Death Dealing Kick.

E. Alexander Powell in the Outing magazine throws some light on the theory that an elephant is clumsy. When annoyed a wild elephant has a unique method of dealing with the overpopulation evil. Mr. Powell says:

"Provided the noosers are working harmoniously, however, and given reliable and well trained decoys, the noosing of a wild elephant is in itself a sight worth traveling half around the world to see.

"The animal to be roped having been again selected, the decoys closed in on either side of him until he was practically helpless. A nooser, lithe and active as an eel, slid down the pad rope of his decoy and, waiting until the attention of the captive had been momentarily distracted, slipped a thick noose of rawhide round the hind ankle of his prize.

"It is during this operation that the accidents usually occur, for should the captive suspect an enemy in his rear he can lunge out a five ton kick to a distance of a dozen feet, and that evening the nooser's relatives assemble for the funeral."

How Diviners Are Guided.

Frau Tukory, the wife of a well to do Hungarian landowner, who is said to have a special talent for discovering minerals with a divining rod, describes in a Budapest newspaper the different sensations which she experiences. When searching for a lost vein of silver near a mine in Germany belonging to Professor Pfahl of Bonn university she says she felt violent twitchings in her right arm. This was a sign to her to turn to the right, and a few yards farther on shooting pains in her arms and breathlessness told her that she was above the spot. The vein was found the next day near the surface. On the other hand, when she discovered petroleum in Hanover she had a feeling as if her head were being bound lightly with a cloth. Frau Tukory first made a name as a diviner by discovering coal on M. Jan Kubelik's estate in Bohemia.—Vienna Cor. London Standard.

PETERBORO IN PUBLICATION OF LABOR DOINGS

At a short session of the Manufacturers' Committee, last evening, it was decided to take a two column write-up of Peterborough in the May issue of the Industrial Banner. The Labor Educational Association of Ontario purpose holding a big convention in Peterborough on May 24th, and in connection with this will make their May issue a convention number, illustrative of Peterborough. The cost of the space is not excessive and the Manufacturers' Committee considered the convention worthy of support and of the sum to be expended. A large edition of the Industrial Banner will be published and circulated in every town and city in Ontario prior to the holding of the convention. It will make good advertising material for Peterborough.

In support of the foregoing, a deputation from the Trades and Labor Council appeared before the committee last evening.

PRESENTATION TO MR. W. S. DAVIDSON

His Host of Friends Regret His Departure From the City

A farewell dinner was given to Mr. Walter Davidson of the firm of Hall, Medd and Davidson, last evening in Hooper's Palm Parlors. Mr. Davidson is leaving for the West and his friends took this opportunity to wish him all happiness and prosperity in his new home.

Judge Huycke occupied the chair and made some appropriate remarks in which he stated it did not afford him pleasure to see a fine man leave Peterborough, but the West was attracting a large number of young men and he was sure Mr. Davidson would make a great success in his western home. He had always held him in high esteem and found Mr. Davidson one of the best gentlemen both in business and sports that Peterborough possessed. Judge Huycke read a letter from Mr. R. R. Hall, who could not attend owing to the serious illness of his brother in Lindsay. Mr. R. R. Hall although not present in person showed by his letter that he was very sorry to see Mr. Davidson depart. He joined with those present in wishing him great success.

Mayor Bradburn made a very fitting address for the occasion and presented to Mr. Davidson a signet ring on behalf of those present. Mayor Bradburn wished this token of friendship to recall to Mr. Davidson's memory when in the western country, the friends that he had left in Peterborough who would always hold him in high esteem and respect.

On behalf of the Belmont Club, Mr. Fee read an address and Mr. Fred Heaslip presented to Mr. Davidson a gold mounted fountain pen. The address expressed regret at the losing of a fine member like Mr. Davidson from their Club and wished him all the success possible in his new venture.

Mr. Davidson thanked the members of the Belmont Club and those present for their kind words and signet ring and pen.

He would remember them wherever he might go. He had not realized how hard it was to break away from his Peterborough friends, but it would always be a great pleasure to return and see them. Mr. Davidson thanked one and all for the kindness shown him.

The toasts were "The King," proposed by Judge Huycke; "Our Guest," by Mr. W. H. Denham; "The City" and "The Professions," by Judge Huycke. These were drunk with great enthusiasm by those present.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, Mr. F. D. Kerr, Mr. John Crane, Mr. G. N. Gordon, Mr. E. F. Mason, Mr. R. Denne, Mr. E. G. Patterson and Mr. G. A. Gillespie, spoke in the highest terms of praise of Mr. Davidson. They agreed that the city was losing one of its best men and wished him a bright and prosperous future.

A quartette under the leadership of Mr. New entertained with songs which were appreciated and enjoyed by all.

The affair was concluded with the singing of the National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne.

Mr. Davidson's friends of the Peterborough Club, made the presentation on Saturday night, of a Morocco leather purse filled with gold.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Jane Preston

Mrs. Jane Preston, well known in Peterborough, passed away yesterday in Toronto, and her many local friends will regret to learn of her death.

The deceased has lived in Toronto for the past five years but before that time she was a popular resident of this city.

She is survived by two sons, Joseph, of 216 Reid street, and William, of Smith township. Her husband predeceased her by several years.

The remains have arrived in the city and the funeral will take place to-morrow at one o'clock, from the residence of Mr. Joseph Preston, 216 Reid street, to the Lakefield cemetery.

TIME IS EXTENDED

The time has been extended for receiving Tenders for the erection of the two School Buildings until 12 o'clock noon Saturday May 4th. Also for the Heating and Plumbing of these buildings, which is extended, until May 15th 1912, at 12 o'clock noon. By order, Chairman Building Committee, Board of Education.

BUTTER AND CHEESE COMPANY IS INCORPORATED

Downeyville is to have a new butter and cheese factory, incorporation rights having been obtained. The new establishment will be known as the Maple Leaf Butter and Cheese Company, Limited, the capital to be $2,000. The provisional directors are Rev. P. J. McGuire, David McGinnis, Daniel M. Costello and Thos. F. Harrington.

PETERBORO' BOY SCOUTS TO RALLY

Important Meeting at Armories on Friday Night.

There will be a scout rally in the armories on Friday night next. The 1st and 3rd troops are requested to turn out in full numbers. Patrol leaders, corporals and assistant scoutmasters for the season will be elected. The first drill will be held. It is necessary for the bugle band to be present. Weather permitting, scouts are requested to wear uniforms. Every scout must have his staff. Arrangements are being made for a committee meeting of scout officials. Any boy wishing to become a member of the Peterborough Boy Scouts is asked to report to Commissioner Miller at the armories on Friday night. There is no entrance fee. All boys who do not smoke are welcome. Now is the time to join so as to get into line for the spring work.

WM. J. MILLER,
District Commissioner.

PROGRAM FOR OPENING OF NEW PROTESTANT HOME

The formal opening of the new building, which takes place this evening at eight p.m., promises to be a function worthy of the splendid efforts of the directors, and the imposing and well equipped building on the hill off Anson street.

The public are cordially invited to attend the opening and inspect the building.

The short dedicatory service is in charge of the Ministerial Association of the city.

The band of the 57th Regiment will discourse sweet music during the evening, which will add greatly to the pleasure of the visitors.

His Worship Mayor Bradburn will occupy the chair and short addresses will be given by Lieutenant-Governor Colonel Sir John Gibson, K.C.M.G.; Dr. Bruce Smith, His Honor Judge Roger and E. A. Peck, M.P.P.; J. H. Burnham, M.P., will give a short history of the Home.

It is expected that Senator Cox, who never loses interest in Peterborough, will be present.

A vocal solo by Miss Howell and violin music by Miss Palmer will be attractive features of the evening.

ANNUAL MEETING FUEL AND CARTAGE COMPANY

The shareholders of the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Company met last evening in the Bank of Montreal Chambers, with the following present: Wm. Buller, president and manager (chairman) Roland Denne, James Clancy, T. H. Hooper and R. C. Braund, directors. The stockholders present were Messrs. John Nugent, J. J. Turner, sr.; J. Edwards, F. Kitney, R. McWhinnie, John Mathieson, F. D. Kerr, W. H. Robinson, R. Wolstenholm and others.

The financial statement was submitted and approved, showing that the company had a very successful year. After paying six per cent. dividend, a substantial sum was carried over for the ensuing year. The directors were re-elected. Mr. W. R. Morris was re-elected auditor.

PLENTY OF FARM WORK TO BE OBTAINED

The demand for laborers in the vicinity of this city is very brisk. There are a very large number of farmers who need hired help during the seeding season who cannot secure it, and it is feared that in some cases the greater part of the seeding will have to be abandoned. The result will of course mean smaller crops.

The fifty-two immigrants who arrived in the city on Friday and Saturday, have all received situations, and so far Mr. Howson, the local immigration officer, has had no complaints about them, and he believes that they are doing the farm work satisfactorily.

There is need of two or three hundred farm hands here, and more could find work. A number are expected in the next couple of days, but not nearly enough to meet the demand.

Mr. Collings, who brought the last party of fifty out, is bringing another party of fifty that will be here before the first of July. While this will be in time for the harvest it will be in time for the harvest, it will be too late for the seeding. Anyone who is willing to do farm work is certain of steady work now.

The prohibition by-law recently passed by the Wright (Que.) County Council has been quashed.

IS DOING WELL IN MONTREAL

Mr. Archie Laing is in Advertising Enterprise

An ex-Peterborough boy who is making good in the city of Montreal, is Mr. Archie Lainge. Mr. Lainge is one of the men behind a novel advertising enterprise, which is being widely patronized by Montreal firms. The medium used is what is called an advertising clock, display space on which is sold to those wishing to put their offerings before the public. A large number of the clocks have been put into commission in Montreal, being placed at all the principal transfer points, where thousands of people stop daily to set their watches by the novel timepiece and incidentally to read the advertisements displayed thereon.

The clocks are especially built to withstand the severe weather conditions they are forced to meet, and by means of an endless chain, the advertisements are kept rotating in the body of the clock. This tends to catch the eye and adds to the value of the clock as an advertising medium.

As the clocks are displayed at the most conspicuous spots in the city, it is stated that the company controlling them has to pay large premiums to the firms on whose walls they are located, for the permission to so locate them.

It is also stated that the company eventually intends to erect similar clocks in all the principal cities in Canada.

OSHKIGMONG

Special Correspondence.

Oshkigmong, April 30.—Mrs. and Baby Whipple, of Meadville, Penn., are here to stay with her parents for a time.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryerson Whetung, of this place, have taken their departure to Parry Harbor, where Mr. Whetung will be engaged in the saw mill for the summer. May success and good luck be their portion is the wish of their many friends.

The boys bid adieu to their sweethearts last week as they took leave to engage in the river driving, Mr. Hiram Taylor taking a gang of select drivers from here for the Cavendish Lumber Company.

The ice on the lakes has entirely disappeared.

Miss Daisy Whetung is on the sick list.

Miss Hazel Taylor is laid up with la grippe again.

BRIDES FOR THE YOUNG FARMERS COMING THIS WAY

The following letter has been received by Mr. G. H. Howson, immigration officer on Water street:

Alexandra House,
56 Cartwright Garden,
London, W. C.,
April 20th 1912.

To the Government Employment Agent:

Dear Sir,—Last year, I received complaints from many young farmers in Canada of the great difficulty for them in attending to the housework, and in getting married.

In the philanthropical work to assist the young men in a practical way, I have travelled all over England and Scotland for the last four months, in order to select suitable young and respectable women who are willing to marry suitable Canadian farmers.

I have at present 500 English, 300 German and 200 Scandinavian women who are prepared to marry Canadians in the spring.

If the farmers would write to me and send a full description of themselves and their means, as well as their demands, viz., the qualifications of an intended wife, I will immediately answer their letters and send photo and description of a young woman I think would suit the applicant. If he should not come to any agreement with the first one, I will send other photos up to ten in the whole and among them he must surely be able to find a wife.

Each applicant ought to enclose an envelope with his full name and address.

At the same time I beg to inform you that about 100 Scandinavian and 350 German farm hands have applied to me for obtaining good work in Canada.

If the farmers in your district should have use for them, you would perhaps kindly inform them to write personally to me, and I will arrange all the matters with the laborers, and inform the farmers of the result.

As my work is undertaken of pure interest in the happiness of the young lowfarmers, I hope you will kindly do what you can to inform the interested parties of my offer.

I remain, dear sir,
Yours faithfully,
S. de HOLSTEIN,
Baron and Colonel.

WEDDING BELLS

At eight o'clock this morning, a charming wedding was solemnized at St. Peter's Cathedral, by Rev. Father McFadden, the nuptial parties, being Miss Agnes Welsh of Peterboro and Hugh Cornelius Brady of Montreal. The bridesmaid was Miss Mary B. Tangney of Lindsay, and the groomsman, James Brady, of Montreal, brother of the groom.

After the ceremony, which was witnessed by a few of the intimate friends, the wedding party drove to the home of the bride on Elm street where a dainty breakfast was served.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Brady left on a wedding trip, following which they will reside in Montreal, where the groom holds a responsible position.

The bride was extremely popular in the city, and was connected with the legal firm of Hall, Hayes and Hall for some years, and amongst the many wedding gifts to the bride, was a purse of gold from this firm.

KEARNEY—YOUNG

St. Peter's Cathedral this morning at six-thirteen, witnessed a very quiet wedding, when Miss Ida Ellen Kearney and Francis Gerald Young, of Young's Point, were married by Rev. Father O'Brien.

Miss Elizabeth Jane Kearney was bridesmaid and Mr. F. M. Young, of Youngs' Point, brother of the groom was best man.

The groom is the popular manager of the Stony Lake Navigation Company.

Many friends will join in heartiest congratulations.

SHARES OF BIG LAND CO. ON CANADIAN MARKET

Announcement Made of Offering of $500,000. Capital Stock Peace River Land & Investment Co.

Announcement is made elsewhere in this issue of the offering of $500,000 of the capital stock of the Peace River Land and Investment Company by Messrs. Gundy & Gundy of Toronto and Calgary. The company has secured a tract of approximately 100,000 acres in the British Columbia section of the Peace River District, the land running along both sides of the Halfway River and immediately adjoining the Dominion Government block in British Columbia. The land secured is entirely for agricultural purposes and reports received by the Company, indicate that all kinds of mixed farming can be carried out in that district. A strong group of eastern interests who have been already largely interested in Western propositions, are identified with the new Company, the first Board of Directors including Hon. George Taylor, Senator of Gananoque, Ont., who is president; Thomas Gibson, General Counsel, Lake Superior Corporation, Toronto, Vice-President; Senator Peter Talbot, Lacombe, Alberta; John Flett, Manufacturer, Toronto; Honorable Peter McLaren, Senator, Perth, Ont.; J. A. Harvey, K.C., Vancouver, B.C.; H. W. Gundy Broker, Calgary, Alberta; Dr. D. B. Neely, M.P., Humboldt, Sask., and Honorable Valentine Ratz, Senator, New Hamburg, Ont.

The stock now being offered by the Company becomes especially attractive from an investment standpoint, as there are not any bonds nor preferred stock ahead of it, and in this way the holders of the capital stock will benefit by all the profits which the Company will make.

BOWERMAN PAID HIS FINE OF $30

Other Two Scrappers Went to Castle Nesbitt

Yesterday's grind of the mill of justice at the police court must have had an effect, as only one case occupied the attention of His Worship this morning. It was a case of truancy, and an adjournment was made to Saturday.

Henry Bowmerman, one of the trio who appeared in court yesterday morning, paid his fine, but the other two went to jail.

Lost on Sunday night, in the City, a long Double Mink Throw-over. A very liberal reward will be given if returned to this office. 2d

RECITAL AT THE CONSERVATORY

A very charming and enjoyable recital was given at the Conservatory of Music last evening by Miss Irma Hooper, pupil of Miss McGill, assisted by Laura Logan, violiniste, and Mr. Edward Hanrahan. A choice program was supplied, the work of all who took part, displaying cleverness and large degree of musical ability. Miss Hooper acquitted herself splendidly, exhibiting a marked command of the key board and faultless fingering. Miss Logan, pupil of Miss Choate in a violin number was well received, as was also Mr. Edward Hanrahan in a stirring baritone solo. Those who took part have every reason to feel proud of the success achieved.

BROWNIES WON BY GOOD MARGIN

Took First Game for the Intermediate Championship

The Nemos and Brownies played their first of a series of games to decide the City Intermediate Championship last night. After a very lively contest the Brownies defeated the Nemos. Score 34—19.

Teams—Brownies—Forwards, Nicholls and Hanwell; centre, Downing; defence, Darling and Irvine.

Nemos—Forwards, Smith and Long; centre, Hill; defence, Howden and Rogers.

Referee—Thompson.

The next game will be played Friday night at 8 p.m.

ON THE MAT

Ottawa, April 30 — Arrangements have been completed for a wrestling bout at the Arena next Saturday evening between Dr. Roller, Seattle, and Raymond Cazeaux of Paris. These heavyweights met at Montreal last week and Roller won. George Kennedy offered them a big guarantee for a bout at Montreal, but Roller refused to meet Cazeaux at Sohmer Park again. Frank Gotch will be brought on to meet the winner before the close of the season.

DIAMOND DUST FROM THE CIRCUIT

Brantford Expositor: — A great noise is being made about Toronto having Furssedom, a good local pitcher to dispose of. President Nelson yesterday announced that he received the Toronto boy's acceptance of a contract early in the winter, and he belongs to the Brantford club. Just what action will be taken remains to be seen. James J. McCaffery, of Toronto, was the man who once had Charlie Murphy, of Chicago, fined $500 for tampering with a Toronto player.

Two more players reported to Lee last night and more are expected in to-day. The two men to report last night were Kehoe, a pitcher, who is said to have loads of speed, and Purdy, an outfielder. Billy Rose and Marty Killilea are expected to-day. Lee wired Connie Murphy to report to-day as he wants him to catch part of the game against the Royal Canadians of Toronto, which will be played this afternoon. Tommy Hess is not in shape to catch the entire game, and Lee will bring Murphy up to help out. It is likely that Connie will remain here until the league season opens, and if he can come back he may be given a regular berth on the team. He showed good form here early in the season, but faded away after his back-breaking stunt on the coaching line. Connie was a popular fellow with the fans, who overlooked his shortcomings on account of the ginger he displayed.—Hamilton Spectator.

Connie is well known in Peterborough as he played with the Peterborough club a few years ago. He was a great favorite with the fans, and they will be pleased to see him make good.

STREET CAR PHRASEOLOGY.

A New Yorker Compares Cultured Boston With His Own City.

"Did you ever think how much the temperament of a city is expressed in its street cars?" queried a New York man of an observant turn of mind. "I have just returned from a trip to Boston, and never before have the essential differences between that city and my own New York been so impressed on me as by my observations in the street cars.

"The first thing I miss in Boston is the familiar 'Step lively!' Instead I am exhorted 'Move as quickly as possible, please.' How could any one shove and push and crowd after that?

"Once in the car I find myself still surrounded by an atmosphere of consideration and of correct English. In our own subway we are laconically ordered 'Use both doors.' In Boston we are requested, 'Kindly leave by the nearer door.'

"This atmosphere is further maintained by another sign in the car, 'The passenger is requested, the conductor is required, to name the value of any coin or note tendered in payment of fare.' Can you imagine a passenger being requested to do anything in a New York street car?

"At Dudley street station, the principal transfer point for suburban cars, there are large placards on every platform, 'Women first, please.' I must admit that I did not observe that these had any appreciable effect on the scramble when the cars came in, but it certainly indicates a kindly spirit on the part of the man who is responsible for the cards."—New York Sun.

Ancient Graves.

While workmen on the Pitlochry golf course at Drumchorrie were engaged in making a bunker near the site of an old Pictish fort in the centre of the course, they came upon a number of ancient graves about two feet below the surface of the ground. One grave was uncovered to allow for the full length of the bunker, and was found to be formed of upright slabs set on edge and covered over with similar stones. Nothing was got inside the graves but a mass of black mould. In the immediate vicinity of the graves the ends of three or four other graves were observed. There was also picked up about the level of the graves a complete hand quern, with both upper and lower stones. One of the stones was unfortunately cracked and thrown away by the work men, but the other was preserved. The fact that the graves were the full length of the body would seem to indicate that they were of a later date than the Pictish period, and that they probably belong to the time when Christianity was introduced into Scotland, as similar graves have been found in several of the burial-grounds attached to the earlier churches in Atholl as at Killanders, Kilmaveonaig, and Dowally.

Surprising the Audience.

A would-be M. P. for a certain constituency in England who paid a "political agency" to prepare his speeches one night during the last general election met with a heartrending disaster. Delivering his oration with appropriate gesticulation in its most eloquent parts, he got safely to the middle of one of his highest flights when he surprised his audience by adding in thunderous tones to a remarkably fine passage, "Here stop and take a drink of water."

The words were a note inserted by the gentleman who supplied the speech to guide the orator in his delivery to gain the greatest effect.

Pipes and Hymns.

Rev. Dr. Parr when perpetual curate of Hatton, Warwickshire, England, which living he held from 1783 to 1790, regularly smoked in the vestry while the congregation was singing long hymns, chosen for the purpose, immediately before the sermon. The doctor was wont to exclaim, "My people like long hymns, but I prefer a long pipe."—London Telegraph.

Not What She Meant.

They were discussing private theatricals, says London Opinion, and the young man remarked that he never enjoyed taking part in such entertainments.

"I always think I am making such a fool of myself," he concluded.

"Oh, every one thinks that," she responded.

Just Suited Him.

Landlady (warningly to impecunious student applying for board)—I had my last tenant thrown out for failing to pay his rent for four months. Student (cheerfully)—That's all right. I will take the room under the conditions.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

"Speaking of etiquette, did you send the dollar for those advertised instructions on 'What to do at table?'"

"Yes."

"And what did you get?"

"A slip with one word printed on it: 'Eat!'"—Boston Transcript.

IS NOT QUITE AN OGRE

ALBERT SEVIGNY HAS BEEN PAINTED IN LURID COLORS.

Ottawa Gallery Man Speaks In Behalf of the "Bold Bad Nationalist" Who Is Reported to Have Been Eating Fire During Campaign—Sevigny Is a Quiet, Scholarly, Almost Monastic, Sort of Chap.

He has been painted in lurid colors. Many Canadians have no doubt seen the picture. The artists have not spared the most startling of pigments. The result absolutely glares. Big, swarthy creature, with wild, uncanny eyes, and tawny mane. A stormy agitator, stirring his compatriots into frenzy, playing upon their prejudices and passions, telling them that their sons are to be stolen from the family fireside, thrust upon the gory decks of British war boats, transported into the uttermost parts of the earth, and disembowelled by shot and shell in hideous naval conflict. Oh, yes, you know of Albert Sevigny, the Nationalist member for Dorchester. You would like to see him, perhaps, but at a distance, or in a cage.

Suppose we pass up the picture, says H. W. Anderson in a recent sketch in The Courier. Accompany me, mild and gentle reader, to Room Eighty-One-and-a-Half in the Canadian Parliament Building, and knock at the door. A moment's pause and a decidedly soft and somewhat melodious voice bids you enter. You are confronted with—not the Picture, but the Man; a graceful, smiling personality; young, slight, well-groomed, polished, and really altogether charming. After three or four minutes' conversation you have forgotten the caricature, and you are prepared to challenge the authenticity of the newspaper reports which now credit him with being Henri Bourassa's ambassador for the collection of the no-navy toll from the present Government.

Young Sevigny—for he is only in his thirty-first year—is more sworn at and sworn by than any other new-comer in the House of Commons. In some quarters it is regarded as the unpardonable sin to suggest that he possesses a single virtue, or is not laden down with every vice. In others he is lauded to the skies as if he were a hero and a demigod. You never hear the last of his courage, his chivalry, his eloquence and his personal magnetism. All this is very exaggerated. Albert Sevigny is neither fiend not archangel. He is a clever young French-Canadian, early trained to the service of the state, and who has made the most of the capital chance. He has a considerable literary gift, much personal and social charm, and an unusual Latin habit of application and persistence.

There is a touch of the aristocrat about him. He is aesthetic in his tastes and academic in his tendencies. It seems passing strange that Sevigny the Debonnaire, chiselled to play the dilettante, should develop into the stalwart promoter of a passionately national—if narrow—political creed. But the silken youth of peaceful times often turns out in the fray to be of tempered steel. This mild-mannered, somewhat lackadaisical law student, reading history and figuring in scholastic debates, came at once under the spell of the moving spirit of a new school of thought. He embibed the Bourassic acid. He threw aside his books, locked his study, and took train for the stormy scenes of the memorable Drummond-Arthabaska bye-election. He became one of the most vigorous—yes, and violent—campaigners. His passionate eloquence wrought wonders in spreading the contagion of his cause among his compatriots.

And now Mr. Sevigny has carried his convictions into Parliament. He threatens to throw the whole political situation into a foment with his motion to abolish the navy. He will make the most of his case, for he is both able and eloquent. But if the young orator could sometimes rise into the region of imperial ideas, and make men feel that he was not so entirely absorbed by the cut and thrust and parry of the sectional political game, one would have greater confidence in his future.

But even Sevigny is not as bad as they would make him. A story has been going the rounds of some of the Opposition press to the effect that in the course of the changes resultant upon the dismissals in the civil service which followed the recent change of Government, the member for Dorchester had secured the appointment of his son to a responsible and lucrative position in the Immigration Department at Montreal. Mr. Sevigny was married less than three years ago.

Mrs. Louise M. R. Ridge of Toronto is seeking a divorce from her husband now in Seattle.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of taking advantage of the exceptional investment opportunities arising through the rapid development of the Peace River District.

At the present time there is a very great influx of settlers to this District, and active construction operations are now under way on four distinct lines of railway which are competing to secure first entrance to this fertile territory. The bonds of these railways have been guaranteed by the Governments of Alberta and British Columbia respectively.

The Company has already acquired a large area of selected agricultural land in one of the best parts of the district at a very attractive price.

Many of the leading Land and Investment Companies have made enormous earnings in recent years through the rapid development of the West. During the next five years the Peace River District will undoubtedly show greater development than any other part of Western Canada, and this Company is in an exceedingly favorable position to profit through such development.

As there are no bonds or preferred stock the holders of the ordinary shares of the Company will reap the full benefit of all profits earned.

An investment in these shares, therefore, offers in addition to absolute security the promise of very large returns.

We have prepared a descriptive circular, containing map, reports and other information, which will be gladly mailed upon request.

A RAZOR PROOF SNAIL.

It Strolled the Entire Length of the Blade's Keen Edge.

"When photographing a snail," writes Professor Ward in the London Strand Magazine, "I was surprised at the fact that even the rough cut edge of a sheet of glass presented no difficulties to its locomotion. Its even pace was continued in spite of the fact that the sharp corner appeared to be penetrating its body. There we have exhibited the animal's delicate sense of touch, and this led me to make a further experiment.

"After I had placed the snail on the butt of a razor's blade it slowly moved along the back of the blade and then climbed completely over the sharp edge, the razor being in excellent condition. As the successive waves brought the fore part of its foot near the edge of the blade its head was held low down, and the lower and shorter pair of feelers nearly touched the blade, as if feeling the way.

"At the moment when the sharp edge was reached the small feelers were fully extended toward it, and just at the very instant when I expected to see them cut off they were both instantly retracted. They were little more than a hairbreadth away, and, though the lower feelers possess no eyes, yet by their sudden movement I was quite convinced that the snail at that instant recognized danger.

"Still the foot traveled on, and slowly the snail dragged its whole weight of exactly one and a half ounces over the edge, later moving toward the butt and remaining perfectly unharmed. The species experimented with was the Roman or edible kind, which accounts for its comparatively large weight, it being the largest of British snails."

DETECTIVES ARE WORKING ON SHOOTING AFFAIR IN WHICH TRAPPER MET DEATH

Further particulars of the mysterious shooting affair, by which Louis Porter lost his life, and which was reported in the Review yesterday, are given by the Lindsay Warder, as follow:

What is supposed to be a cold blooded murder took place a few miles from Minden, on Thursday night last, when a men by the name of Louis Porter met death in a mysterious manner, his body being found in a secluded spot in a bush, a short distance from the roadside.

The mysterious and sad affair has cast a gloom over the citizens and the usually quiet and peaceful neighborhood is greatly disturbed over the case. Very few particulars are to hand, but from all accounts it would appear that the murdered man, a man of about 35 years of age, who had a number of friends, was deliberately shot down while walking along the road and his body dragged over a hill and hidden beside a log in a low and unfrequented place of marsh. Why the man was murdered, who would do the ghastly deed, are questions which are puzzling the inhabitants of the section, and the people of Minden, the affair having taken place near Miner's Bay and five or six miles from Minden village. The dead man was well-known in the vicinity, having lived for a number of years along what is called the Minden Road.

Another matter that is puzzling the neighbors is the fact that Porter was carrying his father's gun, which gun as yet has not been found by the searching party. Apparently the only person who can throw any light whatever on the tragedy is a man by the name of Ellis who is reported to have said that he saw Porter passing his house, and that after he had gone some distance he (Ellis) heard the report of a gun.

Two detectives from Toronto have been despatched to the scene of the shooting and developments are expected to follow.

It appears that Porter left his home on the Minden Road Tuesday or Wednesday for his father's home at Miner's Bay. He reached his destination all right and while there decided to visit a man called Dryer, a mile or so distant, to look after some traps along the Cameron Road. This was Thursday night, and it appears that it was on the return trip to his father's house, where Porter was going to spend the night, that the murder took place as Porter had a trap in his pocket.

As he did not return to the father's place Thursday night, nor the following Friday, Mr. Porter, sr., immediately set out for his son's house, becoming alarmed. Here he was informed by Mrs. Porter that her husband had not returned. The proper authorities at Minden were informed and a search party was organized, the ground traversed by the dead man being carefully scoured Friday night and all day Saturday without results.

However, it was learned from the man Ellis that he (Ellis) had noticed Porter passing his place and that a few minutes later he distinctly heard a report from a gun. However, he paid no attention to the gun report, believing that Porter or some one else had fired at some game.

This, however, proved a valuable clue for the searching party, the members carefully scrutinizing the road from Ellis' house, and despite the fact that a very heavy rain had descended Thursday night, the searching party discovered a pool of blood on the road, some distance from Ellis' house, and also noticed a slight red trail leading through the ditch and up over a small hill. This they followed and lost again. However, they continued their search early Sunday morning and found the body in a secluded spot. It was lying in a low piece of swamp, and was partly hidden from view.

On being examined it was found that Porter had been shot through the arm, the shot passing clean through his body.

The remains were at once removed to Minden, where Dr. Osman Pogue, Coroner, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Pogue of Lindsay, empanelled a jury and decided to hold an inquest Monday. Police Magistrate Fielding is also looking into the case.

The searching party included Messrs. John Kellat, Stan Kellat, Stewart Hilliard and John Helvie.

Louis Porter, the deceased man, is survived by his wife and five small children.

WHY A WATCH WEARS OUT

Neglect is responsible for most Watches going wrong. A Watch should be thoroughly overhauled, at least once a year. Dust collecting in a Watch causes it to run dry, the grit will then wear away the delicate bearings. If you own a good watch, better be on the safe side — Bring it to our Repair Department where it will receive Skilled Attention.

AIM OF MANUAL TRAINING AND HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The aim of Manual training and Household Science, as taught to boys and girls of from 12 to 14 years of age, is considered by many to be the laying of the foundations of vocational training, i.e., to start to make of a person an efficient producer.

This is a mistaken idea as vocational education cannot be obtained except under appropriate conditions as to time, effort, discipline, surroundings, &c.

Manual Training and Household Science are meant to play an active and fruitful part in a scheme of liberal education. They should also enable the pupil to make a more intelligent choice of a vocation than if he had not studied these branches, but we should not expect much from them in the way of direct vocational training.

A liberal education develops appreciation, insight, and sympathy. The man of liberal education is in sympathy with what is best in modern civilization.

Now, the boy who chooses to make an article out of wood or metal, who carries his project to a successful outcome, who in doing so reads, designs, compares, and is led to comprehend some scientific and artistic principles, will have obtained a substantial addition to a liberal education, and at the same time, in all probability, have called forth some latent powers. His interest and sympathy for the craftsman will have been aroused and his knowledge of the world will have been added to.

The joy of achievement will be his and he will be encouraged to overcome difficulties in other fields of labor.

For the older boy and girl there is great need in Ontario of suitable schools for vocational training.

I remain,
Yours, etc.,
TEACHER.

ANNEXATION OF NORTH MONAGHAN BY THE CITY; PETITION FOR RATEPAYERS

No action was taken by the Legal Committee last night, on a claim of $100 damages, by Mrs. Ferguson, who sustained injuries through falling on an icy sidewalk, near the Fire Station in January last. A bone in her arm was fractured.

The City Solicitor and Street Commissioner both reported the city not responsible.

Council will be asked to approve of circulation of a petition amongst the ratepayers of North Monaghan, calling for the annexation by the city of that portion of the township, lying within the following limits, and which would include Brownton, formerly Eyersville. From Jackson Park west on a line between lots 1 and 12, south parallel, with the westerly limit of the Hatton, Morrow, T. E. Bradburn and Waddell properties to the road immediately north of Crawford's Grove, thence east to the river, and north-east to the city's present southerly bounday.

Those present at the meeting were the chairman, Ald. Brown, Mayor Bradburn, and Ald. Gordon, Anderson, Duffus and Gillespie.

DISSATISFACTION IN HARVEY; REPLY FROM HON. FRANK COCHRANE

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has received a reply from the Minister of Railway and Canals respecting the protest of the Harvey ratepayers which he recently forwarded to the Department. The former Reeve and Council of Harvey agreed with the late Government to accept $950.00 in full for damage to drowned township roads by reason of raising the level at Buckhorn. This agreement the present Government has felt bound to respect and it has closed with the present Reeve and Council for that amount accordingly. But there has been all along much irritation on the part of many Harvey ratepayers who allege that $950.00 is enough to cover the damages in certain favored places but not by any means enough to recompense the township as a whole which will be put to several hundred dollars loss as a consequence. This statement was forwarded to the Minister and he has agreed that while he accepts the old agreement of $950.00 meanwhile, yet he will allow of a revaluation and a further presentation of the case of the dissatisfied ones so that full justice may be done. It will now be for Harvey to see that it is not allowed to be at any loss on account of a bad bargain.

FINE WEATHER ARRIVES LIKEWISE THE BALL PLAYERS

Whether the fine weather brought the ball players or vice versa, the fact remains that both are here and Manager Templin has definitely decided to cancel his order for a pleasure yacht, with which to navigate the waters of Riverside.

Two of his squad, Ned Bartlett of Rochester, and R. A. Connolly, of Newburg, N.Y., have arrived in the city and the big three took a jaunt to Nicholls Oval this afternoon for a preliminary workout. Bartlett is a heaver, while his brother of the diamond attends to business about the initial bag. Both men are in good condition.

"You've got a smart little burg here," the newcomers remarked this morning, and Manager Templin added that they would find Peterborough all to their liking.

Other players may be expected to land in the city at any time. While considerable inconvenience will be suffered through the condition of the ball lot, the majority of the men are fresh from the diamond and in good shape.

YOUR DRUGGIST STOPS THAT ITCH

If you are suffering from Eczema, Psoriasis or any other kind of skin trouble, drop into our store for instant relief. We will stop that itch in two seconds.

We have sold other remedies for skin troubles, but none that we could recommend as highly as this, a mild wash of Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and a few other ingredients that have wrought such wonderful cures all over the Dominion.

This compound is known as D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema, and it will cool and heal the itchy, burning skin as nothing else can.

Of course other druggists have D.D.D. Prescription—go to them if you can't come to us—but don't accept some big profit substitute. But if you will come to our store, we have had the agency for this remedy for so many years that we can tell you all about D.D.D. Prescription and how it cures eczema.

Or you can get a free trial bottle by writing D.D.D. Laboratories, 49 Colborne street, Toronto.

CURLERS MADE PRESENTATION

Are Sorry to Part With Mr. Chas. N. Brown

Below is a copy of the address, which with a meerschaum pipe and case was presented to Mr. C. N. Brown yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Brown is one of the oldest members of the Peterborough Curling Club and left the city to-day, for British Columbia. He will take with him the best wishes of his friends of the stane and besom, for the personality of Charlie Brown is imprinted freely in the history of the club. The address follows:

To C. N. Brown, Esq.:
From the Peterborough Curling Club.

Sir,—The members of the Club are told the distressing intelligence that you are leaving the city and that you have heard the West a' callin'. May we say that there are others who could be called, but won't, and who would be better spared to go.

Your long service in the Club almost entitles you to the cognomen of Venerable. You have been on the ice, off and on, generally on, since the Fenian Raid. You have watched and worked for the Club through vicissitude and in the days of prosperity. All of this is much to your credit as a man and a curler. We hate to see you go. You have ever been a skip of noted skill and cordial demeanor. In your foreign matches you have won out invariably and brought honor, renown and emoluments to the Club.

Your fellow members have for you only one wish that wherever your lot may be cast you will find pleasure and prosperity, and that while you win new friends you will always remember the old.

We ask you on behalf of the members to accept this meerschaum pipe, tendered on the spur of the moment, and on the eve of your going away, as a very slight token of esteem and respect.

Yours sincerely and hopefully,
J. H. CONNAL,
President, P.C.C.
J. H. FERGUSON,
Sec.-Treas. P.C.C.

April, 29, 1912.

LAWN BOWLING

At a recent meeting of St. Mary's Bowling Club, the following officers were elected for the year:

President—J. R. O'Neill.
Vice-Pres.—W. E. Baker.
Sec.-Treas.—Frank McLory.

The Executive Committee will be selected by the officers.

The Club will probably join the Dominion Bowling Association.

The green will be put in first-class shape and a successful season is anticipated.—Lindsay Post.

NORTHERN LIGHTS BASEBALL CLUB

The Northern Lights baseball club will reorganize again this year. They made a very creditable showing last year in the juvenile league. The club has had a few practices already trying out some new men.

Y.M.C.A. Tennis

A meeting of the Y.M.C.A. Lawn Tennis Association will be held tomorrow night at 7.15 in the Y.M.C.A. to organize and elect officers for the summer season.

Divorce at Deathbed.

A divorce performed at a deathbed seems at first blush an unusual and almost useless performance. One was declared in the Western Hospital, Toronto, a short time ago. The parties divorced were Mrs. M. Cohen and her dying husband. Rabbi Gordon, of the McCaul street and University avenue Synagogues, granted the divorce.

Among the orthodox Hebrews it is still a question of religious obligation to carry out the scriptural injunction that where a man dies without children, his brother must marry his widow with a view to continuing the family.

It was to avoid this obligation that this divorce in which neither party was complainant, and where there was no cause save approaching death, was urged or felt. The woman did not wish to be bound to marry the brother of her husband after his death, and so the help of the Rabbi was invoked. The husband died after the divorce, and the widow is free to marry whom she pleases.

Rabbi Gordon says that this is the only divorce which he has performed among his people in five years, and that he will perform no more save in such cases unless given power to do so by the Canadian authorities.

Canada's Water Power.

The first inventory ever taken of the water powers of Canada was completed towards the end of last year by the Commission of Conservation, whose investigations extended over a period of two years. The results of the inquiry set at rest any doubts that may have existed as to the immense potentialities of Canada's water power as a factor in her present and future prosperity, says Canada. It is estimated that in 1910 1,016,521 units of horsepower were developed from water power in Canada, 742,955 for electrical energy, and the rest for grist mill and pulp and paper mill use, and the full resources of the country have scarcely been tapped. The Hon. Clifford Sifton, who was chairman of the Conservation Commission, has stated that Canada possesses nearly one-half of the total available water powers of the globe.

TESTIMONY OF FIVE WOMEN

Proves That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Reliable.

Reedville, Ore.—"I can truly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all women who are passing through the Change of Life, as it made me a well woman after suffering three years."—Mrs. MARY BOGART, Reedville, Oregon.

New Orleans, La.—"When passing through the Change of Life I was troubled with hot flashes, weak and dizzy spells and backache. I was not fit for anything until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which proved worth its weight in gold to me."—Mrs. GASTON BLONDEAU, 1541 Polymnia St., New Orleans.

Mishawaka, Ind.—"Women passing through the Change of Life can take nothing better than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am recommending it to all my friends because of what it has done for me."—Mrs. CHAS. BAUER, 523 E. Marion St., Mishawaka, Ind.

Alton Station, Ky.—"For months I suffered from troubles in consequence of my age and thought I could not live. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me well and I want other suffering women to know about it."—Mrs. EMMA BAILEY, Alton Station, Ky.

Deisem, No. Dak.—"I was passing through Change of Life and felt very bad. I could not sleep and was very nervous. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound restored me to perfect health and I would not be without it."—Mrs. F. M. THORN, Deisem, No. Dak.

PREFERRED WORK ON THE FARM TO DEPORTATION

The young immigrant named Albert Jarvis, against whom deportation proceedings were instituted in Peterboro, owing to his refusal to stay at farm work, is at present in the province of Quebec, where he is employed with a farmer. Jarvis entered this country on the understanding that he was to take up farm work, and Mr. Howson secured him employment. He became dissatisfied, however, soon, and being a mechanic left the farm and hired at the Canadian General. He was apprehended by the authorities, on being discovered and the deporting officer came to the city and took him to Montreal. There, he was told to chose which he would do, return to farm employment or be deported. He chose the former, and while he stays there his chances of remaining in Canada are as favorable as are other immigrants.

Marred By a Muzzle.

It was the early hours of the morning and not yet light when Brown woke up with a sense of impending dread.

He had suddenly remembered that it was his wife's birthday and he had bought her no present. And Mrs. Brown would be wanting to know why.

Ah, an idea! Creeping stealthily downstairs, he put a very large plate on the hall table and then, still silently, let the dog into the house. The preparations were complete.

"Many happy returns of the day, my dear!" he chortled. "As it is your birthday I have got a little surprise for you. Be quick and come downstairs and see it."

Full of anticipation, the good lady followed him and was just in time to see him kick the dog out of the house and stare in amazement at the empty plate.

"If that wretched dog hasn't eaten all the beautiful cake I brought home for you last night!" he cried in well acted anger.

But he had overlooked one little fact. The dog had worn his muzzle. It took a long time to explain the incident away.—Answers.

Real Congratulations.

"Many congratulations Herr Zwenger! I hear your wife presented twins to you yesterday."

"Oh, no; it wasn't I. It was the other Zwenger."

"Then I congratulate you very heartily."

Tactless.

"That man is the most tactless person I ever saw," said Maude.

"What did he do?" inquired Mamie.

"Met a lady in Reno and tried to be agreeable by telling her he hoped her husband was well."

Just so a man makes love to her, a woman may not care whether he means it or not.

SOON SETTLED STRIKE

CHURCHILL'S MOTHER WANTED NO TROUBLE ON HER JOB.

Mrs. Cornwallis West Is Determined That No Labor Disputes Will Delay the "Shakespeare's England" Exhibition and When an Argument Rose She Entered Personally Into the Discussion and Ended It.

Mrs. Cornwallis West, who is the moving spirit in the "Shakespeare's England" exhibition, which is to be the great London attraction this summer, has taken precautions that labor troubles shall not disturb the steady progress of the structural work at Earl's Court.

The workmen had only been on the scene a few days when a dispute arose as to the employment of union and non-union labor. Very soon all the elements of a strike were manifest.

MRS. CORNWALLIS WEST.

Mrs. West did not wait for the contractors to adjust the dispute. She came down to the grounds and heard the workmen's story from their own spokesmen, with the result that she insisted upon the full trade union rate of wages being pay to every man employed, whether laborer or mechanic.

The contractors pointed out to her that such a stipulation was not embodied in the agreement and that if they were forced to pay the higher scale of wages it would seriously interfere with their financial calculations. She replied she was not interested in their calculations, but if they did not care about the job they could clear out and do as they pleased.

"I am preparing these grounds for my exhibition and I don't want them to be a battlefield for labor disputes" was her parting shot, as she picked up her skirts, and hurried to her automobile. The contractors capitulated on the spot.

No More Cheap Meals.

Not much longer are the members of the House of Commons to remain in enjoyment of the cheapest meals in England. For some years they have been eating twenty-five cents dinners that would cost the less fortunate millions who never enter the portals of Westminster almost twice the sum. Now it has been discovered that the refreshment department of the House of Commons has been dropping money at the rate of $17,000 a year and a new kitchen committee proposes to jump the price of the members' dinners to thirty or thirty-five cents.

Just why the members of Parliament should be so advantageously placed that they are able to eat in what has become known as "the finest club in the world" no one knows. But when the members, who formerly worked without pay, were recently granted $2,000 a year each in salary, everybody agreed that they could afford to pay a few pennies more for their food, especially as everything served at Westminster is of the best quality and the service is the same as is found in the most fashionable London restaurants. An enormous business is done, and during a session, from February to November, more than 185,000 meals are served. The restaurant enjoys a state subsidy of $10,000.

Rulers' Peculiar Homes.

The craze for peculiar homes has never been apparent in the character of a king or queen of England, but in other countries reigning monarchs have fallen to the fancy. For instance, a native prince of Java has cooled his palace by making a stream fall in a cascade over the gateway.

The Czar Paul constructed a room formed entirely of enormous mirrors, where he spent hours walking to and fro in full uniform—a peculiar taste, seeing that he was one of the ugliest of rulers. One Russian empress built a palace of ice and when a courtier offended her he was condemned to spend a night in the chilly silence of the chamber of state, where he was almost frozen to death.—London Answers.

Coal Mining With Canary Birds.

One of the most effective instruments of rescue work in case of mine accident is a canary bird. After an explosion, it seems, there is likely to be carbon monoxide in the air. This gas is not perceptible to any of the senses. All the victim knows is that suddenly his senses give way and he falls. A canary bird, as it happens, is much more quickly affected by the fumes than a man is. So a rescuer going into a mine in which an accident has hapened may feel safe in proceeding just so long as the canary bird he carries with him sits upright on its perch.—World's Work.

Unidentified Dead at Halifax Sixty in Number--Many of the Relatives Will Await the Arrival of the Steamer Minia.

Special to the Review.

Halifax, May 1.—Thirty embalmers worked all night in an improvised morgue preparing for the inspection of more of the unidentified dead in whom centres the fragile hope that relatives searching for Titanic victims may find their kin.

Throughout the night from time to time wagons rolled away with claimed dead. The unidentified list still stood at sixty this morning. Of these two are partly identified as Arthur White and Assistant Purser Clark. Some of the dissappointed relatives have returned to their homes but the majority will await the arrival of the steamer Minia.

TAKES THREE HOURS TO CARRY VICTIMS TO IMPROVISED MORGUE

Halifax, May 1.—The sun shone brightly in Halifax yesterday, but there was nevertheless a species of darkness over the city that could be felt from the time that the church bells began their solemn tolling as the Mackay-Bennett, her afterdeck piled high with coffins and her forward deck with unshrouded bodies, lying two deep, appeared.

Not more than a score of people saw the bodies carried off the ship to the pier by bareheaded sailors, who rapidly and silently transferred them to the big squad of undertakers. In less than five minutes after the first body was landed the initial hearse in a string of twenty, started off for the extemporized morgue, the sentries at the gate for three hours long saluting with dreary monotony as the dead carriages passed out the dockyard to climb the steep streets.

Never before was the dockyard so carefully guarded. Soldiers on the roofs of the departmental buildings within the walls and on every eminence patrolled, with special instructions to stop every attempt at photographing. In these efforts the police were successful, so that it is doubtful if a single picture was taken. A Halifax photographer who joined forces with three Americans who sought to take pictures was caught by Sergt. Kennedy of the Dominion police, his camera was confiscated and his films were destroyed.

It was startling to see a detachment of Halifax police come up with the Mackay-Bennett. They had boarded the ship at quarantine and their purpose was to prevent newspaper men or photographers getting on the ship in the harbor. A moving picture man followed her up, but at the pier his work was ended.

The story told by Captain Lardner and Canon Hind was a practical narration of facts with no embellishments, simply telling of the search for bodies, which resulted in a harvest of death far more fruitful than had ever been anticipated for the ship took away about seventy coffins and she snatched from the sea three hundred and six bodies.

So great did the burden of the dead become that Capt. Lardner was forced to return bodies to the sea. Of the 306 found, 106 was returned to the depths, leaving 190 on arrival at Halifax. Of that 190 there were 131 identified, and 59 unidentified. The pathos of this was keen at the morgue yesterday, when friends of F. Sutton of Philadelphia, who had long been here waiting for his body, had to be told that Sutton was one of the identified who had been recommitted to the waters.

At the identification room in the morgue all the satisfaction Mr. Sutton's friends had was to be shown his personal effects.

The bodies of ten were taken to the undertaken rooms of Snow & Co. very soon after landing. They were the remains of M. C. Long of Worcester, Mass.; F. D. Mellett of Washington, and E. C. Ostby, which were forwarded by rail last night. Seven other bodies go to-day, those of Col. John Jacob Astor, Isidor Straus, G. Rosenshine, of New York; W. D. Douglas of Minneapolis; W. Vanderhaef of New York; H. J. Allison of Montreal, and E. C. Crosby.

Col. Astor's body goes with the Astor car. The others go by express.

One of the earliest visitors to the morgue was Senator Mackeen, who vainly sought for the remains of Hugo Ross of Winnipeg.

TAFT HAS SLIGHT LEAD

Boston, May 1.—Returns from Presidential primaries held throughout the state yesterday were so incomplete at midnight that it was impossible to say whether Col. Theodore Roosevelt had succeeded in inducing the voters of his party to elect the majority of thirty-six delegates from Massachusetts to the national convention in his favor.

While Boston gave the President a small majority on the Presidential preference vote, the Roosevelt delegates got big majorities. The manufacturing towns gave Col. Roosevelt majorities, and even some of the Cape Cod towns. Senator Murray Crane's home district went against the President.

The Republican vote was much larger than that cast by the Democrats, Champ Clark getting big majorities over Woodrow Wilson throughout.

Returns from 471 out of the 1,080 election precincts, including parts of ten cities and 160 towns, out of 33 cities and 320 towns, give:

Republican preferences: La Follette 663, Roosevelt 25,451, Taft 25,215.

Delegates at large: Baxter (heading Roosevelt group) 26,135, Crane (heading Taft group) 21,977.

Democratic preferences: Clark 16,819, Wilson 7,511.

Delegates at large: Coughlin (pledged to Foss) 16,101, Williams (for primary preference) 5,435.

Complete returns from the city of Boston give: Republican preferences: La Follette 249, Roosevelt 10,651, Taft 11,282.

Delegates at large: Baxter 10,913, Crane 10,078.

Democratic preferences: Clark 14,300, Wilson 5,879.

Delegates at large: Coughlin (pledged to Foss) 13,389, Williams 4,020.

TITANIC FUND NOW $1,500,000

London, May 1.—The Titanic funds, including those collected in Canada and the United States, now aggregate well over $1,500,000. The mayor of Southampton points out, however, that a large number of people are at that place, and he wants the collection to continue. It will not be surprising if the amount eventually reached $2,500,000 on this side, as there are still the proceeds of numerous theatrical and musical performances to come, and most of the incoming steamers are bringing in additional funds collected on the passage. The benefit performance on the Mauretania realized $3,250. The Kaizerin Auguste Victoria brought $1,070.

THEY MUST HAVE CANADIAN CREWS

Winnipeg, May 1.—Committees from both sides of the line representing the several orders of trainmen, conductors, engineers and firemen, are trying to settle the trouble which appears imminent, over the Hill lines operating trains from the border to Winnipeg with American crews run through from Grand Forks, N.D.

To-day the Great Northern and Northern Pacific begin to operate their own trains into Winnipeg. These trains have been operated previously with Canadian crews from the border to this city. The management claim it is the part of economy to bring the trains through with their own crews.

There is no law to stop them, but the railway union on the Canadian side say they will prevent it, even by a strike if necessary.

PUBLIC AROUSED AT THE VERDICT

Campbellton, N.B., May 1.—A mass meeting of the citizens was held here Monday night to protest against the recent verdict acquitting Dr. W. W. Doherty on a charge of murder in causing the death of Daniel J. Bruce during an argument in the last Dominion election. It was stated at the time that the point of Doherty's umbrella was driven into Bruce's eye, and death followed. Doherty was acquitted and there has been some press criticism. At Monday night's meeting Mayor Murray presided, and resolutions were carried, moved by Rev. T. H. Drumm, and seconded by A. G. Adams.

The resolutions declared that the public conscience had been shocked by the acquittal of Dr. Doherty; that they believed there was a grave miscarriage of justice, and that the Attorney-General's Department be requested to investigate the conduct of the trial and consider means to prevent a recurrance.

BREAKWATER AT QUEBEC CRUMBLES

Quebec, May 1.—Somewhat of a sensation has been caused by the report that the Government will be compelled to rebuild part of the breakwater extension, which cost nearly a million dollars. The whole frontage is in such an unstable condition, it is said, that a masonry wall will have to be built at a cost of $500,000. It is also stated that the harbor commissioners made representations to the late Government to this effect, pointing out that the construction was faulty.

HIS LORDSHIP THE BISHOP OF PETERBORO

His Lordship Bishop O'Connor is to-day celebrating the twenty-third anniversary of his elevation to the office of Bishop, the venerable and beloved divine beginning to-day his twenty-fourth year as Bishop of Peterboro. His Lordship while not in the city to receive congratulations, will rest assured of the hearty and sincere good wishes of his parishioners and numerous friends in Peterborough.

He is in Ogdensburg attending the consecration of Bishop Conroy.

COMMISSIONER PATTERSON CONTRADICTS CHARGES OF HOTELKEEPER FARR

The Head of the Centre Bruce License Board Declares That Hotelkeeper Farr Came to Him With an Offer—He Has Also Instituted a Suit For $5,000 Damages For Libel Arising Out of the Charges.

Goderich, May 1.—Evidence of a flatly contradictory nature was given at the sitting of the commission investigating Centre Huron license matters, arising from the charges of Michael Farr, hotelman, that Wm. Patterson, chairman of the license board, had sought a bribe as a condition of Farr's license being renewed.

Patterson's evidence yesterday was that Farr had made a tentative offer to give him (Patterson) $300 if the safety of his license could be guaranteed, and that he had declined to consider any such proposal.

Also conflicting were the statements of James B. Reynolds, another boniface, and John Kelly. The former said that he had neither suggested using money personally to secure renewal of his license, nor had he heard rumors of any such action on the part of others, while Kelly declared Reynolds had spoken of "putting up."

Farr's statement that neither Patterson nor Inspector Asquith was in the habit of paying for meals at his hotel, brought from Commissioner Eudo Saunders a remark that such a practice was reprehensible.

The enquiry will probably be concluded to-day.

William Patterson, chairman of the board, is instituting an action for $5,000 damages for libel against Farr on account of the statement of the latter when in the witness box at the investigation Monday, that Mr. Patterson had offered to secure Farr against the cancellation of his license for the consideration of $500.

It was suggested that the investigation be allowed to stand over pending the trial of the libel suit, but this Provincial Secretary Hanna emphatically declined to accede to, and the investigation will go on.

The Collegiate Institute Literary Society annual Concert will be held in the Assembly Hall, Friday evening, May 3rd. Tickets 50 cents. 3d

HE ROBBED HIS EMPLOYER

Belleville, May 1.—Joseph Foley, a young man who stole a watch and money and other articles from his employer, Mr. Daniel Grass, whilst the latter and family were away on Sunday evening, was arrested at Napanee and brought back to this city. He was tried yesterday and pleaded guilty and was remanded for a week for sentence. He had been previously convicted for theft.

Liveryman Ended Life.

Brockville, May 1.—J. Hodge, a well-known citizen of Cardinal Village, ended his life by drinking carbolic acid. Hodge left his home early Monday morning and not returning a search was instituted, with the result that about noon yesterday his body was found under a boathouse. Hodge conducted a livery business, was about 35 years of age, and was married.

London Cadets Get Ross Rifle.

Ottawa, May 1.—Col. Hughes has sent on loan to England 20 long Ross rifles, equipped with the Sutherland sight, for the British cadets selected at the request of the Imperial War Office from the city and the county of London territorial forces to shoot at the matches under the auspices of the National Exhibition at Toronto this year.

Succeeds Hon. Mr. Lemieux's Father.

Montreal, May 1.—J. E. Corbeil, who, for some thirty years, has been chief of the department of alcohol analysis in the Montreal customs house, has just been nominated inspector-in-chief of customs for the district of Montreal. He replaces H. A. Lemieux, father of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, who has been superannuated.

Venezuelan Cabinet Resigns.

Caracas, Venezuela, May 1.—The Venezuelan Cabinet resigned yesterday. The reason for the step is not indicated.

NEW STEAMER IS LAUNCHED

Collingwood, May 1.—The launching of the new Canadian Government steamer "Estivan," which is to be used in the lighthouse service on the Pacific Coast, took place at the yards of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Co. here yesterday afternoon. Miss Helen Currie, daughter of Major J. A. Currie, M.P. for North Simcoe, christened the boat. Following the ceremony, a banquet was held at which Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor, spoke. The banquet was tendered by the Collingwood Board of Trade in honor of the two Cabinet Ministers and Major Currie, and was the most notable in the history of the town.

Hon. Mr. Hazen delivered an address on the large program before the Government in the matter of shipbuilding and ship industries, and general marine improvements. The visitors were later entertained at a civic luncheon.

No Elevated Line In Montreal.

Ottawa, May 1.—The city of Montreal, in a protracted hearing before the Minister of Railways, yesterday put up a vigorous fight against approval of the elevated railway, part of the extensive tunnel and terminal plan in Montreal, and won out.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane approved the tunnel under the mountain and to Lagauchetierre street, but referred the rest to the Railway Commission.

[illegible] Shippers

Brantford, May 1.—H. G. Poulin, who conducted a business from 474 Ontario street, Montreal, with Western Ontario people, was fined $300 here yesterday in the police court, with the option of one year in the Central, for perpetrating fraud.

Poulin had various shipments consigned to his address, which place, however, had never been opened all winter. He secured the shipments, disposed of them, and the shippers never heard from him. L. H. Thompson, Elora, was the most recent victim, having sent a quantity of jute bags to Poulin.

Turkish Vessel Wrecked.

Smyrna, May 1.—The steamer Texas, belonging to the Archipelago-American Steamship Co., struck a mine at the entrance to the Gulf of Smyrna Monday evening and sank. It is reported that 90 of the 100 passengers were rescued.

The Texas was flying the Turkish flag and was engaged in carrying mails from Constantinople to the Levant.

The Gulf of Smyrna is one of the finest harbors in the Mediterranean, and Smyrna itself is the principal seaport of Asiatic Turkey. The entrance to the gulf was extensively mined some time ago by the Turkish authorities in order to protect the port against an attack by the Italian fleet.

The Texas was a vessel of 261 tons net register, built at Newcastle, Eng., in 1888. She was at first called the Olympia, then re-christened the Marguerita, and finally received the name of the Texas.

MEN RETURN TO SHIPS

Joint Conference Will Endeavor to Settle the Dispute.

Special to the Review.

Liverpool, May 1.—A committee of the shipowners and the members of the Seamen's and Firemen's Unions and the Transport Workers' Federation have agreed to hold a joint conference this month to settle matters in dispute . In the meantime all the men will return to their ships.

ARE CHARGED WITH MUTINY

Portsmouth, May 1.—The seamen of the White Star liner Olympic who left that vessel after the strike of the firemen last week, were brought to the police court here yesterday on a charge of mutiny. The testimony given was merely a repetition of the events connected with the trouble that occurred when the vessel was leaving Southampton. The hearing was adjourned until May 4.

Suit Against Harvester Co.

St. Paul, Minn., May 1.—The Government yesterday began its long-planned anti-trust suit against the International Harvester Co., in the Federal District Court here in a petition in equity, this $140,000,004 corporation, popularly called the Harvester Trust, is declared to exist in violation of the Sherman Law, and its dissolution is sought by means of injunctions which will prevent interstate trade, and by the appointment of a receivership. Monopoly and enhanced prices are charged.

In explaining the dispositions of the stock, the petition says that $3,451,803 was issued to J. P. Morgan & Co., for underwriting services and legal expenses, and $3,148,197 to the same firm in reimbursement for the cash expended to secure the property of the Milwaukee Harvester Co.

Widow to Sue "White Star."

Washington, D.C., May 1.—Under a proceeding in Admiralty Court here yesterday, J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the International Mercantile Marine, was summoned to appear yesterday afternoon before a commissioner to give testimony to be used in a suit of Mrs. Louise Robbins of New York against the White Star Line. Mrs. Robbins' husband was lost in the Titanic disaster.

Subpoenas also were issued by the Admiralty Court for the surviving officers of the Titanic.

Hotelman's Sudden Death.

Bobcaygeon, May 1.—J. H. Thompson, proprietor of the Rockland House, was stricken with paralysis yesterday morning and died in an hour. He had been in the best of health.

Peer In a Pulpit.

Lord Kinnaird, who has gone to Egypt for a three months trip, was at one time a famous footballer. A handbook published thirty-eight years ago described him as "without exception the best player of the day, capable of taking any place on the field." He was quite fearless himself, but his mother suffered some anxiety on his account. When the late Sir Francis Marindin, also a footballer, called upon her one day, she expressed her fear that "Arthur would some day come home with a broken leg." "Don't be alarmed," smilingly answered Sir Francis, "for if he does it will not be his own."

Lord Kinnaird has often occupied a pulpit as a preacher. He is distinctly evangelical in tone, and has learnt the art of being able to drive homely truths into the hearts of his congregation without hardly ever raising his voice or indulging in eloquent gestures. Nor is he above raising an occasional laugh with a word, or a phrase, or a story.

Once he convulsed his hearers by telling them of a "wee Scot laddie" who had developed the habit of picking his grandmother's gooseberries. Caught in the act, he declared that it was the Devil who tempted him.

"Then," said the grandmother, "the next time he tempts you say, Get thee behind me, Satan'." Shortly afterwards, the precious laddie was again caught in the act, and upon again being scolded, murmured: "I said, 'Get thee behind me, Satan,' and he got behind me and pushed me into the middle of the bush."

The Smallest Armies.

If ever the dream of the disarmament of the world shall be realized there are several countries that would not have much to do in this line—as, for instance, Monaco, whose army consists of seventy-five guards, seventy-five carabineers and twenty firemen. The next smallest army is that of Luxembourg, with its 135 gendarmes, 170 volunteers and thirty musicians. In the republic of San Marino they can put in the field a total of nine companies of 950 men and thirty-eight officers, commanded by a marshal. The army on a peace footing consists of one company of sixty men. The most amusing of all the "armies," however, is that of Liberia. That country's fighting force is composed of 700 men and 800 officers, but the latter are evidently deemed very terrible by their own Government since the republic issues proclamations of neutrality when wars break out between any of the powers.

Work has begun near Belleville on the new C.P.R. line.

MURDERER OF LOUIS PORTER AT MINDEN IS NOT YET APPREHENDED

Asked About Mail Contracts.

Wasinhgton, D.C., May 1.—Mr. Ismay in his evidence yesterday said that none of the company's ships was in the British navy reserve. He told of mail contracts with the British Government but denied that there was anything in the contract calling for high speed.

"Is there any minimum speed?"

"Yes, I think that we are not allowed to put mails on a ship that makes less than 16 knots an hour," Mr. Ismay replied.

Senator Smith questioned the witness at length as to the details of the mail contract. Witness declared that the mail bounty was so small that in itself "would not induce any one to build big ships."

Mr. Ismay said another sister ship to the Olympic is now being built.

SAWED HANDCUFFS AND MADE ESCAPE

Toronto, May 1.—Arthur Jarvis of Cornwall, sentenced to Central Prison for six months for theft, made a clean get-away from a provincial inspector at the corner of Queen street and Spadina avenue last night. In a chain gang of 12 prisoners Jarvis was brought to Toronto by John J. Ryan of 487 Parliament street, who is connected with the department of asylums and prisons. When the train arrived at the Union Station about 9 o'clock Ryan put his men in an express wagon in order to carry them to the prison. All wore handcuffs attached to a long chain.

Jarvis was the end man in the wagon and at the corner of Queen and Spadina he very quietly slipped off and ran along a side street. Ryan did not notice that he only had 11 men in the wagon until the vehicle had gone some distance; then he notified a constable. But Jarvis could not be found.

Jarvis broke away by means of a file, which it is believed he picked up somewhere at the Union Station. Probably he found it in the baggage-room, through which the 12 prisoners were taken to the wagon, or there is a possibility that it was surreptitiously handed to him by a local pal.

Jarvis has a bad record, having been confined in Central Prison on several occasions. He is about 25 years of age.

WIRELESS MESSAGES

Paris, France, is planning a six hundred million dollar railway across Africa.

The home rule debate was resumed in the British House of Commons yesterday.

Ten Kingston licenses have been cut off, leaving the number of licensed hotels at fifteen.

The Kingston Milling Co. offers an amount of power to the city at three-quarters of a cent per kilowat hour.

There are marked indications that the Portuguese monarchists intend to make another attempt to seize the northern provinces of Portugal.

The twenty-sixth annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Missionary Society of the Church of England was opened in Toronto yesterday.

A direct exchange of parcels by post between Canada and France and between Canada and Algeria and Corsica via France, came into operation to-day.

Alex. Ellis, Brother-In-Law of the Murdered Man Heard the Shots About an Hour After Porter Passed—Fatal Bullet Was Fired After the Victim Was Down—Body Dragged Over 250 Yards.

Minden, Ont., May 1.—Nothing else but the murder of Louis Porter is talked about here. The details point plainly to the fact that the man was murdered from ambuscade close to the road when returning from inspecting some traps which he had set near a rapid two miles from his father's house. The murder took place six miles north of Minden on the Cameron road. The dead man's father says that he left his house about 7 o'clock on Thursday night, and Alex. Ellis, brother-in-law of the murdered man, tells of seeing him pass his house a few minutes later. He says that about an hour afterwards he heard two shots.

When the body was discovered by a search party which worked unsuccessfully all of Saturday and came upon it Sunday noon, it lay in the hollow by an uprooted tree two hundred and fifty yards west of the road and toward Gull Lake. There was evidence that the body had been dragged from the road to this hiding place. The coat collar was drawn up over the head and was smeared along the clothing, and the sock on the left leg had been rolled down over the boot. A number of stones had been overturned by the dragging.

Blood stains on the road told a vivid tale of the tragedy. There was a streak of blood forty-two feet long, ending in a pool. The man had been evidently shot at the beginning of this and had been dropped where the pool was found.

Dr. Pogue has completed a postmortem upon the body. He discovered three wounds, which does away with the idea that Porter had been shot with his own rifle, as he had only two cartridges when he left his father's house. One wound entered the arm two inches above the elbow inside and back, and comes out about two inches below in the forearm. The second wound, which entered at the right shoulder, penetrated both lungs and shattered the ribs circling the breast, and lodged at the back of the left shoulder.

It is believed that the third wound was inflicted after he had fallen. It entered the abdomen and fractured the pelvis, and the bullet was found in the muscles of the hip at the back. Dr. Pogue says that the man did not die until after he received this wound.

Two men have been found who say that about dusk on Thursday evening they heard shots coming from the place where the murder was committed. They are Charles Wood and Andrew Harrison, who live a short distance south from this place, at the head of Gull Lake. They declare positively that they heard five shots in rapid succession just at dusk on Thursday night. This differs from Ellis, who says that he heard only two shots, with a considerable interval between them.

The body of Porter was buried in the Minden cemetery yesterday afternoon. Nearly everybody in the village and vicinity turned out to attend.

Ellis, the man who last saw Porter alive, is a brother-in-law of the dead man, and it is said that neither Porter nor his father had been friendly with Ellis for some years. In the many theories which are being put forward to explain the murder, there seems to be agreement upon one thing, and that is that Porter was killed by some one who feared him greatly.

It is understood that the dead man had many enemies. No arrest has yet been made, nor is it likely that any will be until after the completion of the inquest, which resumes on Friday night, but which will likely be adjourned until some day next week, before the bulk of the testimony is taken. A provincial detective has been asked for and is expected to-day.

BELLEVILLE IS GROWING

Belleville, May 1.—A report presented to the City Council by Assessor Kerr showed an increase in assessment over last year of $671,500, the total assessment for the year being $5,588,[illegible]. The total increase in population for the year was 471.

The Desert of Sahara.

The greater part of the desert of Sahara is from 6,000 to 8,000 feet above the level of the ocean. The desert is not rainless, but showers cover it with grass for a few weeks in the year, large flocks and herds being mainly upon its borders, and the oases are depressions in which water can be collected and stored. It was one time believed that the whole of the desert was below the sea level instead of only a comparatively small part of it.

HORSE'S LEG SWELLED

Animal Was Too Sore and Lame to Work—Quickly Cured by "Nerviline."

"I have had a long experience in treating horses, and I can safely say that I know of no liniment for strains, sprains, and swelling that is so useful around the stable as Nerviline." Thus writes Mr. Joshua E. Murchison, from his home, Crofts Hill P. O. I had a fine young mare that wrenched her right fore leg, and from the shoulder down she was stiff, sore, and swollen. I applied Nerviline, and it worked like a charm; in fact, that mare was in shape to work a day after I used Nerviline.

Nerviline Is a Trusty Liniment

"We have used Nerviline on our farm for twenty-five years and never found it wanting. For man or beast it is a wonderful liniment."

We have received nearly five thousand letters, recommending Nerviline as a general household liniment, as an all-round cure for aches and pains. One million bottles used each year. Try it yourself. Large bottles of Nerviline 50c; trial size, 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

UNION LABEL

POLITICAL REASONS

It was argued by advocates of the reciprocity arrangement made by Liberal leaders and President Taft, that it would not have a political effect—that such a bargain would not have an influence on Canada's political position. Its opponents, or many of them, at any rate, took the ground that the transference of trade from north to south instead of from west to east, and the position of dependence upon tariff making at Washington in which Canada would be placed, would have an evil political result, and for that reason, as well as because it was an ill-advised bargain from a business point of view, it should be rejected.

The quarrel between President Taft and Mr. Roosevelt has revealed some of the minor history of the matter on the other side, in which it is shown that it was intended and believed there that the agreement "would make Canada only an adjunct of the United States," and that it should be pressed by the United States for "political reasons."

When about to take up the negotiations with Mr. Fielding and Mr. Patterson, President Taft wrote to Mr. Roosevelt for his opinion, and in this letter which he has now made public, Mr. Taft said:

"Meantime the amount of Canadian products we would take would produce a current of business between Western Canada and the United States that would make Canada only an adjunct of the United States. It would transfer all their important business to Chicago and New York, with their bank credits and everything else, and it would increase greatly the demand of Canada for our manufacturers. I see this is an argument against reciprocity made in Canada, and I think it is a good one."

Of course it was a good argument from the point of view of Canadian interests and this was the President's candid opinion expressed in a private letter to one who was then his personal and political friend.

Mr. Roosevelt saw the force of the President's argument. In his reply the ex-President said:

"It seems to me that what you propose to do with Canada is admirable from every standpoint. I firmly believe in free trade with Canada for both economic and political reasons."

Mr. Roosevelt added that "whether Canada will accept such reciprocity I do not know, but it is greatly to your credit to make the effort." Canada did not accept such reciprocity. The citizens of this country saw good economic and political reasons why they should reject it and rejected it accordingly.

These letters were made public by the President because Mr. Roosevelt is now trying to win the Republican nomination from him. In their quarrel we on this side have no direct interest, but when United States politicians have quarreled Canadians got the information that their object was to lead this country into a trade arrangement that would build up cities and trade in the United States to the detriment of the trade centres and business interests of this country, and that would have such a political effect as the people of Canada would not desire. Only for the determined opposition of Mr. Borden and his followers in the House of Commons the agreement would have been forced through the Canadian Parliament, but their efforts forced an election and the Dominion was saved from the economic and political peril that menaced it.

DEPENDENT PARENTS

A man has been discovered in Toronto who will contribute nothing towards the support of his aged parents, and the parents have to be aided by a charitable organization. The Globe calls him Toronto's meanest man. We fear, however, that he is not the only son in Ontario, who is so ungrateful and unfeeling as to allow charitable organizations to help his parents. Instances of such unnatural conduct have been known in other communities. Parents are responsible by law for the maintenance of their children, and occasionally the authority of the law has to be invoked to compel them to fulfil their obligations. This of course is right. The children are helpless and the parents are their material providers. But when in the course of years the tables are turned and the parents are helpless, why should not the children be responsible for their maintenance? Children, of course, may have assumed family responsibilities of their own in the meantime, but the responsibility for the care of helpless parents should not be shirked merely because it would deprive the children, or the children's children, of some luxuries or comforts that they could well do without. Only inability should be accepted as a sufficient excuse. In Quebec, the law makes the maintenance of dependent parents, a charge upon their children, and the enactment of such a law in Ontario would be welcomed by those responsible for the dispensing of charitable funds.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

There is not a unanimity of sentiment among the Liberals in regard to old age pensions. The Examiner is opposed to them, but the Globe looks upon the proposal with considerable favor. The Toronto paper says:

"The deep interest awakened by a proposal for a system of old-age pensions shows that in Canada, as elsewhere, sociological problems are receiving a growing share of public attention. There is still a strong conviction that each should save for old age during active youth not by contributions to the public treasury as under the proposed system, but by safe investments. The preference for Governmental instead of personal savings is due to the natural uncertainty of life and the multitude of accidents and varied conditions that upset individual calculations or frustrate individual efforts. There is also the discouraging influence of lives dwarfed by rigid economy and prematurely ended without any enjoyment of the hard-earned leisure. The fact that the aged are cared for now makes a strong argument against those who protest on account of the expense of old-age pensions. It is true there is an occasional death from starvation or exposure. There are also deaths from the many ailments which are superinduced by insufficient food and shelter. But the economic gain of thus escaping the burden of the aged is negligible, while the injury to public dignity and humanity are incalculable. The aged are supported now by their personal savings or by the labor of the strong and able, but people contribute to that support according to their benevolence, their humanity, and sometimes, perhaps, their vanity. Under an old-age pension system contributions would be according to ability. The recipients would be spared the humiliation, the indignity, the incarceration, and the mental subservience that now accompany the receipt of charity. They could walk abroad free in body and mind. They would feel that they were enjoying in age the good results of their savings in youth—their direct or indirect contributions to the public treasury.

"The proposed system might suggest a means of solving some of the problems regarding workmen's compensation. It might be found expedient to regard man incapacitated by accident as on the same footing as man incapacitated by age. Against the cost of a better scale of living for the aged might be counted the present loss and waste through the uncertainties of charitable work. Advocates of the system make a strong plea on the ground of the obvious effects of the fear of poverty in old age. Were that fear eliminated, a large part of the influence toward meanness, inconsideration, and dishonesty would be removed. The gloomy prospect or possibility that looms nearer and nearer as the strength of youth declines points to a grasping selfishness that breaks family ties and dwarfs all impulses of human kindness. The satisfactory feeling that the burden of taxation in youth was making provision against the needs of age would help to eliminate a baneful influence. In the satisfying eagerness of national youth and among abundant opportunities for personal advancement such questions are likely to be overlooked. The need of such foresight is not continually in evidence. But it is well to consider in all its bearings the problem of systematically caring for the aged at the expense of their years of productive activity. Such problems can be dealt with but before they come forward as urgent necessities."

NOTE AND COMMENT

Mr. Roosevelt may have made Mr. Taft President of the United States, but if so, the President does not now love his maker.

The reduction in freight rates on the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario railway is approved of by the Liberal press. It is remarkable how many acts of the Whitney Government the Liberals feel bound to endorse.

City Engineer Rust, persuaded a party of Toronto aldermen to walk two miles through a new sewer in water up to their knees. Wonder if he would have done that if he had not intended to soon leave the city?

There will probably be more than one outcome of the investigation of the Titanic disaster by the United States Senate committee, and one will be that the Senators will know a great deal more about maritime matters than when they began the enquiry.

Belleville proposes to engage an industrial Commissioner, and to appropriate $2,500 for the department. When Belleville was incorporated as a city, Peterborough was about half its size, and now Peterborough's population is about twice that of Belleville. The City of the Bay, however, has a beautiful situation, and has been picking up lately.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, April 30.—The railways reported 85 carloads of live stock at the City Yards, comprising 1311 cattle, 1050 hogs, 105 sheep and 821 calves.

Butchers

There were cattle bought for butchers' purposes of export weights, at prices ranging from $7 to $7.30; butchers' cattle, weighing from 1000 to 1100 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; cattle, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $6.50 to $6.75; cattle, 800 to 900 lbs., at $6.25 to $6.40; cattle, 600 to 710 lbs., at $5 to $5.85; cows, $3 to $6, with some extra quality cows at $6.25 to $6.50; bulls, $4.50 to $6.

Stockers and Feeders

Feeders, 1000 to 1040 lbs., sold at $6 to $6.25; stockers, 440 lbs. to 700 lbs., sold at $4 to $5.25; cows to turn out on grass sold at $4.

Milkers and Springers

Many of the cows now being offered are misfits, or the class for which there is no really reliable demand. More cows of the good to choice classes, are wanted than are coming forward and $60 to $65 would be paid for such, or up to $70 or even higher for something fancy in the Durham or Holstein line, but few of this class are being offered, altho $75 and $90 was paid to-day, and one extra cow was sold at $100, by Fred Armstrong. The ordinary light class of light cows sell down around $40 and $45, and only inferior sell below these figures.

Veal Calves.

About 900 veal calves were on sale today. Prices ranged from $4 to $7 per cwt. for the bulk, as will be seen by sales given below.

Sheep and Lambs.

Wesley Dunn quoted sheep, ewes, at $5.50 to $6.50; rams, $4.50 to $5; yearlings at $6 to $8.50 per cwt.; spring lambs at $3 to $7 each.

Hogs.

Early in the day $8.75 was the price paid, but in the afternoon, $8.80 and $8.85 for selects fed and watered, and $8.40 to $8.50 f.o.b. cars was reported as being paid.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

If he really meant what he said he ought to have gone gack to his hotel, played billiards for an hour, and sought his bedroom with an easy conscience. He was debating the point when the conceit intruded itself that Cynthia's pretty head was at that moment bent over a writing-table in a certain well-lighted corner apartment of the second floor, so he compromised with his half-formed intent, whisked round to face the sea again, and lighted another cigarette from the glowing end of its predecessor. Some part of his unaccountable irritation took wings with the cloud of smoke.

"Blessed if I can tell why I should worry," he communed. "Never saw the girl before to-day . . . shall never see her again if I put Dale in charge. . . Her father must be a special sort of fool, though, to trust her to the care of the Devar women. . . . What was it that rotter said?—'The affair arranges itself admirably.' And he would be 'always on hand.' What is arranging itself? . . And why should Jimmy Devar be ready, if need be, 'to turn up exactly at the right moment?' I suppose the answer to the first bit of the acrostic is simple enough. Cynthia Vanrenen is to become the Countess Marigny, and the Devar gang stands in on the cash proceeds. Oh, a nice scheme! This Frenchman is posted as to the tour. By the most curious of coincidences he will reappear at Bournemouth, or Bristol, or in the Wye Valley. What more natural than a day's run in company? . . Ah, I've got it! Jimmy is to come along when Marigny thinks that Cynthia will take a seat in the 59 Du Vailon for a change—just to try the new French car. . . . By gad, I shall have a word to say there. . . Steady, now George Augustus! Woa, my boy; keep a tight hand on the reins. Why in thunder should you concern yourself with the wretched business, anyhow?"

It was a marvelously still night. Beneath him, on an asphalted path nearly level with the stone-strewed beach, passed a young couple. The man's voice came up to him.

"Jones expects to be taken into partnership after this season, and I am pretty certain to be given the management of the woolen department. If that comes off, no more long hours in the shop for you, Lucy, but a nice little house up there on the hill, just as quick as we can find it."

"Oh, Charlie dear, I shall never be tired then. . ."

A black arm was suddenly silhouetted across the shoulders of a white blouse, whose wearer received a reassuring hug.

"Let's reckon up," said the owner of the arm—"July, August, September—three monts, sweetheart. . . ."

Medenham had never given a thought to marrying until his father hinted at the notion during dinner the previous evening, and he had laughed at it, being absolutely heart-whole. There was something irresistably comical then about the Earl's bland theory that Fairholme House needed a sprightly viscountess, yet now, twenty-four hours later, he could extract no shred of humor from the idyl of a drape's assistant. It seemed to be a perfectly natural thing that these lovers should talk of mating. Of what else should they whisper on this midsummer's night, when the gloaming already bore the promise of dawn, and the glory of the sea and sky spread quiet harmonies through the silent air?

Perhaps he sighed as he turned away, but his own evidence on that point would be inconclusive, since the first object his wondering eyes dwelt on was the graceful figure of Cynthia Vanrenen. There was no possibility of error. An arc lamp blazed overhead, and, to make assurance doubly sure, his recognition of Cynthia was obviously duplicated by Cynthia's recognition of her deputy chauffeur. In the girl's case some degree of surprise was justified. It is a truism of social life that far more distinctiveness is attached to the seemingly democratic severity of evening dress than to any other class of masculine garniture. Medenham now looked exactly what he was—a man born and bred in the purple. No one could possibly mistake this well-groomed soldier for Dale or Simmonds. His clever, resouceful face, his erect carriage, the very suggestion of mess uniform conveyed by his clothing, told of lineage and a career. He might, in sober earnest, have been compelled to earn a living by driving a motor-car, but no freak of fortune could rob him of his birthright as an aristocrat.

Of course, Cynthia was easily first in the effort to recover disturbed wits.

"Like myself, you have been tempted out by this beautiful night, Mr. Fitzroy," she said.

Then "Mr." was a concession to his attire; somethow she imagined it would savor of presumption if she addressed him as an inferior. She could not define her mental attitude in words, but her quick intelligence responded to its subtle influence as a mirrored lake records the passing breeze. Very dainty and self-possessed she looked as she stood there smiling at him. Her motor dust-coat was utilized as a wrap. Beneath it she wore a white muslin dress of a studied simplicity that, to another woman's assessing gaze, would reveal expensiveness. She had tied a veil of delicate lace around her hair and under her chin, and Medenham noted, with a species of awe, that her eyes, so vividly blue in daylight, were now dark as the sky at night.

And he was strangely tongue-tied. He found nothing to say until after a pause that verged on awkwardness. Then he floundered badly.

"I am prepared to vouch for any explanation so long as it brings you here, Miss Vanrenen," he said.

Cynthia wanted to laugh. It was sufficiently ridiculous to be compelled, as it were, to treat a paid servant as an equal, but it savored of madness to find him verging on the perilous borderland of a flirtation.

"Do you wish, then, to consult me on any matter?" she asked, with American directness.

"I was standing here and thinking of you," he said. "Perhaps that accounts for your appearance. Since you have visited India you may have heard that the higher Buddhists, when they are anxious that another person shall act according to their desire, remain motionless in front of that person's residence and concentrate ardent thought on their fixed intent. . . . Sitting in dhurma on a man, they call it. I suppose the same principle applies to a woman."

"It follows that you are a higher Buddhist, and that you willed I should come out. Your theory of sitting on the door-mat, is it? wobbles a bit in practice, because I really ran downstairs to tell Mrs. Devar something I had forgotten previously. Not finding her, I decided on a stroll. Instead of crossing the road I walked up to the left a couple of blocks. Then I noticed the pier, and meant to have a look at it before returning to the hotel. Anyhow, you wanted me, Mr. Fitzroy, and here I am. What can I do for you?"

Her tone of light raillery, supplemented by that truly daring adaption of the method of gaining a cause favored by the esoteric philosophy of the East, went far to restore Medenham's wandering faculties.

"I wanted to ask you a few questions, Miss Vanrenen," he explained.

"Pray do, as they say in Boston."

But he was not quite himself yet. He noticed that the lights were extinguished in the corner of the second floor.

"Is that your room?" he asked, pointing to it.

"Yes."

Her air of bland amazement supplied a further tonic.

"Queer thing!" he said. "I thought so. More of the occult, I suppose. But I really wished to speak to you about Mrs. Devar."

Cynthia was obviously relieved.

"Dear me!" she cried. "You two have taken a violent dislike to each other. You see, Mr. Fitzroy, we Americans are rather pleased than otherwise if a man acts and speaks like a gentleman even though he has to earn a living by hustling an automobile, but your sure-enough British dames exact a kind of servility from a chauffeur that doesn't seem to fit in with your make-up. Servility is a hard word, but it is the best I can throw on the screen at the moment and I'm real sorry if I have hurt your feelings by using it."

Medenham smiled. Each instant his calmer judgement showed more and more clearly that he could not offer any valid excuse for interference in the girl's affairs. For all he knew to the contrary, she might be tremulous with delight at the prospect of becoming a French countess; if that were so, the fact that he disapproved of Mrs. Devar's matchmaking tactics would be received very coldly. Cynthia's natural interpretation of his allusion to her chaperon offered a means of escape from a difficult position.

"I am greatly obliged by your hint," he said. "Not that my lack of good manners is of much account, seeing that I am only a stop gap for the courtly Simmonds, but I shall endeavor to profit by it in my next situation."

"Now you are getting at me," cried Cynthia, her eyes sparkling somewhat. "Do you know, Mr. Fitzroy, I am inclined to think you are not a chauffeur at all."

"I assure you there is not a man living who understands my special type of car better," he protested.

"That isn't what I mean, so don't wriggle. You met Simmonds when he was in trouble, and just offered to take his place for a day or so, thereby doing him a good turn—isn't that the truth?"

"Yes."

"And you are not in the automobile business?"

"I am, for the time being."

"Well, I am glad to hear it. I was shy of telling you when we reached the hotel, but you understand, of course, that I pay your expenses during this trip. The arrangement with Simmonds was that my father ante'd for petrol and allowed twelve shillings a day for the chauffeur's meals and lodgings. Is that satisfactory?"

"Quite satisfactory, Miss Vanrenen," said Medenham, fully alive to the girl's effective ruse for the re-establishment of matters on a proper footing.

"So you don't need to worry about Mrs. Devar. In any event, since you refused my offer to hire you for the tour, you will not see a great deal of her," she went on, a trifle hurriedly.

"There only remains one other point," he said, trying to help her. "Would you mind giving me Mr. Vanrenen's address in Paris?"

"He is staying at the Ritz—but why do you want to know that?" she demanded with a sudden lifting of eyebrows, for the hope was strong in her that he might be induced to change his plans so far as the next nine days were concerned.

"A man in my present position ought always to ascertain the whereabouts of millionaires interested in motoring," he answered promptly. "And now, pardon me for advising you not to walk towards the pier alone.."

"Gracious me! why not?"

"There is a certain class of boisterous holiday-makers who might annoy you—not by downright illbehavior, but by exercising a crude humor which is deemed peculiarly suitable to the seaside, though it would be none the less distressing to you."

"In the States that sort of man gets shot," she said, her cheeks glowed with a rush of color.

"Here, on the contrary, he often takes the young lady's arm and walks off with her," persisted Medenham.

NEW MOTOR COAT.

A Stunning Paris Model of Mixed Worsted.

CLOTH COAT WITH ORIENTAL MOTIFS.

Tan and green worsted material makes this stunning new spring motor coat. The trimmings are of olive brown ratine and applied oriental embroidered motifs add richness to the large collar. The huge buttons used on this coat are particularly modish.

Glass Buttons In Style.

When an old fashion becomes a new fashion a woman is furious with herself for not having kept what she possessed. It is excessively difficult to carry out a hoarding method, for every inch of room is needed in our houses, and, with the fashions trying to rival a weather vane in a storm, we look upon each year's accumulation of things as mere junk.

Surely we can never need these again, is the usual decision that precedes the dumping of everything into the ash can. And suddenly out of a clear sky comes an announcement that the very things which were consigned to the ash can were to be returned into first fashion.

If one wants a white corduroy suit for spring than these flat glass buttons, lined with purple, would look very well with a sailor collar of purple satin and a piping of the same down the back of the sleeves at the side of the buttonholes.

You know the long sleeves that are coming in show a return to the trick of two summers ago which was never widely taken up and yet was so attractive. This sleeve, instead of being ornamented with buttons, had its two edges really fastened together with actual buttons made into the form of cuff links with silk cord between.

The new sleeve in taffeta and satin and poplin has its edges fastened from half way below the elbow to the wrist with these link buttons set a half inch back from the extreme edge, and then between the two edges is put an inch wide plaited frill of lace.

On a black satin frock that has been turned out recently the sleeves are managed in this way with the frill extending around the wrist. The surplice shaped blouse has a plaited frill lying against the chemisette, which is of white tulle, and the frill runs down the front fastening of the blouse, which, by the way, is similar to the fastening on the sleeves.

The skirt has a full draped tunic over an overskirt that is not two yards wide, but is opened at each side for four inches. There is a wide crossed sash of the satin which has one end pulled through the girdle at the side, then falls over and hangs to the knee, where it is finished with velvet fringe.

The New Idea of Marriage.

That marriage has the effect of humanizing the young man, of making him less fatuous and selfish, has long been known to women folk, but now, according to a recent statement made by a prominent man, by entering into wedlock a man becomes "a better social animal, losing his shyness before women, his cynicism and his want of expansiveness."

All this is helped because we have introduced friendship into marriage—one of the considerable achievements of modern times—and, instead of "domesticating the recording angel," which was what marriage formerly meant, we have succeeded in developing an amazing camaraderie between husbands and wives.

This comradeship reveals itself in a hundred details—by the way in which married persons tease each other instead of using acid endearments such as "my love," their increased toleration for each other's tastes and their sharing in each other's sports and amusements, their general reasonableness and their mutual loyalty.

Relieved.

A young north side father on arriving home the other evening found his wife in a state of great excitement.

"Harold," she exclaimed, "baby got hold of the ink bottle this morning."

"And what has he done?"

"Spilled ink all over the new dining room rug."

"That can be easily remedied. I thought you were going to tell me that the misguided child had written a novel."—Pittsburgh Post.

A warrant has been issued for the arrest of Mrs. McGee, of St. Mary's P. E. I. charged with poisoning her six children by means of sulphur from match heads.

DIABETES

is one of the most cruel maladies of which mankind is subject, the many complications arising from time to time, making life seem almost unbearable. For many diseases, medical, scientific, and physiological knowledge and experience gained from years of deep research, has achieved remarkable results, but, up to now, little has been discovered of practical value in the treatment and cure of Diabetes. In fact, people have begun to look upon the disease as well-nigh incurable. Even in the medical profession can be found doctors who are of the same opinion, regarding sceptically any claim to ameliorate or improve the condition of a diabetic patient.

It can, however, be proved that SANSOL'S ANTIDIABETES lastingly cures all cases of Diabetes. Full particulars can be obtained from the Sansol Mfg. Co., Winnipeg, Man.

LARGE TREES.

The Baobab Is a Dwarf In Height But of Enormous Girth.

Not all the "big" trees of the world grow in British Columbia, as many might suppose from having seen so much in print about the giant sequoias of that province. The eucalyptus trees of Australia and Tasmania attain a greater height, for instance. Of course, any tree bearing its topmost branches from 300 to 350 feet up in the air is bound to excite the admiration of the beholder, and the two varieties mentioned are the only ones enjoying this distinction. But when it comes to size of trunk there is another to share the honor. This is the giant baobab tree of Africa and India, another name for which is the monkey-bread tree. Many are to be found in tropical Africa, where it grows to huge size of trunk. Unlike the sequoia and eucalyptus trees, however, the baobab does not attain any great height. Its trunk may be 20 to 30 feet in diameter, but the branches spread out at a height of 25 to 30 feet, often extending 60 to 70 feet and sometimes bending downward so that their tips nearly touch the ground, making a leafy tent of quite large proportions.

The name monkey-bread comes from the fruit of the baobab tree, which is a woody capsule about the size of a citron and contains a farinaceous pulp of pleasantly acid flavor. The wood is very soft and the bark is used by natives for making rope and cloth.

TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING THE BASIS OF SUCCESS

Since the Ingredients Entering Peruna Are Known, Its Power as a Catarrh Remedy and Tonic is Understood.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.—The active ingredients entering the most popular household remedy in the world have been made known to the public. This means a new era in the advertising of popular family medicines—Peruna leads.

Peruna contains among other things, golden seal, powerful in its effect upon the mucous membranes. Cedron seed, a rare medicine and unsurpassed tonic. Cubebs, valuable in nasal catarrh and affections of the kidneys and bladder. Stone root, valuable for the nerves, mucous membranes as well as in dropsy and indigestion.

MR. R. J. DEVEY NEW DIRECTOR

A meeting of St. George's Choral Society was held last evening, when the eelction of officers took place, and a few other items of business transacted. Mr. R. J. Devey was appointed musical director to succeed Mr. E. Thompson.

NAVIGATION

Both the C.P.R. and G.T.R.. Companies opened their bridges on the Trent Valley Canal to-day. The G.T.R. bridges at Fenelon Falls, Nassau, Little Lake and Hastings.

The bridges that are opening on the C.P.R. line are at the Narrows between Lake Couchiching and Lake Simcoe, at Gambridge and at Peterborough.

The C.N.R. also opened their bridges at the Narrows and Gambridge.

The Peterborough Lift Lock has has been open since the 10th of April.

The water is now going down to normal, and navigation between Lakefield and Lake Simcoe, and between Peterborough and Hastings is open.

MR. FRITZ KUHN GAVE FINE TALK TO THE AD. CLUB

The Peterboro Ad Club had a live speaker as a guest at the regular monthly meeting at Hooper's last evening, in the person of Mr. Fritz Kuhn, of Ottawa. Mr. Kuhn is twentieth century all through, and what he had to say to the meeting was well said and should be resultant of much good.

"Why advertising without store service does not pay," formed the subject of his talk.

He brought with him, greetings from the Ottawa Ad. Club to the local club, the resolution having been passed at the meeting on Saturday. He expressed surprise that more were not interested in the Peterboro Ad. Club. Poor advertising in his opinion was just like throwing money away. In advocating efficiency in store service, Mr. Kuhn gave a number of examples to bring out this point.

Truthful advertising was the most productive in the long run, he held.

Mr. Fritz Kuhn

The people wanted quality and were willing to pay a fair price. Merchants should live up to their advertisements.

Peterboro's Ad. Club, he said, had distinctive advantages and the members should be alive to them. Ottawa had a $15,000 publicity department and could not enter into this department of the city's welfare, as could the Peterboro Club.

Altogether, Mr. Kuhn's address was brimful of suggestions to his auditors, and the meeting proved a most interesting one.

Mr. Chas. C. Nixon acted as chairman.

BANQUET OF CANADIAN CLUB

Mr. E. F. B. Johnston K.C of Toronto to Give Address

The Canadian Club will hold their last banquet of the season on Friday evening at eight o'clock in the Y. M.C.A. At this gathering the report of the nominating committee will be received and new officers installed.

The Club has been fortunate in securing Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., of Toronto, as speaker for the evening. Mr. Johnston has the reputation of being one of the most intelligent members of the legal profession in Canada, and is also rated high as an after dinner speaker.

Members are requested to be out in large numbers and to meet at eight o'clock sharp.

Tickets can be procured at the Secretary's desk in the Y.M.C.A., or from the Club Secretary, prior to the dinner.

Mr. Johnston's subject will be announced later.

THEATRICAL

"EXCUSE ME"

Constructed for laugh purposes only, the presentation of "Excuse Me" fulfilled its obligations to a large audience at the Grand Opera House last night and the management is to be congratulated in the engagement of the company. A Pullman carnival it was in three acts of solid hilarity, in which every member of the clever company was prominent more or less. The various characters one might find on an overland limited were truly impersonated. Jimmie Wellington and the negro porter were particularly funny. The trials of the bridal couple came thick and fast and the passengers made the most of the situation. It was just one long hearty laugh and the audience enjoyed the performance immensely.

Patrons of the Grand will be delighted to learn of the engagement of the Chocolate Soldier for the evening of Wednesday, May 8.

A TOWN THAT MOVED.

How Yorkton That Was Became Yorkton That Is.

There is an enterprising man in Yorkton, Sask., who operates several sections of land, but he does not ship his wheat away. He stores it in his own elevator, grinds it in his own mill, makes the flour into bread and cakes and delivers it with horses raised on his own farm, harnessed with harness made in his own shop from leather off the hides of his own cattle, and, besides, if you want coal or cement, he will supply you. That's the spirit of Yorkton.

Every Monday morning from ten o'clock till noon not a business or professional man in Yorkton is at his desk or behind his counter. You are wrong if you think they have been spending the week-end in Winnipeg or off on a prairie-hen hunt. These men have been down to work long since, and while each man is not minding his own business between these hours his town is getting the benefit of his energies. For if you drop into the town hall you will find every man of business seated around a directors' table addressing Mr. President of the Board of Trade as to how best Yorkton's progress may be accelerated. They are doers of things in Yorkton—they do not wait till the middle of the week to start things for Yorkton. They may believe that "everything comes to him who waits," but they work while they wait.

It is a case of Sunday hush to Monday rush with the result that Yorkton, though possessing many advantages as a commercial centre, had attained prominence solely through the efforts of the people who work while they watch.

When the railway came through that part of Saskatchewan it overlooked the small collection of houses dignified by the name of Yorkton, and passed some miles distant from the town. So Mahomet-like, they decided as there was nothing doing in the mountain moving business they would pick up their traps and their shacks and make a new town on the railway. The local historian will take you out and show you where Yorkton was, and though they say he knows where the old town once flourished nobody else does. Nothing remains to mark the spot, which was once the commercial centre of that band of sturdy pioneers, who settled the district in the early eighties.

Yorkton was given an unenviable reputation through the Doukhobor pilgrimage. But let us hasten to explain. Yorkton was then the only station they could entrain at. They had no intention to walk to Winnipeg. Their colony was many miles from Yorkton, and it was there that the police rounded them up. Since then land regulations have been somewhat severe for the unsophisticated "Douk," and Peter Veregin has sent many of the restless spirits to his other colony in British Columbia. Yorktonians point with pride to the illustration of "Doukhobors leaving Yorkton."—D. C. Nixon in Canadian Courier.

Happy Woman.

Oh, see the fat lady!
How happy she looks.
And why is she so happy?
Her dressmaker tells her that her dress makes her look thin.
But does it?
Never mind that. Her husband tells her she looks thin and her friends all tell her she looks thin.
But does she not know she is fat?
Yes, child, but she thinks they all really think she is thin, and that is what makes her happy.

Archie Ferguson of Galt was found drowned in a cistern.

YOUNG LADY MISSION WORKERS HEARD ADDRESS ON BOLIVIA

The Rev. E. T. Fox, Missionary Treasurer of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec, gave a most interesting and instructive lecture in the Park street Baptist Church last night under the auspices of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society.

Mr. Fox carried his audience in graphic style through South America and especially Bolivia, where the Baptists carry on a special work among the Indians.

The pictures shown of the country, were very beautiful and clear, and the visit of Mr. Fox will deepen the interest in that dark and Rome mislead country.

The service next Sunday morning will be in charge of the Mission Band There will be a children's choir, and Mrs. (Rev.) Fee will give an address upon China and missions.

The subject for next Sunday evening will be "God's Unsinkable 'Titanic' Are You on Board?

MR. CHAS. PURCELL AS "THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER"

When Manager Fred. C. Whitney went to Vienna last summer to consult with Oscar Straus about the production of another of that versatile composer's operas, H. Straus expressed himself as delighted over the success of "The Chocolate Soldier" in America and England in both of which countries Mr. Whitney had given the opera a lavish production. Leaving out of consideration the interesting, if sordid fact, that Straus had received more royalties up to that time than any composer in the history of the stage out of two years production of a comic opera, he has reason to be pleased, because when Mr. Whitney took hold of the opera for the purpose of having it translated back to its mother tongue, "The Chocolate Soldier," in the guise of "Der Tapfere Soldat" had had only a very moderate success in Berlin and Vienna. It was not at all that the music was not appreciated, but it appears that the biting sarcasm of George Bernard Shaw was even more attenuated by adapting it into German than is the case with bringing the French style of wit, or what stands for it, into our Anglo-Saxon. Now Straus knows his English as well as he does his German, and therefore, having a keen appreciation of the wit of the Irish satirist, he wrote his music in quite as satiric a vein, so that as a natural consequence "The Chocolate Soldier" did not come into its own until it reverted back to the mother tongue, for Shaw had written a comic opera libretto to hand when he evolved "Arms and the Man."

Along these lines, Mr. Whitney who spends half his time now in London where he has his own theatre, and who has means for observation said—"There is a little group of comic opera makers in London who turn out a great profusion of musical works which achieve a fair measure of success in their own country but which fail over here because, in the process of adaption, the life has been adapted out of them. London has looked in blank amazement at some of our plays, unable to understand our point of view, and some of their librettos might as well have been in Coptic for all they conveyed to us. That is where the trouble has been rather than with the music. I believe the love and understanding of music is Catholic. No one nation has it alone, but as much importance should be attached to the book as to the music. The score and the librettos are the two oars of the boat of harmony, and if the story of a work in an around which the music has been written is grealty changed, there is a break in the melodic thought which gives the hearer a shock.

"In my many years of comic opera production I have seen many failures arise from this lack of harmony between essentials. One I remember came to this country not so long ago, in which the music was hopelessly woven around a theme. This to the Germans is almost a religion, but to us is a matter of very slight importance, and does not always please, as happened in this case. The music was there but it did not fit."

Firemen's Holidays

The firemen have commenced on their annual vacation. Each man is allowed two weeks and a substitute has been secured by the Fire Water and Light Committee to take the place of these men.

As the substitute will be on duty like the regular firemen, there will be no diminution of the Fire Brigade during the holiday season.

BEAUTIFUL EYES

are made beautiful by long, silky lashes and well defined, lustrous brows. Eyes, like diamonds, depend on their setting. The beauties of the face are lost is the eye brows are thin and scanty, and the lashes are thing and scanty. Parisian Lash Lustre grows beautiful, soft, silky lashes. It has done so for society women throughout Europe, and it comes here well recommended to do the same for you. Parisian Lash Lustre is not a dye or colorator, but a scientific preparation for beautifying the eye lashes and brows. Our guarantee goes with every box of Parisian Lash Lustre. A two weeks' treatment will bring beauty to your eyes that you have never before possessed. By mail, prepaid, in opal boxes on receipt of price, fifty cents B. V. LAKEFIELD WANTS THE SERVICES OF LOCAL TWIRLER

Lakefield is going in for baseball this summer, and the interest shown by the northern town is evidenced by the endeavor of the ball magnates to secure the services of Stan Creswell for a series of six games.

Last year Creswell made his debut in the Midland League and made good. The fans will remember how he shut out Port Hope in his first game.

Star has not decided whether he will accept the proposition. Manager Templin is willing to give him a trial with the Canadian Leaguers.

FOOTBALL

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir—A project is on foot to form a Junior Football League, for the boys in our city. I have been approached by a number of lads, and have been asked to help them form a football association. A meeting will be held on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. and to that I earnestly invite the pastors and parents of the city, and all who take an interest in boys, and also, I want all the boys up to the age of 20, who want to play football.

I feel sure, all will agree that good clean, and healthy sport will do the lads a great deal of good. I feel certain that there are many in sympathy with the object in view. To make a success of this attempt to form a league for the lads, the sympathy and help of all who study the interests and welfare of boys is urgently needed.

I would be pleased if the pastors of our city, if they can spare the time would attend the meeting, and the parents also. Come to the meeting, and help us in an endeavor to provide recreation for the lads.

I shall be pleased to receive offers of help, and suggestions from all interested in boys on this matter. Thanking you Mr. Editor for your space.

Church Football League

Will the delegates from All Saints', Knox, Park St., St. James' and St. John's football clubs kindly bear in mind the meeting of the League this evening in the Y.M.C.A. at 8 o'clock sharp. Any representative from other clubs wishing to join the League also attend. Important business is on hand. A full attendance of delegates is earnestly requested.

DIAMOND DUST FROM THE CIRCUIT

The Philadelphia Sporting Life, the great baseball weekly, in Saturday's issue, hands out this flowery compliment to Manager Templin of the Peterboro club; look out for hustling Manager Curt Templin and his Petes The old boy is there with the noodle. What the Reading, Pa., pilot don't know about running a minor league club is hardly worth knowing.

Manager Templin of the Peterboro club, has evidently secured a good youngster if the following dope on one of his youngsters, taken from Sporting Life is to count for anything.

Young Kutz showed some speed in his start against the Newark aggregation, allowing but two hits, and shutting out that heavy-hitting team Charlie Dooin isn't sure as yet whether or not he will keep Kutz on his staff this season. The probabilities are he will be farmed out to some minor league for another summer's seasoning.

Telling how to make home runs Frank Schulte, who is qualified to speak on that subject, observes: "If you judge the ball correctly, hit it right on the nose with a free swing not too hard, and raise it up, you stand an excellent show of making the circuit of the bases." Is that all? Cinch! Now, watch everybody step up and make a home run.

St. Thomas, May 1—George Wiede the second baseman of the St. Thomas Canadian League team, was first to report, coming from Toledo.

The business turned over by Chaucer Elliott to the new owners, shows that the former manager had about thirty men on his roster, and with the men secured since the change of management there will be close on to forty players to chose from.

London, Ont., May 1—The work on the outfield at Tecumseh Park has has been finished, and better ball grounds are now ready for London's Canadian league team than any team ever had here. The club is now busy making the grandstand more comfortable. Charley Nichols, last year's second baseman, who has been holding out for better terms, has finally signed a 1912 contract, and there is general satisfaction because Nichols was one of the long distance hitters of the Canadian league last year.

Guelph, May 1—"I am well satisfied with the showing made by our pitching staff, though it has been very poor weather for workouts," said Manager Needham yesterday. "They have shown that they have speed, control and curves, and it looks like a good season." The diamond has been skinned, and when the work has been completed, the park will be second to none in the league though last year it had the reputation of being the worst. Hemlock, the Indian catcher, arrived on Saturday night, and the greater part of the remainder will get here to-day. If the weather gets at all favorable, the plan of the manager will likely be to make up a team of Yannigans, and play against a team of Regulars, so that the best men can be picked out on their playing ability. Bert King, the local ball-player, was out in uniform with the Leafs yesterday. He is trying for a place on the team.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Swift's Joke on Partridge.

Partridge, the almanac maker, who taught Old Moore his business, will be remembered as the victim of an extraordinary practical joke played on him by Dean Swift.

Against Partridge's almanac for 1708 the dean published a rival almanac, predicting Partridge's death on March 29, about 11 at night, of a raging fever. And on March 30 appeared a pamphlet giving an account of the almanac maker's death, with his confession that he was an impostor. This was followed by Swift's "Elegy on the Death of Mr. Partridge," which so completed the deception that the Stationers' company struck Partridge off the rolls and applied for an injunction against the publication of almanacs in his name.

Partridge advertised that he "was not only alive, but was also alive upon March 29." But no one believed him.

Took the Gift Without Thanks.

The name of W. H. Alexander is practically an unknown one in England, yet he it was who gave to the country the enormous sum of $400,000 for the purpose of building the National Portrait Gallery. The only recognition he asked for this munificent gift was that he might have an autograph letter from Queen Victoria giving expression to the nation's gratitude. It is more than remarkable that up to the time of his death this modest request had not been granted, and no recognition was made of his handsome gift. It is surmised that this simple wish was never laid before the Queen.—Pearson's.

MAKING MAPLE SUGAR.

Former Canadian Necessity Has Now Become a Luxury.

Maple sugar was first a luxury, then a necessity, and then a luxury once more. And such it is to-day, and such it will continue to be so long as Canada contains maple woodlands, which, it is to be hoped, will be as long as the country stands, for if we lose our maple we will lose our national emblem, and, in many respects the fairest tree of all our forests.

Maple sugar was first made by the Indians. It was their only sweet, and, besides the wild fruits, their only luxury. The Indian is very fond of sweet, and as the supply was limited, maple sugar and maple syrup were highly prized by the Redmen, whose diet, for the most part, consisted of fish, game and maize, or, as we have called it after them, Indian corn.

Not all cultivated the soil and possessed corn crops. In fact the Iroquois and the Hurons were to all intents and purposes the only exponents of their crude agriculture.

And so, too, it was with the making of maple sugar, which, of course, could only be carried on in districts where the maple tree abounded and which was only attempted by Indians less afraid of work than was the average Redman, and also more enterprising.

The Iroquois made maple sugar, and so, too, did some of the Algonquin tribes, dwelling about the Great Lakes, where maples abounded. The Indian process is described by the famous old fur-trader, Alex. Henry, who spent a number of years in the lake regions. He saw the Indians at work, and he also worked with them, making sugar for his own use as early as 1765.

The Indian tapped the tree by cutting a channel across one side of it near the base of the channel sloping somewhat downwards. In the lower end of the channel they inserted a little trough, or spout of birch-bark, which conducted the sap from the wound in the tree to a bucket of bark resting on the snow at the base of the tree, or on the ground, if sugar-making had been preceded by a heavy thaw.

In other buckets of bark, the sap was collected and carried to the camp in the centre of the maple wood that had been attacked by the savage sugar-makers.

Here huge kettles, or cauldrons, were slung over roaring fires, and in these cauldrons the sap was "boiled down," that is the water was evaporated by boiling until syrup was produced, which was reduced to sugar by a little more boiling.

After the Indian fashion, most of the work was performed by the squaws. They tramped through the snow, buckets in hand, gathered the sap, and carried it to the Boiling Camp. They also hauled to camp most of the dry wood found here and there in the forest, wherever a tree had been blown down by the storms of the preceding season. Sometimes the fires would be attended to by the lazy braves, who filled in the time by mending or making snowshoes, now and then sending out parties to hunt and bring in needed supplies of game.

The sap was boiled in iron kettles, but there were no iron kettles in the forest until white men came, so that before that time there could not have been much sugar made in the Canadian forests.

The first improvements brought about by the white settlers in the process of maple sugar-making were to substitute a hole bored into the trunk of the tree for the channel the Indians used to cut, and a "spile" or spout, made by punching the pith, or core, out of straight bits of small alder, and which, being inserted into the hole in the tree, conducted the sap to the wooden bucket suspended from the base of the "spile" by means of a wire hook.—Montreal Standard.

A Good Answer.

Many a speaker has been floored by a question put by one of his hearers, and W. F. Nickle, the clever young man who represents Kingston in the House of Commons, nearly met that fate in a recent campaign.

Mr. Nickle, upon ending his speech, said that he would endeavor to answer any question put by anybody in the audience. Hardly had he made the offer when he regretted having done so. A man—evidently an Irishman — whose face had a look that meant trouble for somebody, rose from his seat at the back of the hall, and walked down the aisle till he stood near the platform.

"Mr. Nickle, you say that you'll answer any question put to you?" asked the man in the aisle.

"I'll try," said the speaker, wondering on what line he was about to be tackled.

"Then how much did your last election cost you?" said the questioner.

For a moment Mr. Nickle floundered. Then an inspiration came to him, and he answered: "Six weeks of the hardest work I ever put in in my life."—Canadian Courier.

A Yukon Bonanza.

A new gold discovery, regarded as one of the best since the days of the Klondike discovery in 1898 was made the other week, about seventy miles from the mouth of Sixtymile River, 120 miles southwest of Dawson and twenty-five miles from the Alaska line. The find is said to average about $1 to the square foot of bedrock. Some two hundred men have already gone on a stampede to stake claims, notwithstanding a temperature of 30 degrees below zero and snow on the ground fifteen inches deep.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

Frogs, Leeches and Chameleons Useful In Getting Line on Changes.

One of the oldest and simplest ways of telling whether the air is dry or moist is to suspend a piece of seaweed out of doors, or even in an apartment where there is no artificial heat. The weed is crisp and dry at the approach of fine weather, while it is flabby and moist when rain is likely, says The Strand.

A common toy, the Swiss weather house is really quite trustworthy in its forecasts. The woman, of course, emerges from the little house in fine weather, while the man comes out when wet conditions are to be expected.

In a medium state of the atmosphere both figures stand just inside the house. The movements are due to the twisting of a cord of catgut, a substance which is highly sensitive to changes in the humidity of the air.

Two very singular weather devices are those in which a frog and a leech are employed. In the former case a glass jam-jar is filled to about two-thirds of its capacity with water. A little wooden ladder is constructed, and this is placed inside the jar.

A frog will live quite happily in such a position for a few weeks, and it will be found that in fine weather the creature will climb out up to the top of the ladder. In stormy weather, however, the frog prefers to remain under the water.

Even more reliable as weather prophets are leeches. A single leech is placed in a broad glass bottle with a piece of perforated bladder or leather over the mouth. On the approach of fine or frosty weather, the leech remains almost motionless, curled up at the bottom. When rain or wind is coming the creature rises to the surface, while a coming thunderstorm will cause it to be much agitated; at times the leech will even leave the water altogether, so sensitive is the animal to an electrical disturbance.

The chameleon barometer is a curiosity which has puzzled many people, but its construction is really very simple. The animal changes color according to the weather, being pink in damp conditions, purple in a variable state and bright blue when the air is dry.

A cardboard mount is prepared, and this may be lettered in sections, fair sketched out on blotting paper, and then immersed in a solution of chloride of cobalt, to which are added chloride of sodium and gum arabic. Any chemist will make up the mixture.

A more beautiful chemical hygroscope is formed of a flower made of white blotting paper which has been immersed in the cobalt mixture. The blossoms show many varying shades, from bright pink to sky blue, with the changes in the degree of dampness in the atmosphere.

A somewhat curious storm glass was introduced by the late Admiral Fitzroy. This is formed of a glass tube, stoppered but with a small hole through the cork. Into the tube has been poured a mixture of camphor, nitre, sal ammoniac, alcohol and water. The changes in the state of the atmosphere are indicated by the production of feathery growths, these extending upward at the approach of a storm and retreating to the lower part of the tube in quiet weather.

SUCCESSFUL OPENING OF NEW PROTESTANT HOME WITH LARGE ATTENDANCE

The impressive ceremony accompanying the opening of the new Protestant Home took place last night in the Board Room of the new building.

The newly erected home is a magnificent edifice and the exterior of red brick trimmed with stone is exceedingly handsome. But the interior of the spacious building is even more attractive. Throughout the whole building there are hardwood floors, and particularly the bedrooms are inviting, being cozily and beautifully furnished. A number of the bedrooms are furnished by individuals or societies interested in the work of the Protestant Home. His Honor Judge Roger, the Misses Morrow, Mrs. A. Comstock, the King's Daughters, Mrs. E. F. Mason, the Sons of England, the Orangemen, the Y.W.C.A. and the D.W.Y.C., of St. John's Church all supplied the furniture for at least one room, and in every case the appointments are comfortable and prepossessingly cheerful.

In short, the new Home is a handsome one, a credit to the architects and contractor who planned and carried out its construction, and worthy of the Society which supports it and which is so earnestly engaged in such a deserving work.

Those who are to enjoy the new quarters had already partly taken possession last night and all seemed overjoyed at the prospect of living in the congenial atmosphere of the new erection.

The dedicatory service and program were given in the Board Room. His Worship Mayor Bradburn acted as chairman. Sir John Gibson and Senator Cox were unable to be present, having been unavoidably detained in Toronto.

The dedicatory service was in charge of the ministerial association, the meeting was opened with the hymn, "O God, our Help in Ages Past." The Rev. R. Pogue lead in the invocation and the Rev. Canon Davidson read a portion of the Scriptures. The Rev. Isaac Couch offered up the dedicatory prayer, and the Rev. Mr. Webb, as president of the Association made a few remarks. At the close, the Rev. R. Pogue pronounced the benediction.

CHAIRMAN'S ADDRESS.

Mayor Bradburn said: "I feel it is an honor to preside at the opening of this splendid edifice, which is to be a home for old people of this city and neighborhood. The directors of the Home are to be heartily congratulated upon the completion of this building, and especially are the ladies to be congratulated, for it is chiefly owing to their kindness of heart, public spirit and energy that the Home has been erected. I feel certain that all have been gratified with the character of the building. It occupies a beautiful and commanding site, and is worthy in appearance, construction and finish, of the site it occupies and the purpose for which it has been erected.

The Protestant Home, under the administration of the ladies, has for many years done excellent work in Peterborough. A very large number of persons have found in it a shelter and a home, and the community as a whole, as well as those who have lodged under its roof, owe a debt of gratitude to the ladies of the Association for the time, care and attention they have given to it, and the success with which it had been conducted. In this new Home, which is so much more commodious and better equipped than that which will soon be vacated, they will be able to do much more, and we can look forward to all those who should be sheltered within it, finding here a very comfortable, healthy and cheerful home.

While we are impressed with the character of this building, I would like, besides congratulating the management and the citizens who have aided in providing the necessary funds to say that the building is very creditable to the architect, Mr. Smith, and to the contractor, Alderman Graham, and those who had immediate charge of the different parts of its construction."

MR. E. A. PECK, M.P.P.

In a short speech, Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., congratulated the ladies who had carried on so successfully the work of the Society. He dwelt on the fact that the work had been undertaken by them with little assistance by the men, yet had been as successful in it as though they had been aided by the men.

MR. J. H. BURNHAM, M.P.

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., read an interesting history of the Peterborough Protestant Home. In his paper the growth of the Society was traced from the year 1862 to the present date.

In 1862 the "Peterborough Relief Society" began its work, and later, in 1865, the name was changed to the present one, the Peterborough Protestant Home, when Mr. R. A. Morrow generously gave the use of one of his houses on Sherbrooke street, to the Society. In 1870 the late Sheriff Hall, father of the present Sheriff and City Solicitor, purchased the Stewart street property which was occupied up till a few days ago. Now the new building has been erected and occupied.

The different monetary resourses, particularly the Government grant, the grant of two thousand, Nicholls Estate and the munificent endowment of twenty thousand dollars by the late Mrs. Nicholls, who had been an old and faithful friend of the Home.

The new Home was the result of the arrangement between the City and the trustees of the Protestant Home, Messrs. Roger, Halliday and McWilliams, whereby the City was to give ten thousand dollars and the site towards the building of the Home, which must cost over twenty thousand dollars.

In conclusion a list of the recently elected officers was read as follows:

President—Mrs. W. M. Roger.
1st Vice-Pres.—Miss Nicholls
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs Birdsall.
Treasurer—Miss Sara Robinson.
Secretary—Miss Helen Denison.

A very large number of people were present at the formal opening last night and the Board Room was hopelessly inadequate to accommodate them during the dedicatory service and program. But every one by exercising a little patience and incidentally a few aggressive tactics, was able to visit every part of the new building and all were delighted and astonished at its charming neatness, and its complete equipment. For the space of several hours the corridors were crowded, and entering through the front door became so tedious on account of the crowd, that very many went in by the rear door.

Dr. Bruce Smith of Toronto, His Honor Judge Roger, of Cobourg, and Ald. Duffus also spoke.

A vocal solo by Miss Howell was greatly appreciated, and shortly after nine o'clock the 57th Band arrived and rendered many beautiful selections in their usual inimitable style: Through kind permission of the officer commanding the 57th Regiment, the band was able to be present.

CROWE-WEIR NUPTIALS

A fashionable wedding occurred at two o'clock this afternoon in St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, when Maye Ernestene, third daughter of Mrs. Robert Weir, Stewart street, was married to Mr. David Crowe, of Saskatoon, by Rev. Robert Pogue, assisted by Rev. Mr Rogers, of Toronto, cousin of the bride.

The bride was given away by her brother, Mr. Fred Weir. The bridesmaid was Miss Weir, sister of the bride, and J. S. Madill, of Napanee, attended the groom.

The ushers were Mr. A. P. McLean and Dr. G. Stewart Cameron. During the signing of the register "O Perfect Love" was charmingly sung by Miss Lillian Moore.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Weir, Walton street.

Mr. and Mrs Crowe left on the 4.28 train for Toronto. They will sail on Saturday by steamer "Cassandra" for points in the Old Land, returning to Saskatoon in September.

THIRTY PERMITS FOR THE MONTH OF APRIL FOR BUILDING OPERATIONS

In the month of April thirty building permits were taken out at the city clerk's office, totalling $18,308. Compared with the total issued in April, 1911, however, this sum falls very short, it reaching $82,345, or a decrease this year of $64,037. Forty permits were issued in April, 1911.

Besides the operations noted there is the new building for the C.G.E. Company, now under way. The permit is, however, not yet made out. Quite a number of substantial dwellings are under way, while the addition to the Peterborough Club brings the total up considerably.

DAUGHTERS OF THE EMPIRE WERE AT HOME

The ladies of the 57th Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire gave an exceedingly successful At Home yesterday at the armories. There was a large attendance in the afternoon, and in the evening after drill, the whole regiment was present and were received by the officers of the local Chapter. The scene was an animated and brilliant one because of the numerous bright red uniforms.

The arrangements had been attended to very faithfully by the ladies and as a result the guests were given a very enjoyable evening.

The financial returns were very gratifying and encouraging to the local Daughters of the Empire.

After the At Home a delightful dance was held in the band room of the armories.

BODY OF AN INFANT FOUND

The Port Hope Guide says—The body of an infant was found in a cottage on Monkey-mountain Saturday evening. The house is at present occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lawrence, but they have resided there only a short time. A very strong and disagreeable odor was noticeable on Saturday and when Mr. Lawrence investigated the cause, he found the remains of the infant in the corner of a back kitchen. The back was in such a condition as to be almost beyond recognition. The lower extremities were torn to shreds done no doubt by either rats or dogs. The matter was reported to Chief Bond and Coroner Aldrich and an inquest will be open this evening.

Previous to Mr. Lawrence taking the house, it was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John Sisson. The Chief visited the Sisson home on Bramley street, this morning, and served Mrs. Sisson with a subpoena to appear at the inquest. Mrs. Sisson admitted to the chief that she gave birth to a child when in that house but that her husband buried it in the back yard. The husband is at the present time out of town.

The Doctor who was in attendance was interviewed by The Guide this morning and states that it was still birth on February 9th. The parents had not yet registered the birth.

REPORT TO LABOR GAZETTE ON THE LOCAL CONDITIONS

The following is the labor report for Peterborough to the latest issue of the Labor Gazette:

The general condition of the labor market during March showed a slight improvement over that of February. Prospects for the building season of 1912 are good and contractors are beginning to show signs of their midseason activity. The Canadian General Electric Company have invited tenders for a new warehouse and shipping building, the construction of which will afford considerable employment. They have also purchased ten acres of land immediately north of the present location of the Canadian General Electric Company Works.

A "Made in Peterborough" exhibition will be held in the Armories under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary on the 3rd of June and will last the entire week.

The city is applying for legislation to enable it to expropriate any part of the plant or appliances of the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

The cold weather did not afford much opportunity for work among the farmers in this district although some commenced operations in the sugar bushes. Production in this line is not likely to equal that of past years as the snow is too deep for the farmers to move among the maples for the purpose of tapping trees and collecting the sap. The district Cheese Makers held their annual convention this month and elected their officers for the year. Many important matters were discussed.

LINDSAY PEOPLE CAUGHT BY REAL ESTATE AGENT

Edward Lloyd Jones, a real estate agent who has been selling Calgary lots in Lindsay and other points, was arrested in Toronto today on the order of Chief of Police Chilton.

He is charged with obtaining money under false pretenses. He sold what was claimed to be Calgary lots to parties in Lindsay and failed to produce deed for same.

Chief of Police Chilton went up to Toronto and will bring the accused back.—Lindsay Post.

HAPPENINGS AT OMEMEE

Drowning and Funeral of The Late Mr. Grandy

Special Correspondence.

Omemee, April 30.—Our village was shocked and saddened by the drowning fatality which occurred in Emily Creek on Wednesday afternoon. The unfortunate man who lost his life, Mr. E. H. Grandy, was one of the best known and most popular of Omemee's sons. Mr. Grandy left home on Wednesday morning with his camping outfit and enough provisions to last for some weeks for a point on Emily Creek, near Dunsford. The driver the dray left Mr. Grandy packing his outfit in the canoe previous to crossing the creek, to an island where he was to establish his camp, and remain on duty in an official capacity as a sub-fishery inspector. This was the last seen of Mr. Grandy until his canoe was found on Thursday morning, and a search instituted. It is thought that his canoe was overladen, and as a strong wind was blowing the boat swamped. Mr. Grandy was always nervous while on the water, and although a good swimmer it is supposed that he was handicapped by the circumstances, lost courage and sank without a struggle. Some trappers formed themselves into a search party and found the body at the bottom of about twelve feet of water. The remains were taken to his home at Omemee. The deceased was 60 years of age, and a son of the late Robert Grandy, Esq., postmaster in Omemee for many years. Besides a wife he leaves to mourn his untimely end two brothers, Samuel Grandy, grain buyer, and Richard Grandy, postmaster. The deceased was highly respected, a man of quiet manner, and the highest principle and honor. The citizens were appalled by the awful calamity and universal sorrow predominates. The funeral, which was largely attended, left his late residence, George street, Omemee, on Saturday, April 27th, at 2.30 p.m. Service was held half an hour earlier. Interment took place at Emily cemetery. Sincere condolences are extended to the bereaved relatives.

Mr. Johnston, a student from Knox College, Toronto, occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church very acceptably on Sabbath, in the absence of Rev. D. H. Currie, who was out of town.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Eaton, and their children, from Toronto, spent the week-end with their Omemee friends.

Don't fail to hear the blind pianist on Friday evening, May 10th, in Coronation Hall. His playing is grand; he is a musical prodigy. The local people who will assist in the program in song and recitation are: The Misses Ivory, Parsons, Bushnell and Wilson; Mesdames A. C. Hodgetts and D. Magee, and Rev. H. Earle.

Prof. Treneer will render the following piano selections:

1. Invitation to the Dance—Weber.
2. Two Larks—Leschitisky.
3. Valse Arabesque—Lao.
4. Scarf Dance, Air de Ballet—Chaminade.
5. A Musical Romance.
6. Dance Neapolitan — Seymour Smith.

Tickets 25 cents to any part of the hall. Concert at 7.30 p.m. sharp.

The big event for May 24th that is causing much speculation and discussion is the delegation that will arrive to attend the Bachelors' Congress—certainly an innovation in Omemee, where "woman suffrage" is quite popular. Public meeting will convene in Coronation Hall.

Mr. Bert Skuce, of Port Hope, spent Sunday with his parents in town.

The large number of members in the play being gotten up by the Public Library are busy practicing. It will be staged in Coronation Hall on the evening of Victoria Day. The caste are anxious to make it one of the best and most humorous ever presented to an Omemee audience.

A number of citizens of Lindsay attended the funeral of the late E. H. Grandy on Saturday.

Mr. Percy Parsons has purchased a large lot of muskrat skins from the trappers. He bought a few fox skins, too.

Stevenson Bros. are selling great quantities of corn and wheat. A car of Manitoba feed wheat is being rushed out now.

There are prospects of a local baseball team being organized. Go ahead, boys, the sport is popular and commendable. Our burg has been dead this winter because of no ice rink nor hockey team. Pick out your own team and get down to practice.

Messrs. P. Parsons and E. Dancey were visitors to Peterborough on Saturday.

Mr. Montgomery, of Peterborough, came out in his auto on Saturday.

NORWOOD FACTORY THE SCENE OF A BAD ACCIDENT

Village Also Visited by Fire in Which a House Was Destroyed

Special Correspondence.

Norwood, April 30—A serious accident occurred in the John Finlay & Sons factory on Monday morning. Mr. Daniel Rogers, sr., who has been employed in the factory to do odd jobs, among which one of his duties has been to oil the machinery, including the boxings on the running shafts. While there are quite a number of men employed on the ground floor, where the accident occurred, no one appears to have actually witnessed the occurrence. It is through that Mr. Rogers had put his ladder in position to climb to the overhead shaft, which gave way. The ladder may have slipped and caught in the pulley, which would have been sufficient to have caused the hangers to break, which would release one end of the rapidly revolving shaft which was hurled with such violence to the floor, that one of the heavy wheels was smashed to pieces and the planer, which is placed below, was badly damaged. The unfortunate man must have been struck with some heavy part of the flying shafts or pulleys, which resulted in the bones of his thigh being broken to such an extent, that the doctors here considered it advisable to send Mr. Rogers to the hospital in Peterboro, where he was sent in the first west bound train. On account of the age of Mr. Rogers, coupled with the severity of his injuries, it is thought his chances of recovery are none too bright. It happened for some reason or other that Mr. Kenneth Kempt and Claude Bongard, who operate the planer, were not at their work at the time of the accident or either or both and almost certainly Mr. Kempt would hardly have escaped wih his life, as he works in the exact spot where the broken machinery was hurled.

A FIRE

On Sunday evening at 6 o'clock the fire alarm was sounded as a result of the dwelling of Mr. N. Chard, at the east of the village, being in flames. The fire was caused from a defective chimney, and the family were unaware of their danger, until warned by some boys who were passing, who saw the flames. Mr. Chard with the aid of those who quickly gathered succeeded in saving nearly all his household effects, but the house, which belonged to Mr. M. Grover, was totally destroyed.

The choir of St. John's church, Peterborough gave a sacred concert in the Church of England here on Friday night last, which was largely attended and fully appreciated. All who attended were delighted with the rendering of the several numbers. The program consisted of the following selections:

Processional Hymn—"When I Survey the Wondrous Cross."
Lesson; Apostles' Creed; Collects.
Mendelssohn's 95th Psalm.
Hymn—"All Hail the Power of Jesus Name." from the Messiah.
Quartette—"Since by Man Came Death."
Chorus—"By Man Came also Resurrection."
Quartette—"For as in Adam All Die."
Chorus—"Even So in Christ Shall All be Made Alive."
Hallelujah Chorus.

Miss Madge Lees, of Peterborough, has been engaged by the Norwood Board of Education to fill the vacancy on the public school staff caused by the resignation of Miss Florence Foster.

Mr. John Baskin has completed the foundation for his new hotel, and the carpenters are placing the joists in position, after which the work of laying the brick will be pushed ahead as rapidly as possible. Mr Baskin has said he expects to have the building fully completed by the 12th of July.

The lecture in the Baptist church by Rev. T. E. Fox, of Toronto, which was to have been given on Monday night, has been postponed till Wednesday evening.

Mr. Roy Richardson, of Queen's University, Kingston, is home for his holidays.

Messrs. Dr. Sutton, R. G. Lawlor and T. E. Finlay have been appointed president, vice-president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, of the Norwood senior tennis club for the season of 1912. It is intended to try to arrange a schedule of games with Havelock, Campbellford, Marmora, Madoc and Delora.

Mr. L. Lonergan's team ran away from the rear of the Norwood House House on Monday evening and dashed up Peterborough street at a terrific rate. They were stopped at the west side of the village by Mr. Herb Beavis, who drove them back in triumph. The damage was only slight. A few articles of furniture which Mr. Lonergan was taking home, were scattered around, but were afterwards gathered together, very little the worse for their rough usage.

Mr. L. Killoran has moved into the house recently purchased from Mr. J. Weir.

Messrs. I. N. Ackerman and T. E. Finlay went to Stony Lake yesterday (Monday) to look after their cottages and boathouses, which were reported to be in danger on account of the high water.

No inquest will be held into the death of Lottie Gibson, who committed suicide at Brantford.

Death to Dandruff Germs Life to All Hair

No More Dandruff, Falling Hair, Scalp Itch, Bald Heads or Dull Faded Hair.

This is a free country. Its your right, your privilege to use any hair tonic your desire.

But why continue to use a hair tonic that doesn't do what it should do; kill the germs and banish all dandruff and hair troubles?

If you have dandruff, if your hair is getting thin and falling out, if your scalp itches and your hair isn't bright and lustrous, bear in mind this fact, that PARISIAN SAGE, now sold all over America, if guaranteed by Wm. Madill to give the limit of satisfaction if used for any of the above hair or scalp troubles, or money back.

PARISIAN SAGE is the most delightful and refreshing hair dressing for men, women and children, and is particularly in demand by refined women, who desire to increase their beauty by acquiring an abundance of fascinating hair, full of life and lustre.

A large bottle of PARISIAN SAGE costs but 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and druggists everywhere. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every carton and bottle.

NEW ZEALAND WONDERS.

Maoris Tell of the Origin of a Famous Volcano.

Before the Royal Geographical Society Mr. J. Mackintosh Bell, speaking upon the subject of New Zealand volcanoes, said that from the most remote days of geological time that they knew of in New Zealand, these Southern Pacific islands had been scarred and burnt by volcanoes and racked and torn by earthquakes. Referring to the Taopo volcanic zone, the speaker said that connected with this zone, and the name of its most important volcanic centre, was one of those pleasing Maori legends that showed the powers of observation possessed by the native mind. On arrival at Maketu, from the ancient racial home of Hawaika, the great chief Ngatiroirangi started off into the interior on a journey of exploration. Desiring to obtain a better view of the country than was obtainable from the forest-clad plains, he and his faithful follower, Ngauruhoe, ascended the highest peak of Tongariro. Whilst on the summit they became numbed by the intense cold, and, afraid of being frozen to death, Ngatiroirangi shouted to his sisters who lived at White Island to send him some of the fire that they had brought from Hawaika in the great canoes Pupu and Te Haeta. Shortly afterwards the fire arriving by way of a subterranean passage, burst forth from the crest of Tongariro. The fire came just in time to save the life of the chief, but the spirit of the poor Ngauruhoe was already on its flight for "the land of the great beyond." Hence the hole from which the fire burst forth was called by the faithful Ngauruhoe. To this day on this crest and along the whole subterranean passage the sacred fire still brightly burns. Speaking of the Waimangu geyser, Mr. Bell said that the "shots" from this geyser were gigantic in their proportions. At the finest outbursts water, mud, and even huge boulders were ejected vertically into the air in a column of dirty black water. Though accurate data relating to the measurements of these outbursts were difficult to obtain, the highest "shot" was said to have ascended to a height of about 1,500 feet above the mouth of the geyser, and to have carried a volume of 800 tons.

Catholics Not Wanted.

Mr. Samuel Hope Morley, who was one of the three New Year peers, has taken the title of Lord Hollenden of Leigh, in the County of Kent, this being the old name of his property.

The new peer is a director of the great firm of warehousemen of J. and B. Morley, of Wood street, London, and Mosley street, Manchester. The firm has attained its present vast dimensions from small beginnings. John and Richard, two brothers of the family, which was one of some standing in the Nottinghamshire village of Sneinton, established a hosiery business at Nottingham in the eighteenth century, and John, who was the traveler, married a Miss Paulton, of Maidenhead. She was a business-like woman and it was due to her influence that the brothers established themselves in London in an unpretentious style, John and his wife living over the shop. The business thrived apace, and in 1809 had established a reputation, and the Morleys were leaders among London Nonconformists. The father of Mr. Samuel Hope Morley refused to employ a Roman Catholic, but advocated Home Rule for Ireland. From 1903 to 1905 the new peer was a governor of the Bank of England.

A Prehistoric Man.

Basing his remarks on the skeleton found some months ago between the mid-glacial sand and the boulder clay in the neighborhood of Ipswick, Prof. Arthur Keith spoke at the Royal College of Surgeons in London on the antiquity of the modern type of man. He said he had come to the conclusion that the man whose skeleton lay in a crouched-up position differed from all the other instances of ancient remains which were known in that he was 5 feet 10 inches in height at least. There was no shin, properly speaking, it being simply marked by a thin line, and they were evidently dealing with an early stage in the evolution of the bone. The peculiarity of the skull was its lowness, and its widest point was seated further back than in the modern skull. The palate was comparatively small. No place, said Prof. Keith, was, in his opinion, likely to throw so much light on the early history of man as East Anglia.

A Robust Babe.

Sir John Richard Robinson in his "Fifty Years of Fleet Street" tells of an amusing incident during the visit of the Swazi deputation from the Transvaal to England at the close of 1894: "The Swazi braves went to Windsor and had an audience of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. They were very graciously received. One of their number began to speak, and an interpreter followed him phrase by phrase, 'We come, O great mother,' he said, 'to bring to you our babe. Take him, O mother, to thy knees; fold him to thy breast.' Here the Queen, half frightened, exclaimed: 'But where is the child? I don't see him. Where is he?' 'Here, O mother,' said the Swazi gravely, at the same time bringing forward a big black about six feet high and weighing well over 200 pounds. 'He is here!'"

Britain's 1911 Output.

During the year 1911 forty warships were launched in the British navy. These include eight super-Dreadnoughts carrying 13.5 inch guns, two protected cruisers, two unarmored cruisers, twenty-three torpedo boat destroyers and five submarines. These ships aggregated 221,000 tons and will cost when completed over $86,000,000.

England's Forests.

The forests for which England was at one time famous have vanished or exist only in the attenuated form of carefully preserved woods and parks, from which they can obtain but a fraction of the supplies they need.

Pearls indicate tears—especially if your better half has set her mind on diamonds.

RAILWAYS WILL HAVE TO JUSTIFY FREIGHT RATES; BIG ENQUIRY ORDERED

Vice-Chairman Scott of the Dominion Railway Board Announces That a Probe Which Will Be One of the Most Serious In the Commission's History Will Have to Be Made—Big Legal Battle.

Toronto, May 2.—That the three great railway companies of the Dominion—the Canadian Pacific, the Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific—will have to assume the responsibility for and justify the discrimination shown between the freight rates in Eastern and Western Canada, was decided on by an order of the Dominion Railway Board at its session yesterday afternoon. Moreover, it was announced by Vice-Chairman Scott that the investigation was to be thorough in its scope, and that in the near future the railways would be called upon to prove the reasonableness of the rates charged in the east and in the west.

"The board recognizes that this is one of the most serious investigations that it has been called upon to take up since its establishment," said the vice-chairman, "and therefore the railways will be given reasonable time to prepare their cases. The records of this board show that the freight rates charged by the G.T.R. and C.N.R. in Eastern Canada are similar to that of the C.P.R. in Eastern Canada; and that the rates charged by the Grand Trunk Pacific and Canadian Northern west of Fort William are similar to the rates charged by the C.P.R. west of Fort William."

The vice-chairman then gave the judgment of the board that the three railways should take on themselves the obligation to justify the discrimination in rates that have been shown to exist. Moreover, the board made it plain that the investigation, now that it had started, would be continued till finally disposed of, and that it would not be narrow or limited. On the request of the board, a date was arranged when all the railways would be in a position to announce when they would be ready to have the investigation proceeded with. The representatives of all the companies agreed on May 21, at Ottawa, when the board sits there again.

The importance of the case was at once in evidence by the array of eminent counsel that were on hand when the investigation commenced. Representing the Dominion Governmet were H. W. Whitla of Winnipeg, J. Bicknell, Toronto, and Mr. Morrison of Vegreville. The Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were represented by M. K. Cowan, assisted by Alex. McDonald, the C.P.R. by Mr. Chrysler of Ottawa and E. B. Beattie, Montreal; the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific by H. V. Hudson of Winnipeg and W. H. Biggar; the Canadian Northern by Judge Phippen and George Shaw, general traffic manager.

The rather abrupt adjournment of the hearing was brought about by the line of argument adopted yesterday by the counsel for the Dominion Government.

Before Mr. Chrysler's interruption, H. W. Whitla, counsel for the Dominion Government, was quoting an elaborate list of statistics showing that the western freight rates were in excess of the eastern rates by amounts varying from 40 per cent. to 159 per cent., according to the commodities being shipped.

Mr. Chrysler declared that he understood that the investigation was as to whether the rates were reasonable or unreasonable; not as to whether they were higher in the west than in the east.

After considerable discussion, the board decided that the railways must justify their western freight rates. Just before the case closed, M. K. Cowan, representing Alberta and Saskatchewan, protested because copies of railway statistics furnished to the Government lawyers by the railways had not been put on file or supplied in such a way that he could have access to them. The board and the representatives both agreed to let Mr. Cowan have all the statistics he desired.

VICTIMS OF BAD FLOODS

Terrible Distress In the Mississippi River Country.

Washington, May 2.—Food and shelter for 160,000 people probably will have to be provided by the War Department for another month as a result of the renewed flooding of Mississippi River territory.

As rapidly as possible the destitute are being turned over to local relief committees, but reports from the army engineers indicate that the daily average to be served with "plantation rations" by the commissary department continues to be about 160,000, and the cost is $10,000 a day.

Secretary Stimson estimates that additional appropriations of $500,000 for the commissary department and $150,000 for the quartermasters' department will be required to cover relief work expenses. To date the quartermasters have spent $277,179 for forage, tents and boats, while the commissaries have spent $236,000.

Torras, La., May 2.—Relief is being rushed to hundreds of marooned families in the flooded territory north of this place. Food depots have been fixed at points convenient for purposes of distribution.

Five thousand white persons along the Black River are in a desperate fix. The Government supplies received there are inadequate. Many families expecting the flood, built rafts, and when the water came they moved their household goods aboard. Horses, cows, pigs, chickens, dogs and cats are sharing these rafts with the farmers and their families. The rafts are anchored to trees, and that is the way they are living now.

PARIS BANDITS SLAIN IN FIERCE BATTLE WITH POLICE

MONS. LEPINE DIRECTING HIS MEN IN QUELLING A RIOT

Two of the most daring of the "automobile bandits" who have terrorized Paris for months were slain at Choisy-le-Roi, near the capital, after a thrilling battle with the police. Five thousand persons watched the encounter.

After several hours of desperate fighting, in the course of which many detectives were shot down, Mons. Lepine, the Prefect of Police, who personally directed the operations, ordered army engineers to use dynamite to destroy the bandits' lair. After the explosion of the sticks of dynamite the police rushed into the building and found Dubois, the notorious anarchist, dead in the ruins. Bonnot, the leader of the band, was so desperately wounded that he died in a few hours. Garnier and Carouy, two other members of the band, are still at large.

ADAM BECK IS VICTOR

Feature Event at London Horse Show Goes His Way.

Toronto, May 2.—Hon. Adam Beck was the outstanding figure at the Canadian National Horse Show yesterday. The achievement of his team of three hunters put the balance of the evening's program in the shade.

Class 46 was for the best team of three hunters, and Hon. Mr. Sifton's trio were second and Bert Cox's third. They were three extra fine teams and there was little to choose between first, second and third. Mr. Jarvis' entry also ran.

The judges appeared profoundly perplexed over the problem of separating the Beck and Sifton teams, but finally gave the signal for an outburts of applause by calling the Beck team for first, and Sifton's for second. The Ennisclaire entry got third.

Hon. Adam Beck rode the world champion middleweight bay hunter, Sir Edmund, the winner of first honors in England, the United States and Canada.

The night wound up with a spectacular military class of 31 mounted N.C.O.'s and men representing different regiments.

HIBERNIA TO TAKE PART IN NAVAL REVIEW

Special To The Review

London, May 2 — The battleship, "Hibernia" with four aeroplanes aboard and specially constructed wtih a launching platform on the forward deck, left Sheerness for the scene of the naval review, which starts off Portland to-day, and in which 125 vessels will participate. King George will spend three days on one of the battleships and act as umpire in a sham fight between the blue and red fleets, the former defending the coast.

HOME RULE FIGHT DRAGS IN THE BRITISH COMMONS

New System by Which the House of Lords May Hold Up a Measure For Two Years Is Responsible For the General Lack of Interest—Bill Settles Nothing, Says O'Brien, But Is Simply an Experiment.

London, May 2.—No great political project was ever debated in the House of Commons with less display of interest on the part of the members and the general public than the home rule bill. The speeches yesterday were delivered to a half empty House. A few Irish priests were the only spectators in the galleries, who appeared particularly concerned with what was passing on the floor. Even yesterday's oratorical performances, in which Winston Churchill, who is rated as the most brilliant of the younger politicians in either party, was the star, created hardly no enthusiasm. Statesmen like Gladstone, Parnell, Chamberlain and Hartington have fought bitterly every inch of the ground and racial and party passions, and stirred to the depths, but it could not possibly be compared in lack of enthusiasm with yesterday's session.

One reason for this is the present new system, whereby the House of Lords may prolong legislation over a period of two years, which postpones the critical stage of the measure. Another is the nature of the Conservative opposition to the bill, which, except on the part of the representatives of Ulster, is generally lukewarm. Several members complained yesterday of the length of the speeches. The Speaker practically confessed himself bored and remarked:

"I am sure that the House would rather hear three speeches of twenty minutes each than one of 60 minutes." This was received with shouts of approval.

William O'Brien, leader of Liberal Nationalists, said that in his opinion the bill was one on which all sections of Irishmen could unite in supporting in its fundamental structure and principles, but it would be arrant humbug to pretend that it settled everything, except reconciliation between the two countries. However, the fact that the bill was elastic and experimental and could be improved in accordance with the lessons of practical experience, was a recommendation in its favor. Divisions in the ranks of the Nationalists, he added, could be regarded as a good augury for the future, because those associated with him would form the germ of a healthy opposition in the new Irish Parliament.

Mr. O'Brien criticized the financial provisions of the bill, which he hoped would be amended in the committee stage.

Lord Claude Hamilton, Unionist, made a bellicose speech against the bill, declaring that if it passed he and his brother would take their stand with the people of Ulster. "I should only have to go to the quayside in Liverpool and call for volunteers," he said, "to get thousands of men ready to go and succor their brethren in Ulster."

Croghan Fire Loss, $700,000.

Watertown, N.Y., May 2.—Latest estimates of the loss by fire which destroyed Croghan Tuesday night, place the amount at $700,000. The telephone office was burned, and until late yesterday morning the place was cut off from communication.

Court Adjourned When Fire Started.

Perth, May 2.—Fire destroyed a couple of barns here Tuesday night. The fire broke out as the suit of the Canadian Electric & Waterpower Co. against the town was being heard, and the court adjourned at the time. Counsel for the litigants visited the fire to see what pressure the company produced under fire conditions. The town refused to pay the hydrant rental, claiming that the company was not giving the pressure required by contract. Judgment was reserved.

YOUNG SON OF MAYOR SHOT BY STRANGER

Special To The Review

Qu'appelle, Sask. May 2-A well dressed stranger, passing the residence of Mayor Beauchamp last night, suddenly whipped a revolver from his pocket and shot the Mayor's eighteen year old son in the forehead, and then disappeared. The boy's wound is not serious.

JEROME TO OPPOSE THAW

New York, May 2.—William Travers Jerome has been retained by Attorney-General Carmody to represent the people in opposition to the latest effort to obtain the release of Harry Thaw from Matteawan Asylum. As district attorney Mr. Jerome prosecuted Thaw in both his trials, and successfully fought the attempts to set the prisoner free.

A new move was made yesterday by Clarence J. Shearn, the leading counsel for Thaw, in a notice that a motion would be made that the testimony to be heard at White Plains should be before a jury, and not before Justice Keogh alone. Mr. Jerome will oppose this.

Finest Office In the World.

New York, May 2.—On the last day of this month, the finest, costliest and most beautiful private office in the world will be opened on the 31st storey of the Bankers' Trust Co. building, at Wall and Nassau streets.

Its floors will be of teakwood, inland with ebony. Its surfaces and ceiling moldings will be of the same precious wood. On the walls will hang paintings by old masters of Europe. On the floors will repost the handsomest specimens of the oriental rugmakers' art.

There will be no name on the door, but it will be the office of J. Pierpont Morgan.

Conference With Seamen.

Liverpool, May 2.—A committee of the ship owners and representatives of the Seamen's and Firemen's Union and the Transport Workers' Federation has agreed to hold a joint conference this month for a discussion of the conditions which led to the recent trouble with the seamen and firemen. In the meantime all the men will return to the ships.

SUSPICION IS DEFINITE; POLICE SURE THEY KNOW WHO MURDERED PORTER

Hole In Titanic Model.

New York, May 2.—A large crate stands on White Star pier 61 awaiting shipment to England on the Adriatic. It contains a thirty-foot model of a giant ocean liner, and cost $16,000 to build; but it is not of any use for exhibition purposes now. It is a model of the Titanic.

This replica is an exact duplication of the sunken leviathan down to the minutest detail. It was sent to this country to be exhibited as a specimen of the unsinkable ship. There is one strange coincidence about the model. There is a large rent at the bow, from keel to uppermost deck similar to the one that sent the Titanic to the bottom. Also there are davits for twenty lifeboats, but only twelve boats are shown.

Opinion Is Divided In Minden District as to Whether He Is a Miscreant or a Benefactor—Ellis, the Brother-in-Law, Says That There Has Been a Feud Between Him and Porter Since His Wife Died.

Minden, Ont., May 2.—Seldom is so curious a situation found as that exposed by the murder of Lew Porter, the trapper and farmer, who was shot to death by an ambushed enemy on the Cameron road, six miles south of the village of Minden, Thursday night last.

While the cold-blooded nature of the crime has shocked the neighborhood into excited discussion, a feeling of relief seems to have fallen upon the whole countryside. The dead man seems to have been regarded as a menace by all the population of this isolated section. As one man puts it, "There hasn't been a thing done in these parts for years that, if no one was caught, Lew Porter wasn't blamed for it." Everyone was afraid of him, or of what he might do.

Suspicion has now centred on one man in the district, and discussion is general as to whether or not he should be arrested. This debate is joined even by some of the officers working on the case, and one of these believes that the matter should be rushed to a conclusion in this way, while the other opinion is that an extensive and searching probe should be made by means of Coroner Pogue's inquest which will be continued tonight, but which will likely be immediately adjourned till Wednesday night next. Detective Reburn of the provincial police arrived here yesterday, and expects that by that time he will have some concrete evidence to take the place of rumors of standing grudges and whispered suspicion.

Ellis, the brother-in-law, in an interview yesterday, spoke of the death of his wife five years ago, and the feud between her family and himself following that event.

"I know they blamed me for her death," he said, "and old man Porter ain't spoke to me since. Lew and I weren't what you'd call friendly, but we always passed the time of day when we passed. I wasn't to blame for the death of the woman. I went for a doctor, but they didn't think I went soon enough, that was all.

"There has been a lot of talk about Lew and me not being friends, but you know how folks will talk. I never made any threats against him at any time."

COACHMAN IS KILLED AT GUELPH

Galt, May 2.—Henry Corbett, an Englishman, a coachman for J. C. Dietrich, was killed yesterday morning while driving a young horse attached to a light wagon along Blair road, towards Dietrich's residence. The animal bolted and the driver was thrown against a tree and his neck broken. He was to have been joined by his wife and three little children, now in the old land next month.

Loss Exaggerated.

Ottawa, May 2.—It was stated at the Public Works Department yesterday that the damage from the collapse of a part of the Quebec breakwater is greatly exaggerated, and that it will be nowhere near half a million as reported in despatches.

STOLE MONEY FOR SWEETHEART

Chicago, May 2.—Mary Reynolds, ticket agent, employed by the Illinois Central Railroad, who told the police a story of being held up and robbed of $150 by two men in the station Tuesday night, confessed yesterday that she had concocted the story of the robbery and had given the money to her sweetheart.

"I took the money and gave it to Charles Duff," she said. "We were soon to be married and neither of us had much money. The money is hidden in a cigar box, buried at the base of a telegraph pole at Fifth avenue and Michigan avenue."

First Wife Mourns.

New York, May 2.—Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, former wife of Col. John J. Astor, reached New York yesterday. She was dressed in deep mourning. Her daughter, Miss Muriel Astor, accompanied her.

When Mrs. Astor was asked for some expression as to the death of Col. Astor, she replied that she was too sad for an expression of sentiment, and asked to be excused. She also declined to say whether she would attend Col. Astor's funeral.

Body Found In River.

London, Ont., May 2.—The body of an unknown man, well dressed and about 45 years of age, was found in the Thames River at Courtwright. There is a gash across the forehead, and another along the side of the head, but whether these are due to ice or timber during the floods, or to blows, is not yet certain. An inquest will be held.

Fell Overboard In Dark.

Southampton, Ont., May 2.—John Logie, captain and owner of a fishing tug, was lost overboard and drowned about 30 miles south from here Tuesday night.

No person on board saw the accident, and he was not missed for over two hours.

THE COST OF LIVING IN CANADA

Ottawa, May 2.—"Yes, wages are high in Canada, but some one said 'so is living.' Here are present retail Canadian city prices the housewife will appreciate: Mutton, shoulder, 4 1-2d. a pound, mutton chops 7d., beef 4d., sardines 2d. a tin."

The foregoing is an extract from an advertisement of Canada, as an attractive country for intending emigrants, which appeared in the Standard of Empire of Friday, April 19. At the foot of the ad. is the name of J. Obed Smith, assistant Canadian superintendent of emigration in London.

Shot Her Husband.

Memphis, Tenn., May 2.—That Mrs. Olive D. Corgill shot and killed her husband Monday night because she feared that Corgill would kill her, as well as their children, is asserted in a statement made by J. F. Rees, father of the woman. Mrs. Corgill is under arrest.

Mrs. Corgill told her father that her husband, despondent because his search for employment had been unsuccessful, had been drinking.

"He told me he didn't have a dollar or a friend and struck me," Mrs. Corgill said. "He said he was going to kill me, the children and himself and end it all, and threatened me unless I got him the pistol. I got the gun and shot him."

END OF THE INVESTIGATION

Goderich, Ont., May 2.—The investigation into the charges made by Michael Farr, hotelkeeper, against William Patterson, chairman of the Centre Huron license commissioners, concluded at 10.30 yesterday morning, and Commissioner Eudo Saunders of Toronto will make his report to the Government after reviewing the evidence.

Andrew Porter gave an emphatic denial to Farr's statement that he had approached him and suggested putting up money to guarantee the renewal of his license. Farr, he declared, had come to him and asked him to use his influence, and he had replied that he was out of that sort of thing now, as it took all his time to run the bank. He had no knowledge of any attempt being made to hold-up hotelkeepers for money for license renewals.

John C. Martin, owner of the Colborne Hotel property, who was mentioned by Farr as one of the men whom he alleged Patterson had told him would put up money, denied any knowledge of any such proposals being made.

CONNAUGHT'S BIRTHDAY

London, May 2.—In honor of the Duke of Connaught's birthday, bells were rung and a royal salute was fired at Windsor. Flags were also flying on the Government offices in London. The Canadian Governor-General is 62 years old, having been born on May 1. 1850.

"Pretorian" Went Far South.

Quebec, May 2.—The Allan liner Pretorian arrived yesterday morning after a slow passage from Glasgow, having had to take a course two hundred miles south of the ordinary one to avoid icebergs. The largest iceberg was met last Friday, 150 feet high.

The Pretorian carried 740 passengers, the first consignment of English and Scotch immigrants to reach Quebec this season. The steamer left last night for Montreal.

Winnipeg Loan Failed.

London, May 2.—Further evidence of the congested condition of the Canadian municipal market was shown in the fact that of the Winnipeg loan the underwriters have 73 per cent. left on their hands.

Montreal Not Affected.

Montreal, May 2.—The Ontario increase in the price of coal leaves Montreal unaffected, and dealers do not anticipate any advance in price.

Catarrhal Deafness

Successfully Treated By Catarrhozone

Deafness is not so common as blindness, yet thousands are more or less afflicted by it, and their comfort seriously interfered with.

Catarrhal deafness manifests itself but slowly, yet it must be acknowledged that the great majority of those who become totally deaf might have averted this unfortunate condition if they had treated the catarrhal inflammation at its beginning.

The only remedy that can be safely employed for all forms of catarrhal deafness is Catarrhozone. You simply charge the air you breathe with this healing, soothing agent, and by forcing it gently through the ears destroy the germ life which keeps up the inflammation, and at the same time by the soothing, healing action it heals the inflamed surfaces of the middle ear.

CATARRHOZONE, to those who are just a little deaf, and are growing increasingly deaf, is an agent capable of affording the utmost satisfaction, and its use is attended without danger, and as the treatment can be carried on at home no person threatened with the affliction of deafness should postpone one moment in beginning its use.

From every part of the Dominion glowing accounts of the beneficial action it exerts upon catarrhal conditions of the middle ear have been sent in, and you will be resorting to the only method of cure, and the simplest method too, if you try Catarrhozone. Dealers everywhere sell it, 25c, 50c, and $1.00. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT

St. John, N.B., is the first Canadian city to adopt the commission form of government. The new body has been elected and consists of five members. The question between the two systems is, whether the civic business should be carried on by business methods as by a Board of Directors, or by parliamentary methods as in a legislature. A large city council will inevitably lead to speech making, to more or less of addresses to the electors from the seat in the council, and to efforts to get the better of "the other fellow." It does seem that all this is out of place in the management of the business of a city, especially of a smaller city. With fewer members of the council, and more continuity of membership—and that is what the commission form of government means —there should be more business-like consideration of the matters dealt with, without the unnecessary and distracting speech making. And there could be a more expeditious handling of civic business.

The two main gains that should come from commission government would be expedition and continuity of policy, and they are worth obtaining.

BANKING LAWS

Although several new banks were chartered in recent years, there are fewer banks in Canada now than there were a few years ago. Some banks failed, and some have been absorbed by or amalgamated with others These movements have attracted attention to the banking laws, which are to be revised, but there does not seem to be any reason for uneasiness on account of the amalgamations. Strong banking institutions are better than weak ones, and there is no indication of a monopoly of such a character as to menace the business of the country. If there is, or whether there is or not, in revising the law, care might be taken to guard against such an undertaking.

One of the features of the Canadian banking law is the double liability of shareholders, by which a holder of shares is personally responsible for the debts of the institution to an amount equal to his holdings. This is a provision for the safety of the public and made on account of the exceptional powers given to banks. Yet owing to the developments in connection with the banking business there is not always the double liability on the part of the purchaser of stock, equal to the amount the institution receives for the stock it has issued. Of course when a purchaser buys bank stock from another holder, the bank is not directly interested in the price paid. It has received the equivalent of the stock previous to the market transaction. But where a bank issues new stock, and the money it receives for it, is in excess of the stock's face value, then its capital is increased by an amount greater than the liability assumed by the purchaser. This takes place when a bank, as has been frequently done, issues new stock and sells it at more than its face. The new stock has usually been sold to stockholders at a figure less than the banks' stock is selling for on the market, and the difference between the price paid and the market value is a bonus given in stock to the shareholders. There are two elements in this proceedure, in which the public would appear to have an interest, and two, which pull in opposite directions One is that in disposing of the stock at less than market value, the bank is giving an extra dividend to its shareholders, and an extra dividend that does not appear as such in its reports. The other is that it is receiving an increase to its capital that amounts to more than the double liability created by the stock issue.

It is not only in the issuing of new stock by an established institution that a premium has been received. In such a case, when the stock has a market value in excess of par, regulation to protect the public to the full with respect to the double liability would be very difficult. Such a complication, however, does not arise in the case of a bank newly organized. Yet it is not an unknown thing for a new bank to float its first stock at a premium of 100, and by this means to begin business with a capital twice as large as the amount of the contingent liability assured by the shareholders. The object was not, in all probability, to avoid a portion of this legal liability, but to begin operations with a "rest" and to have the stock at once quoted at a good premium. But one effect of such an operation is to enable a bank to commence with a capital equal to twice the amount of the liability of its shareholders, under the banking law, and, whatever attraction it might have for investors in stock, to weaken the security which the law presumes the public should have.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Liberal papers, or some of them, refuse to believe that the reciprocity pact is dead and cannot be revived. They are "Adjuncters' still.

Mr. Roosevelt tells Mr. Taft that "one of the unpardonable sins on the part of any man calling himself a gentleman, is to publish confidential correspondence without permission." If the President agrees with this he must either admit that he is not a gentleman or that he has committed an unpardonable sin. That the President was sorely tried by the attacks of his one-time friend there is no doubt, but most people will share the latter's indignation at the publication of confidential correspondence.

WHAT YOU HEAR IN OLD QUEBEC

"I Am Well Thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills"

Mrs. Gagnon, Riviere au Dore, one of those who Raise the Glad Shout of Good Health.

Riviere au Dore, Chicoutimi Co., Quebec, May 1. (Special).—"Yes, I am well, and I give all the credit to Dodd's Kidney Pills." Those words have been uttered again and again in almost every corner of the Province of Quebec. This time they come from Mrs. Joseph Gagnon, a well-known young married woman of this place.

"My back and head ached and my limbs would swell," Mrs. Gagnon continues. "I always had a bitter taste in my mouth, and especially in the morning. Twelve boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me."

Mrs. Gagnon's symptoms showed beyond a doubt that the trouble was from the Kidneys. Naturally she turned to the old reliable Kidney Cure that had proved its worth in thousands of other cases. She took Dodd's Kidney Pills and she is well.

Kidney Disease is the greatest enemy the women of to-day have to fight. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure it. That's why they have earned the name, "suffering woman's best friend."

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Further bodies of victims of the Titanic disaster were identified at Halifax.

The ferry fares between the two Soos have been reduced from ten cents each way to five.

The Spanish Senate voted an address of condolence to the families of the victims of the Titanic yesterday.

Herbie, the four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George Agnew of Acton lost his life while playing on the bank of Fairy Lake yesterday.

Looking in the best of physical condition, after his sojourn of a month in the south, the Right Hon. R. L. Borden returned to Ottawa yesterday.

Small strikes are reported at London, Ottawa and Kingston. The Hamilton bricklayers went out, but otherwise May Day was uneventful in labor circles.

Plumbers went on strike at Kingston yesterday because the bosses refused to give an increase. They are receiving $2.55 for nine hours, and ask for $3 for eight hours.

The Boy Scouts of Ottawa have divided up the city systematically and are going to do some scouting for spots wherein flies may breed with a view to extirpating the pest.

"IMPOSSIBLE TO HELP MY KIDNEYS"

Until I Used "Fruit-a-tives" Worlds Greatest Kidney Cure

Practically everybody in Toronto knows Professor J. F. Davis. For years, the elite of that city has taken lessons from Prof. Davis in the art of Dancing and Deportment.

His constant activity gradually weakened his Kidneys, which calamity threatened to make him an invalid.

But read Prof. Davis' letter—

563 CHURCH ST., TORONTO, ONT.
DECEMBER 29th. 1911

"I want to say that "Fruit-a-tives" is my only medicine, and has been for the past five years. Previous to that, I had been troubled with Rheumatism and Kidney Disease, and had taken many remedies without satisfactory results. Noticing the advertisements of "Fruit-a-tives" I adopted this treatment altogether, and as everyone knows, I am now—and have been since taking "Fruit-a-tives"—enjoying the best of health".

J. F. DAVIS.

If Rheumatism or Kidney Trouble is making you miserable, take "Fruit-a-tives" and get well.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 1.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market, receipts for the week ending April 27, were 750 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1375 hogs, and 2150 calves. The offerings on the market today for sale were 700 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 1420 hogs and 2300 calves.

Owing to the more liberal supply of cattle there was an easier undertone to the market, but prices showed no actual change as compared with those realized on Monday. The gathering of buyers was large. The trade in cows and bulls was more active than usual and the former brought from $5.75 to $6.50 and the latter from $5.85 to $6.75 per cwt.

The undertone to the market for hogs was strong, but as the supply was ample to fill all requirements prices were unchanged. An active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $9.60 to $9.75 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Sheep were scarce and in demand at $6 to $6.50 per cwt. for ewes. The demand for lambs was good at $4 to $6 each. The trade in calves was active at prices ranging from $1.50 to $10 each as to size and quality.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, May 1.—Cattle—Receipts, 100 head; active and strong.

Veals—Receipts, 400 head; active and $1 higher; $4.50 to $9.50; a few $9.75.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

"I'm going to that pier," she announced. "Guess you'd better escort me, Mr. Fitzroy."

"Fate closes the door in my face," he said sadly. "I cannot go with you —in that direction."

"Well, of all the odd people!—why not that way, if any other?"

"Because Count Edouard Marigny, the gentleman whose name I could not help overhearing to-day, has just gone there—with another man."

"Have you a grudge against him, too?"

"I never set eyes on him before six o'clock this evening, but I imagine you would not care to have him see you walking with your chauffeur."

Cynthia looked up and down the

"Why must I not go to that pier?"

broad sea front, with its thousands of lamps and droves of promenaders.

"At last I am beginning to size up this dear little island," she said. "I may go with you to a race-track, I may sit by your side for days in an automobile, I may even eat your luncheon and drink your aunt's St. Galmier, but I may not ask you to accompany me a hundred yards from my hotel to a pier. 'Very well, I'll quit. But before I go, do tell me one thing. Did you really mean to bring your aunt to Epsom to-day?"

"Yes."

"A mother's sister sort of aunt—a nice old lady with white hair?"

"One would almost fancy you had met her, Miss Vanrenen."

"Perhaps I may, some day. Father and I are going to Scotland for a month from the twelfth of August. After that we shall be in the Savoy Hotel about six weeks. Bring her to see me."

Medenham almost jumped when he heard of the projected visit to the Highlands, but some demon of mischief urged him to say:

"Let's reckon up. July, August, September—three months——"

He stopped with a jerk. Cynthia, already aware of some vague power she possessed of stirring this man's emotions, did not fail to detect his air of restraint.

"It isn't a proposition that calls for such a lot of calculation," she said sharply. "Good-night, Mr. Fitzroy. I hope you are punctual morning-time. When there is a date to be kept, I'm a regular alarm clock, my father says."

She sped across the road, and into the hotel. Then Medenham noticed how dark it had become—reminded him of the tropics, he thought—and made for his own caravanserai, while his brain was busy with a number of disturbing but negulous problems that seemed to be pronounced in character yet singularly devoid of a beginning, a middle, or an end.. Indeed, so puzzling and contradictory were they that he soon fell asleep. When he rose at seven o'clock next morning the said problems had vanished. They must have been part and parcel with the glamor of a June night, and a starlit sky, and the blue depths of the sea and a girl's eyes, for the wizard sun had dispelled them long ere he awoke. But he did not telegraph to Simmonds.

Dale brought the car to the Grand Hotel in good time, and Medenham ran it some distance along the front before drawing up at the Metropole. By that means he dissipated any undue curiosity that might be experienced by some lounger on the pavement who happened to notice the change of chauffeurs, while he avoided a prolonged scrutiny by the visitors already packed in chairs on both sides of the porch. He kept his face hidden during the luggage strapping process, and professed not to be aware of Cynthia's presence until she bade him a cheery "Good-morning."

Of course, Marigny was there, and Mrs. Devar gushed loudly for the benefit of the other people while settling herself comfortably in the tonneau.

"It was awfully devey of you, Count Edouard, to enliven our first evening away from town. No such good fortune awaits us in Bournemouth, I am afraid."

"If I am to accept that charming reference as applying to myself, I can only say that my good fortune has exhausted itself already, madame," said the Frenchman. "When do you return to London?"

"About the end of next week," put in Cynthia.

"And your father—that delightful Monsieur Vanrenen," said the Count, breaking into French, "he will join you there?"

"Oh, yes. My father and I are seldom separated a whole fortnight."

"Then I shall have the pleasure of seeing you there. I go to-day to Salisbury—after that, to Hereford and Liverpool."

"Why, we shall be in Hereford one day soon. What fun if we met again!"

Marigny looked to heaven, or as far in the direction popularly assigned to heaven as the porch of the Metropole would permit. He was framing a suitable speech, but the Mercury shot out into the open road with a noiseless celerity that disconcerted him.

Medenham at once slackened speed and leaned back.

"I'm very sorry," he said, "but I clean forgot to ask if you were quite ready to start."

Cynthia laughed.

"Go right ahead, Fitzroy," she cried. "Guess the Count is pretty mad anyhow. He was telling us last night that his Du Vallon is the only car that can hit up twenty at the first buzz."

"Unpardonable rudeness," murmured Mrs. Devar.

"On the Count's part?" asked the girl demurely.

"No, of course not—on the part of this chauffeur person."

"Oh, I like him," was the candid answer. "He is a chauffeur of moods, but he can make this car hum. He and I had quite a long chat last night after dinner."

Mrs. Devar sat up quickly.

"After dinner—last night!" she gasped.

"Yes—I ran into him outside the hotel."

"At what time?"

"About ten o'clock. I came to the lounge, but you had vanished, and the wonderful light on the sea drew me out of doors."

"My dear Cynthia!"

"Well, go on; that sounds like the beginning of a letter."

Mrs. Devar suddenly determined not to feel scandalized.

"Ah, well!" she sighed, 'one must relax a little when touring, but you Americans have such free and easy manners that we staid Britons are apt to lose our breath occasionally when we hear of something out of the common."

"From what Fitzroy said when I told him I was going as far as the pier unaccompanied it seems to me that you staid Britons can get freer if not easier," retorted Miss Vanrenen.

Her friend smiled sourly.

"If he disapproved he was right, I admit," she purred.

Cynthia withheld any further confidences.

"What a splendid morning!" she said. "England is marvelously attractive on a day like this. And now, where is the map? I didn't look up our route yesterday evening. But Fitzroy has it. We lunch at Winchester, I know, and there I see my first English Cathedral. Father advised me to leave St. Paul's until I visit it with him. He says it is the most perfect building in the world architecturally, but that no one would realize it unless the facts were pointed out. When we were in Rome he said that St. Peter's, grand as it is, is all wrong in construction. The thrust downwards from the dome is false, it seems."

"Really," said Mrs. Devar, who had just caught sight of Lady Somebody-or-other at the window of a house in Hove, and hoped that her ladyship's eyes were sufficiently good to distinguish at least one occupant of the car.

"Yes; and Sir Chistopher Wren mixed beams of oak with the stonework of his pillars, too. It gave them strength, he believed, though Michael Angelo had probably never heard of such a thing."

"You don't say so."

The other woman had traveled far on similar conversational counters. They would have failed with Cynthia, but the girl had opened the map, and talk lagged for the moment.

Leaving the coast at Shoreham, Medenham turned the car northward at Bramber, with is stone-roofed cottages gilded with lichens, its tiny gardens gay with flowers, and the ruins of its twelfth-century castle frowning from the crest of an elm-clothed hill. Two miles to the northwest they came upon ancient Steyning, now a sleepy country town, but of greater importance than Bath or Birmingham or Southampton in the days of the Confessor, and redolent of the past by reason of its churches, with an early Norman chancel, its houses bearing stone moldings and window mullions of the Elizathan period, and its quaint street names, such as Dog Lane, Sheep-pen Stret, and Chantry Green, where two martyrs were burnt.

Thence the way lay though the leafy wonderland of West Sussex, when the Mercury crept softly through Midhurst and Petersfield into Hampshire, and so to Winchester, where Cynthia, enraptured with the cathedral, used up a whole reel of films, and bought some curios carved out of oak imbedded in the walls when the Conqueror held England in his firm grip.

They lunched at a genuine old coaching house in the main street, and Medenham persuaded the girl to turn aside from Salisbury in order to pass through the heart of the New Forest. She sat with him in front then, and their talk dealt more with the magnificent scenery than with personal matters until they reached Ringwood where they halted for tea.

Before alighting at the inn there she asked him where he meant to stay in Bournemouth. He answered the one question by another.

"You put up at the Bath Hotel, I think?" he said.

ONTARIO WOMAN'S FORTUNE

Freed From That Weak, Languid, Always Tired Feeling, by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Thessalon, Ont.—"I cannot speak too highly of your medicine. When my appetite is poor and I have that weak, languid, always tired feeling, I get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it builds me up, gives me strength, and restores me to perfect health again. It is truly a blessing to women, and I cannot speak highly enough of it. I take pleasure in recommending it to others."—Mrs. ANNIE CAMERON, Thessalon, Ont.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

There are probably hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of women in the United States who have been benefited by this famous old remedy, which was produced from roots and herbs over 30 years ago by a woman to relieve woman's suffering. If you are sick and need such a medicine, why don't you try it?

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Monkey Listening For a Noise In the Package.

In some of their actions monkeys seem to be guided by something higher than instinct. Darwin describes a trick played on a monkey to show its intelligence. Lumps of sugar wrapped in paper were first given to him. Then for sugar a live wasp was substituted, but after meeting with an unpleasant experience from the wasp the monkey put the next package to his ear to learn if it might be safely opened. This action showed that the monkey had memory and considerable wisdom and had discovered that a wasp buzzes when wrapped in paper.—St. Nicholas.

Signs of the Zodiac.

The zodiac is an imaginary band or belt extending around the circuit of the heavens, having as its middle line the apparent path of the sun. The band extends for a distance of nine celestial degrees on each side of the middle line and is therefore eighteen degrees in width. The name zodiac was given to this celestial belt by the ancients. It comes from the Greek word "zo-on," which means "animal," and was applied to the belt because the twelve constellations that form it are named after animals, with five exceptions, or with only one exception if we consider man as an animal, as, of course, he is.

The twelve constellations are Aries, the Ram; Taurus, the Bull; Gemini, the Twins; Cancer, the Crab; Leo, the Lion; Virgo, the Virgin; Libra, the Balance; Scorpio, the Scorpion; Sagittarius, the Archer; Capricornus, the Goat; Aquarius, the Water Bearer, and Pisces, the Fishes. The sun appears to pass through these twelve constellations, one after another, during twelve months, and astronomers have divided the zodiac, therefore, into twelve equal parts of thirty degrees each, the entire circuit of the heavens being, as you know, 360 degrees. The division into twelve equal parts is more for convenience than anything else, for the constellations vary in size, and those parts are called the "signs of the zodiac." The sun enters Aries at the vernal equinox March 20 and passes into the other signs in regular order from month to month, coming around to Aries again the next March.

Flags at Half Mast.

Perhaps you have noticed that whenever a prominent person dies, especially if he is connected with the government, the flags on public buildings are hoisted only part of the way up. This is called half mast. Did you ever stop to think what connection there could be between a flag that was not properly hoisted and the death of a great man?

Ever since flags were used in war it has been the custom to have the flag of the superior or conquering nation above that of the inferior or vanquished. When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the flag of the victors to be placed above it on the same pole. This was a token not only of submission, but of respect.

In those days when a famous soldier died flags were lowered out of respect to his memory. The custom long ago passed from purely military usage to public life of all kinds, the flag flying at half mast being a sign that the dead man was worthy of universal respect.

The Fox and the Crow.

A crow is sitting on the tree.
She has some cheese in her mouth.
Along comes a sly old fox.
"How I would like to have that cheese," he thinks.
"How can I get it?"
He looks up at the crow and smiles.
"Dear crow, how pretty you are," he says.
"I know you can sing sweetly.
"Will you sing for me?"
"What a nice fox," thinks the crow.
"No one ever told me before how sweetly I sang.
"I will sing for him."
She opens her mouth to sing.
Down falls the cheese to the ground!
There, the fox has it!
See him run!

Geo Hillman, of Bothwell, was killed by a train.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

BROTHER OF LOCAL LADY PASSED AWAY AT HAVELOCK

Our citizens were deeply shocked on Thursday morning when the news of the sudden death of the late Richard Phillips flashed around town. Many would not believe the sad news, but it proved to be only too true. Down town the night previous, after ten o'clock he was apparently in perfect health and good spirits. A few hours later he was lying dead from the effects of a paralytic stoke. No one knew of the death until morning, when he failed to put in an appearance for breakfast. Not responding to knocks upon his door, the bedroom was entered, only to find the remains upon the bed, partially undressed. The paralysis apparently had commenced while he was preparing to retire and he had lain down upon the bed never to rise again.

The deceased was most widely known and respected. He had been in business in Havelock for the past twenty-one years, and was perhaps the best known merchant in town. He is survived by one son, Mr. Ralph; his brother, and partner in business, George; and two sisters, Mrs. S. S. Joyce of town and Mrs. John Sutherland of Peterboro.

The funeral, which was conducted under the auspices of the Masonic Order, of which he was a member, took place from his late residence on Saturday afternoon to the Maple Grove cemetery, the remains being laid beside those of his late wife, who predeceased him about fifteen years ago. The services, which were largely attended, were conducted at the house by Rev. James Skene.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, including a handsome wreath from the Sherwin-Williams Paint Company.—Havelock Standard.

OFFICERS OF THE ST. GEORGE'S CHORAL SOCIETY

The annual meeting and banquet of the St. George's Choral Society was held in Messrs. Coleman Bros' banqueting room on Tuesday, April 30. The seating capacity of the room almost taxed to the limit, there being over 70 members and guests present.

The financial statement of the society was read and passed, and a balance of over twenty dollars was carried forward, after all accounts were settled, which reflects great credit on the officers of the society, particularly Mr. B. Read, the secretary.

The following officers were elected.
President—Chas. E. Coleman.
Vice-Pres.—J. W. Worth.
Secretary—Bertram Read.
Assist. Sec.—F. Dainton.
Musical Director—R. J. Devey.
Treasurer—T. S. Edney.

The above with Mrs. Wells and Mr. Baldry to form the executive.

The society is to be congratulated in securing the services of Mr. R. J. Devey, as musical leader, and there are already many good additions to the choir.

Rehearsals for the presentation of "The Messiah" will commence at once

Herb Lennox's Joke.

At two o'clock the other morning there was great excitement in the Ontario Legislature. Herb. Lennox was the cause of it all. The budget debate was in progress, and Mr. Lennox sent a note to some of the members that there was going to be a division. As most of the members had gone to their boarding houses, there was great excitement. Telephone calls were hastily put in, and in about fifteen minutes members commenced to arrive in all haste. Some came in taxicabs, some in cabs, some on foot and others on night cars and dressed on the way.

Many of the members rushed into the House minus collars and ties, one came with only an undershirt, and all were anxious to be on hand when the division was called. But there was no division. At two o'clock Mr. Mageau of Sturgeon Falls was still talking, Herb. Lennox had disappeared, and the members who had been wakened from sleep were searching for the man who had caused so much excitement.

CONTRACTS LET FOR WATERING OF THE STREETS

Street Railway Must Repair Roadway Along Their Line

A short meeting of the Board of Works was held at the conclusion of the committee of the whole meeting last evening.

The chairman and street commissioner were authorized to purchase a concrete mixer for the city.

Offers were received for supplying a bicycle for the street commissioner On motion of Ald. Anderson and Gillespie, a wheel will be purchased from Murray Miller for $35.00 and the old wheel.

The city engineer was instructed to notify the Peterboro Radial Railway Company, to repair the roadway, where the rails are too high and to repair the roadway between the rails where needed. The city engineer was also instructed to have the Peterborough Light and Power Company repair Hunter street, east, where the gas mains were laid last year.

A report was read from the city engineer regarding concrete sidewalks to be constructed in 1912.

WATERING CONTRACTS

The street watering contracts for this season as awarded by the chairman and street commissioner, were approved as follows—

Southern District—H. C. Bacon, $525
Western District—Justin Blodgett, $549.
Northern District— James McWilliams, $540.
Eastern District—Adam Cox, $480.

Montreal Firemen Overcome.

Montreal, May 2.—Seven firemen were overcome by escaping gas and noxious fumes of burning banana oil, and it was necessary to take three women down ladders during the progress of a blaze in the building at Busby Lane and Craig street, occupied by the Canadian Bronze Powder Works.

Five firemen were taken to hospitals, while District Chief Mann and Captain Carson of No. 20 station, who were also carried from the basement, stuck to their work after recovering in the free air of the street.

The women rescued from the second story of the building were employes of J. A. White & Co., manufacturers of soothing syrup.

Wireless Will Never Sleep.

Washington, May 2.—A twenty-four-hour-a-day vigil at a wireless instrument will be required after July 1 of every kind of craft leaving an American port and carrying one hundred persons if the Hitchcock bill, passed Tuesday by the Senate, is agreed to by the House of Representatives.

The bill specifies that each vessel must have two operators, one of whom must be always on duty, and the wireless apparatus must be capable of sending messages one hundred miles and receiving them from a like distance.

Parliamentary Perquisites.

The custom of presenting a leather trunk to each member at the initial session of every Parliament has been re-established.

The internal economy committee of the last House composed of three Cabinet Ministers and Speaker Marcil, passed a resolution suspending the custom after the trunks for the 1908 Parliament had been distributed.

This year's internal economy committee sanctioned a recommendation by the printing committee for going back to the old system, and within the past few days M.P.'s have been making their selection, several alternatives beside trunks being exhibited.

For two sessions there have been no stationery trunks, but it is rumored that the supplementary estimates may provide for them also. From the earliest days, these perquisites have been attached to Parliament.

Not as It Sounded.

Used as he was to scenes of turbulence, no doubt even the conductor would have been shocked had he not been right on the spot to see what occasioned the shrill outcry. He called out "Eighty-ninth street!" and immediately a startled voice rang out:

"Oh, wait a minute, till I get my clothes off!"

Everybody stood up and craned necks over their neighbors' shoulders. What they saw was a laundress tugging at a clothes basket which had got wedged in the doorway.

A Deep Thinker.

The new teacher was somewhat uncertain as to the nationality of her latest charges. She was not kept long in doubt, however. "Yoke," she wrote on the board, then asked in her most musical tones as she looked graciously round the class, "Can any little boy or girl tell me the meaning of that word?"

A small blond boy raised his hand. "Ay know," he said hoarsely. "It—it ess when you say somet-ing funny."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To The Editor of The Review.

Sir,—There is probably not another reactionary journal in Ontario so bad in that respect as the Peterborough Examiner. This newspaper has attacked in several articles the proposal to furnish Canada with an Old Age Pension system. In long rambling sentences it sets out the danger to the poor that they may be further pauperized if they should be given a pension, no matter how little. The Examiner does not condemn pensions in general. It only condemns pensions to the poor. In the Old Age Pension scheme concerning which the machinery of Parliament is now gathering evidence under the chairmanship of Mr. J. H. Burnham, looking to the introduction of the measure at as early a date as possible, the Examiner can see nothing good. The idea which it suggests that the deserving will be rendered undeserving by being given a small pension is not the opinion of 99 per cent of the people of Canada, as expressed in reply to countless circulars sent out to Trades and Labor Councils, Salvation Army centres, Municipal Councils, Government Superintendents of Charities and Prisons, &c. Supposing that there was a danger, does the Examiner propose to let the poor die like dogs in the street because a pension might possibly induce someone to try and be poor and miserable and sick and starving? The Examiner had better get this miserable, selfish idea out of its head, throw politics aside for once and join in applauding a measure which the Toronto Globe and others of its own party have most highly recommended.

This little journal also opposes Woman Sufferage. Its reactionary soul recoils with fear from the proposition that women should have the right to vote, whether they vote or not It must consider women a weak miserable lot. One would have thought that the magnificent heroism of the women on board the Titanic would have prompted the professional kicked of the Examiner to expand the little seed which does duty for his soul into something more beautiful and blooming. Party politics prepare editors for miserable existences and it would be well for those most acutely affected in that particular, to take a course in marbles or some such breezy past time, which might recall some of the enthusiasm of youth, which the ditor of the Examiner seems to have lost some decades ago.

"CITIZEN"

Makes Generous Offer.

Boston, May 2.—The refusal of the Republican delegates at large to accept Col. Roosevelt's decision yesterday that they should vote for President Taft at the Chicago convention, although elected as Roosevelt delegates, has further complicated the situation arising from the state primaries Tuesday. The situation is acknowledged by party leaders of both sides to be without parallel in the political history of the commonwealth.

In his request to the delegates at large, Col. Roosevelt declared it to be his wish to abide by the will of the people, and that, therefore, the delegates, though elected as pledged to him should vote for Mr. Taft, who had received the Presidential preference vote. One by one the delegates, as they were heard from yesterday, however, protested that under no circumstances would they cast their ballots other than they had been pledged.

DROWNING FATALITY IN BAXSTER'S CREEK AND A TIMELY RESCUE

Canoe Used by James Peters and Richard Thornbeck Upset the Former Losing His Life—Mr. Thornbeck's Cries for Help Answered by Messrs. O. and F. Stewart.

The first drowning accident of the season in this vicinity was recorded last evening, when Mr. James Peters, who resided on Parnell street with his wife and family of nine children, lost his life at Baxter's Creek, when a canoe in which he and Mr. Richard Thornbeck, 181 Wescott street, were using, upset. Both men went into the cold water and were unable to right their craft.

The circumstances of the distressing affair, as told to the Review by Mr. O. Stewart, of Stewart's Landing, about six miles from the Peterborough Locks, are that he and his brother, Fred, were attracted to Baxter's Creek, one mile and a half distant, by cries which they later found came from Mr. Thornbeck, whom they found in the water, minus his coat, hat and boots, and clinging to the overturned canoe. When within a short distance from the creek the two men noticed that the cries for help had stopped. When Mr. Thornbeck was rescued from the water he was suffering greatly from his trying ordeal, and will feel the effects for some time.

As near as Mr. Thornbeck could judge, the accident happened about six o'clock, after he and his companion had made a distance of about three hundred yards from the river. After the canoe upset Mr. Peters was forced to relinquish his hold on the boat, and he sank. While the Stewart brothers were taking the rescued man to a house at Hales' Bridge, Mr. Jas. Latimer, of South Monaghan, who had also been attracted to the scene of the accident, found the body of Mr. Peters, face upwards, at the top of the water. The body had found its way from a deeper part to a point in the marsh, where the water was about three feet deep.

Mr. O. Stewart telephoned to Coroner Dr. Greer for instructions and the body was taken to Comstock's undertaking establishment.

Mr. Peters was recently appointed assistant fishery inspector and had been camping down the river. He made a trip in the morning and was joined by Mr. Thornbeck at noon. Towards evening they made their way to Baxter's Creek, which is about one mile this side of Hales' Bridge, and while paddling about met with the accident which caused the death of Mr. Peters. But for the timely assistance of the Stewart brothers, his companion might also have perished.

The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon from the late residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

TEMPORARY COOLER WANTED DURING POLICE STATOIN CHANGES

The Chief of Police is looking for a place wherein to lock prisoners, while the improvements to the Police Station building are being carried on. The difficulty of securing such quarters was brought to the attention of the committee of the whole council who were in session last night. The Chief suggested renting the vacant store between the T. A. S. rooms and W. H. Hamilton's store for $25.00 a month, and placing the police cell cages there for the next three months during which period the station improvement work is under way.

Ald. Anderson thought they might use the old East City cell, but the distance was thought objectionable, neither can prisoners be placed in Castle Nesbitt, unless they have been remanded.

It was finally left for the chairman of the Property Committee, and the Mayor to arrange a suitable means of sheltering prisoners during the next three months.

BOTH CENTRAL AND KING EDWARD NINES WON OPENING GAMES IN SCHOOL LEAGUE

The boys of the public schools opened the junior series of games yesterday afternoon on their respective lots and great was the excitement. The youngsters have not as yet struck their pace as is evidenced by the healthy looking scores recorded.

There were three games, the best exhibition being at the King Edward grounds, where the homesters defeated the East City nine with a count of 12—5, after having carried the lead from the call of "play ball." The batteries were:

King Edward—Frost and Taylor.
East City—Anderson and Moffitt.
Benny Taylor was satisfactory as umpire.

CENTRALS' EASY WIN.

While the West Wards were billed as the entertainers of the Centrals, the game was played on the latter's grounds. Centrals had little difficulty in coming well to the front and closed with the tally 29—7 looking their way. Several clever stunts were performed, among them being outs by Fanning and Patterson.

Batteries — Centrals, Halpin and White; West Ward, Thompson and Flowers. Umpire, J. J. Thompson.

SOUTH CENTRALS WON.

It was anybody's game as the Queen Alexandras and South Centrals clashed on the former's grounds with Mr. Sarles umpiring. The Northerners obtained an early lead but were overtaken and the final figures read 38—37 against them. The pitchers were many and of varied fortunes, and the hits and runs came thick and fast.

While the batting was heavy in all three games, attempts to hit out the home run, and secure the Review prize of a glove, or pair of ball shoes proved unavailing.

BRICKLAYERS OUT AFTER AN INCREASED WAGE

Hamilton, May 2.—Between 450 and 500 bricklayers are now walking the streets here as a result of the strike which was declared Tuesday. The men are unable to get the 55c per hour scale demanded by the union.

The contractors held a meeting yesterday noon and decided to remain firm in their refusal of more money. It is understood that some of the contractors are willing to submit to arbitration, and the strike may be settled in this way soon.

The city's teamsters are also demanding an increase to 60 cents per hour.

Ruining the Fishing.

Federal interference has nearly destroyed Ontario's fisheries, according to Edwin Tinsley, Superintendent of Fish and Game for the province.

"There is urgent necessity," he says in his report, "if the fisheries of the province are to be perpetuated, for the removal at once and for all time of all interference during the close seasons with nature's perfect plan of reproduction. Close season should be applicable to the whole province, and no conditions or exigency should be an excuse for encroaching on the inadequate close seasons provided for by present regulations."

The superintendent calls attention to the wisdom of allowing only one deer instead of two to be killed by a hunter. Express companies in 1909 carried 3,923 deer and in 1910 only 2,468, a decrease of 1445.

Lakes and streams are so polluted that it is pure waste, he says, to dump spawn into such waters and expect those waters to be re-stocked. In fact a very small percentage of the fry from the hatcheries become mature fish.

Out of the Battle.

There is in existence a very modest man who, though now peacefully employed, has in his day seen fighting in many parts of the globe. His friends know this and lose no opportunity to draw him out anent his thrilling war adventures. But the veteran's modesty is such that his tales are more than likely to be colorless and disappointing. Once some of his friends cornered him and by artful subterfuges led the conversation straight up to a certain battle, in which, as they knew, the veteran had participated. In a moment of carelessness he allowed himself to be trapped into statements regarding that battle, whereupon, noting that he had warmed to the subject one of his friends suddenly said, "You were in that battle, weren't you?" "Y-yes," confessed the veteran, much embarassed. "Tell us about your experiences on that day," commanded one of the gathering. There was a breathless silence. The fighter saw there was no way out of it. "On that day," he began slowly, "at a conservtaive estimate"—all leaned forward eagerly—"I ran twelve miles."

CARNIVAL AT THE ROLLER RINK

A grand carnival will be held on Friday night, May 3rd, at the Brock street Roller rink. First class prizes in plenty have been hung out for the best and comic costumes, 'ladies', gents, girls, and boys, with a special prize for comic clown. The event promises to be a big success with loads of fun for all. The prizes are on exhibition at Warne's jewelry store, corner of Brock and George streets.

Algonquin National Park

The improvements being made in connection with the Highland Inn, situated in the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, 170 miles west of Ottawa, and 205 miles north of Toronto, on the Grand Trunk Railway System, are progressing and the addition of fifty more rooms to this hotel will be completed and ready for the reception of guests about June 1st. The accommodation of this popular Inn will when the annex is finished be for 200 guests. Situated 1,700 feet above the sea level the air is pure and invigorating and there are few places in Canada which offer such attractions to the summer resorter as those that are found in Algonquin Park.

Bright Liners on Athletic Topics

TEMPLIN'S CANADIAN LEAGUERS ARRIVE HERE

All the ball players reported last night with the exception of Deer, who will arrive soon. They are certainly a fine looking bunch of ball players and should bring this city into renewed baseball fame.

The list includes one southpaw, Harry Scull of Reading, Pa. Templin says he is a peach. All the pitchers have made good records in the different leagues in which they have worked. Although Templin has the smallest squad in the league, his boys are all seasoned and the weeding out will be easy proposition.

After yesterday's workout, pitcher Ned Bartlett said he was in the best of shape. He has about the same motion as Ashton, who appeared here last summer.

Benzie, from Hamilton, who will try for third sack with Earl Hartman of Attentown, is some batter. He knocked out some pretty drives at the practice yesterday. If he swings on them in the games the way he does in practice, there will be a lot balls take a trip to the brewery this summer.

R. A. Connolly of Newburgh, N.Y. is a fast fielder and covers a lot of ground. He plays at the initial sack and there will be keen competition between he and Frank Dolan, of Wilmington for that position.

Templin of course will play his usual position at second base.

Johnson, an old Peterboro boy, is trying for the outfield and is showing up well.

Practices are being held at the driving park morning and afternoon.

DIAMOND DUST FROM THE CIRCUIT

Conny Murphy has reformed. "No more alleged funny stuff for me," he says.

The Philadelphia Nationals got more money from the first gates this season in Boston than they received last season for their entire list of games at the Hub. A winning team makes a big difference.

Here is a funny one from the Ottawa Citizen:—Bill O'Hara, the Toronto outfielder is about due for the can. He is slowing up, his feet are in bad shape and he has fallen off in batting. O'Hara would make an ideal manager for any Canadian League club.

St. Thomas, May 2. — Manager Stewart of the Saints went to Battle Creek Saturday evening and is expected back to-night with two good pitchers for the local club.

Every day now every train is expected to bring in one or more players, and by the first of next week there will be a whole flock of them here. On Saturday Irwin, a big right hander from Loraine, Ohio dropped in ready to speed them over. Irwin has too considerable experience in the O. and P. League, now defunct. He is over six feet in height and built in proportion. He looks as if he could deliver the goods. The first practice will be held Tuesday morning at the athletic grounds.

Manager Templin and four of his men worked out yesterday at the Exhibition grounds. All the men showed up well. After the practice all took a half-mile run on the race track and then dressed and took the car for the hotel.

SPORT TALK

Chicago, May 2.—Jack Johnson, heavyweight champion, returned to Chicago last night from Pittsburg, where he was hurt in an automobile accident last week. Johnson is suffering slightly from his injured shoulder but does not believe it will interfere seriously with his training for the Jim Flynn match at Los Vegas, N.M., on July 4th. Johnson said he would begin light work to-day.

When Jack Johnson goes into the ring against Jim Flynn on July 4, it will be just two years since he has donned a glove in the ring. Many of the fight experts are of the opinion that Flynn has an even chance to beat the big negro. When John L. Sullivan fought Corbett he had been out of the ring for three years and everyone knows what happened. When Corbett fought Fitzsimmons in 1897, just three years had gone by since his last big fight, that with Charlie Mitchell, and he was just 30 years of age, while Johnson is now 34. Fitzsimmons can hardly be figured on—he was a fighting freak—but Jeffries is another proof that a man cannot retire from the ring and then "come back" in the same condition. Jeff had been out of the game for nearly six years. In the light of all this history it looks as if Flynn had a chance, but there is also the question of whether Jack had depreciated enough in the two years to give the Pueblo fireman a look-in.

GRAND DUCHESS MARIE.

Girl Ruler of the Smallest Independent State In Europe.

By the death of William Alexander, Grand Duke of Luxemburg, which occurred recently, a demure young woman not yet 18, becomes sovereign of that little principality. She is the late ruler's eldest daughter, the Grand Duchess Marie. Luxemburg is a state of 998 square miles in the angle where Germany, France and Belgium meet. It has about 250,000 people. From time immemorial it has been an appanage of the House of Nassau. It was therefore virtually part of Holland, though separated from it until the death of Queen Wilhelmina's father in 1890. Then it followed the male line to the father of the grand duke just dead. In 1907 the succession in the female line was instituted by a family statute.

At a time, some years ago, when it seemed likely that Queen Wilhelmina of Holland would be childless, she designated this young grand duchess as heir to the throne of the Netherlands and was about to ask the Dutch states general to pass the necessary legislation to his end. Shortly afterward, however, the hopes of the Dutch people for a direct heir to the throne were gratified by the birth of the little Princess Juliana.

The grand duchess is described as an unusually pretty girl, impatient of advice, quick-tempered and impulsive—characteristics which greatly displease those royal busy-bodies who are already occupied in selecting for her a suitable husband. She frankly says that she doesn't thank them for their pains and is quite capable of picking out her own husband. Only her own inclinations will guide her in the matter, asserts this independent little autocrat. In assuming the reins of government, Grand Duchess Marie becomes the mistress of a fortune of $50,000,000, one which renders her entirely independent of her civil list of some $40,000 a year from Luxemburg.

Signs of Spring.

Mothers mending pockets,
Sisters trying to sew,
Lest the "taws" and "glassies"
Through the corners go;
Swarming all the sidewalks,
Big round "bunnies" deep,
Where the rolling marbles
Swift to cover creep.

Little hived up dollies
Out to take the air;
Merry hoops a-rolling,
Zigzag, here and there;
Children saying "Pepper"
Fast as rope can swing—
By these signs of springtime
You may know 'tis spring.

The Fascinating Art of Molding In Putty.

ARTISTIC COOKING UTENSILS.

Novel Dainties to Serve With Afternoon Tea—The Girl at the Matinee. Spring Hats of Taffeta With Rolling Brims Are the Smartest Models.

My Dear Elsa—I have had so much pleasure doing putty work lately that I want to tell you all about how this fascinating handicraft is accomplished. First of all you get 10 cents' worth of putty and have ready the article you want to decorate. My maiden attempt was an earthenware jug, which I decorated with fancy bits of china which had been previously broken. Any other bright and pretty bits of material may be used. Even colored buttons may be utilized for this purpose.

Work the putty a little in your hands to make it soft, then press it upon the jug, covering it evenly, a little at a time, making the covering about half an inch thick. Into this you press while the putty is still soft the bits of glass, china or buttons which you have selected to ornament your masterpiece. Keep on in this manner until the entire jug is covered. A jug that I have just finished has beads pressed in thickly between the china and glass, and the effect is charming. But in doing putty work you must be sure that all the decorations are close together, so all possibility of a space between the ornaments is averted. The finished work must be set away for at least four weeks to get thoroughly dry. Now, when the surface is dry beyond a doubt you may if you wish gild the entire article. As the gilt will wear off after a few months a fresh application will be necessary from time to time.

In connection with bric-a-brac a girl I know who lives in a studio where there is no provision for housekeeping utensils has picked up the most artistic and at the same time useful cooking utensils that serve as ornaments on the shelves and rails of the room when they are not in use. There are the most attractive bowls of all sizes and descriptions covered and uncovered, jugs and mugs. When these really artistic potteries are matched up in odd china—cups, saucers and plates—they are very effective for the purpose of ornament as well as for actual use. When shopping recently with this artistic friend of mine she picked up a charming blue and green covered pottery bowl, and when I asked its use she smilingly assured me that it was in turn vegetable and flower dish. "Of course," she added, "you have closet room for your dishes, but mine have to stand in sight all the time." By the way, this girl serves at her studio teas a delicious Scotch shortbread. The recipe comes directly from the Land o' Cakes, and I am sure you would like to have it, so I am sending you the formula as it was given to me and hope that you will enjoy the bread as much as I do:

Scotch Shortbread.

Four ounces of butter, five ounces of flour, two ounces of ground rice, two ounces of powdered sugar and a pinch of salt. Put all the ingredients on a baking board in separate heaps, knead the butter and sugar together until all the sugar is used, then knead in the ground rice next, then the flour slowly. After all the flour has been kneaded in and the dough is quite smooth make it into one or two rounds, using the rolling pin a little. Make the edges high and pinch them. Prick all over with a fork through and through and bake on a floured baking tin in a moderate oven for twenty minutes or longer, according to thickness. A piece of paper should be placed under the shortbread when it is cooked in a gas oven. Cool the shortbread for a few minutes on the tin before lifting it. For afternoon tea shortbread roll out the dough a little thinner and cut with a fancy cutter.

You say, dear, that fancy cakes for afternoon tea can be bought so cheaply that it is hardly worth while to bother making them, but the baker does not exist this side of bonny Scotland who can turn out anything as toothsome as this shortbread. Very delectable little cakes, though, are made with plain white cake made by any preferred receipe and baked in shallow pans and cut while warm into squares, oblongs, triangles, etc. These shapes are dipped either in chocolate or maple fondant and are then heavily sprinkled with chopped nuts.

What are the salient features of spring millinery, you asked me, Elsa? Well, dear, you can put anything in the way of a hat on your pretty little head and be modish if it is small in size and flexible in composition and has taffeta silk somewhere in its cosmos. Yes, taffeta's going to be the fashionable slogan this season both for costumes and headgear, but it is not the taffeta of other days, that unyielding and stiff stuff that could never be induced to take graceful lines and curves. The characteristic of the new taffeta is that of a soft, pliable fabric that is a joy to make into bows and hat crowns.

Apropos of flexibility, at the matinee yesterday a young girl astonished her mother by disposing of her outdoor belongings in a most unusual fashion. Into her big muff were nonchalantly stowed her flexible little hat, fur neckpiece, pocketbook and, much against her mother's wishes, a pair of sandals. When the storage business was over the young hopeful smilingly looked at

It's usually much easier for a man's fool friends to get the best of him than it is for his enemies.

A Hermit for Five Years

WHAT would make the greatest impression on a man who had been shut away from human intercourse and denied the use of newspapers for five years—what would most forcibly attract his attention—on regaining the society of his fellowmen?

"Well," you say, "he is fairly certain to be interested in learning whether there's been a change of Government."

True, and probably he will show mild excitement if you can tell him there's been a big war in Europe. But it won't be until you get down to a recital of things that come closer to him, personally, that you'll bring him to his feet with eager questioning.

Tell him a mighty empire has fallen, and—so long as it isn't his empire—a drop curtain of highly embroidered indifference will mask his face.

But tell him the automobile has been so simplified that he can now buy one for the price of a horse and buggy, and he'll promptly bombard you with questions.

A revolution in China may be a world event, but it wouldn't mean as much to him as the perfecting of a shaving apparatus that would do away with the necessity of purchasing new blades or honing old ones.

If you had been a hermit for the past five years, the news of an earthquake in San Francisco wouldn't really mean so much to you as the information that you can now hear any famous opera singer in your own home at a cost of a few cents per hour.

Which is only another way of saying that the phonograph is of more personal interest than an earthquake.

You see how it is: Newspapers carry a "news of merchandise" that is just as interesting, just as vital, as the "news of events" which the editors gather for us.

And, since this "news of merchandise" finds its only expression in the form of Advertising, must we not admit that the Advertising columns are quite as worthy of our serious attention as the scariest "scare head" or the most ponderous editorial?

Shut your eyes to Advertising—and you shut out the news of commercial progress and development—the news of things that make life worth the living.

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any recognized Canadian advertising agency, or the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503 Lumsden Bldg., Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write if interested.

Slim Chances For Her.

A missionary who was making his way through a backwoods region came upon an old woman sitting outside the cabin. He entered upon a religious talk and finally asked her if she didn't know there was a day of judgment coming.

"Why, no," said the old lady. "I hadn't heard o' that. Won't there be mor'n one day?"

"No, my friend; only one day," was the reply.

"Well, then," she mused, "I don't reckon I can get to go, for we've only got one mule, and John always has to go everywhere first."

Moliere and the Doctor.

Moliere had written many plays to ridicule doctors and medicine. Louis XIV. heard that the author had, however, a doctor at his service since he became famous and well to do, so the king one day called upon Moliere and said to him:

"I have heard, Moliere, that you have a physician. What is he doing to you?"

"Sire," answered the author of the Malade Imaginaire, "we chat together, he writes prescriptions for me, I don't take them, and I am cured!"

WHY A WATCH WEARS OUT

Neglect is responsible for most Watches going wrong.— A Watch should be thoroughly overhauled, at least once a year. Dust collecting in a Watch causes it to run dry, the grit will then wear away the delicate bearings. If you own a good watch, better be on the safe side — Bring it to our Repair Department where it will receive Skilled Attention.

CLEVER WORK BY ARTISTS AT CONSERVATORY

The recital given in the Conservatory Hall last night by Wallace A. Sault, under the auspices of the Canadian General Electric A.F.C. was favored with a good attendance.

Wallace A. Sault as an entertainer is certainly capable of reproducing the voice and manner of any imaginable character in either humorous or serious selections with the greatest accuracy and finesse.

He appeared to equal advantage as a coster in the gallery of the theatre, as the Schoolmaster, Mr. Squeers, from Dickens, and in a recital from Shakespeare's Henry VIII., the Fall of Cardinal Wolsley. In each case the audience was naturally delighted with the presentation, and he was forced to respond to numerous encores.

Mr. Fred Race, of Toronto, presided at the piano for all of Mr. Sault's sketches, and performed his duties in a manner that augmented materially the effect of the varied sketches.

Miss E. Pearl Brock, whose charming singing is already well known in this city, and Master W. S. Wilson, the local boy violin artist, assisted in the recital, and more pleasing forms of music could hardly be desired.

Miss Brock's voice captured the audience in the first selection, and the hearty applause which greeted her each time she appeared was an evident indication of how her singing was enjoyed. Miss Rannie accompanied Miss Brock on the piano, her expression on the piano lending an added charm to the selections.

Master W. S. Wilson seemed to be perfectly familiar with every tone and note that his instrument could possibly give out, and his rendering of some difficult selections was almost faultless. Miss Julia Choate was in charge of the piano accompaniment, and as is always the case with violin solos, the piano responding to the accurate touch of Miss Choate, made the presentation complete.

TESTIMONY MEETING AT FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST

The members of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, were somewhat inspired last night in the testimony meeting, through greetings from New York City. There were four Christian Scientists on the Titanic, when she received the fatal blow from the iceberg, all of whom were rescued. It is said they consider their survival most miraculous, and that their experience is another proof of the frailty of material means, and skill of mortal man. They one and all realize that God's Spirit, in whom they put their trust, is greater than the iceberg, or the mighty Atlantic, and a safer refuge than even the great Titanic, the pride of human skill.

While some of them have suffered since from the experience, they rejoice that they have been spared to work a little longer in this plane of consciousness for the "Giver of every good and perfect gift," who saith to the proud wave, "thus far and no farther." "Who holdeth the winds in His fist." The scripture lesson last night was from Matt. 14, 22 to 36. Jesus proving the power of the law of scriptural science over the so called laws of material science or matter.

WEDDING BELLS

HENDERSON—GRAHAM.

The marriage of Miss Helen Seymour Graham, daughter of Mrs. Alexander C. Graham, of Powell avenue, Rosedale, to Mr. Clifford Douglas Henderson, son of the Rev. G. W. and Mrs. Henderson, of Peterborough, was solemnized at the home of the bride's mother at three o'clock this afternoon. The ceremony was performed by the groom's father, in the drawing room, which was prettily decorated with pink roses, carnations, palms and ferns, Miss Jessie Allen playing the wedding marches. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. W. J. Taylor, of Chicago, wore a simple gown of white satin and Chantilly lace trimmed with seed pearls. Her tulle veil was arranged off her face and held in place by a coronet of orange blossom. She carried a shower of roses and lily of the valley, and wore the groom's gift, a gold watch bracelet. Miss Helen Paul attended her cousin as maid of honor and wore a gown of pale satin veiled in hand painted chiffon, and mob cap of blue dew drop net. She carried pink roses and forget-me-nots, and wore the groom's gift, a gold bracelet. Mr. Robert W. Steele acted as best man and received a silver mounted cane from the groom. After the ceremony Mrs. Graham, who was wearing king's blue satin and black lace, with bouquet of lily of the valley, held a reception, the groom's mother from Peterborough being present. Later on the bride and groom left for a trip to New York, the bride travelling in a smart tan tailor-made suit with hat to match.—Toronto News.

Fire Department

The fire brigade had a call this morning at 10.20 o'clock to a chimney fire at the house of Mr. E. Doxsee, Bolivar street.

Yesterday afternoon Fireman Munden captured a runaway, which, attached to a small delivery wagon, dashed down Simcoe to Aylmer street. In turning up Aylmer the horse slipped, but rising again, it sprinted towards Hunter street. Fireman Munden caught the animal before it went very far.

OTONABEE AND MONAGHAN TOWNSHIPS BRING THEIR GUNS TO BEAR UPON THE CITY

Want Stop Put to the Pollution of Otonabee River by Sewage From the City — Chief Health Officer Present at Meeting and Suggests a Sedimentation Tank 2,000,000 Gallons of Sewage Goes Into River Every 24 Hours He Says.

The residents of Otonabee and Monaghan Townships have decided that they will no longer put up with the emptying of the sewage of the city into the Otonabee river, and in a plain, but polite communication from the firm of Peck, Kerr & McElderry have notified the Mayor and Council to that effect. This letter was responsible for a meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council last evening, when the matter was thoroughly reviewed and the Council had the truth forced home that the township residents were right in their demands, and that the draining of sewage into the river is a violation of the Act of the Provincial Board of Health.

The question is one that has been hanging fire with the council for some time. It has been discussed by by them before, but nothing done, with the result that now the townships have united, and issued an injunction against the city. Mr E. A. Peck, M.P.P., is the solicitor for the townships.

HEALTH OFFICER PRESENT.

The Council last evening, however, had with them Dr. J. W. McCullough, Chief Medical Health Officer of Ontario. The latter had not been over the ground at the place where the sewer empties into the river, but told the committee that he was aware of the conditions, through their having been presented to the Provincial Board of Health. He had been informed that the townships had decided to stop it.

On the arrival of the Health Officer, who was detained somewhat, he was introduced by Mayor Bradburn to the various councillors, after which the Mayor outlined to him just what the city's condition was.

He was then asked if the city would be allowed to let the sewer remain as it is.

FACTS IN FIGURES.

Dr. McCullough after reflecting carefully, stated that, while he was unaware of what the townships may do, yet his opinion was that they could compel the city to stop putting sewage into the Otonabee river. Continuing he surprised the committee by asking if they were aware that 2,000,000 gallons of sewage poured into the Otonabee every twenty-four hours.

Mayor Bradburn— Is the river being polluted to any great extent?

Dr McCullough—Yes, I think so. Think of that amount of foul matter going into the water continually. A septic tank will get rid of only about 50 per cent. of the bacteria, which would not be sufficient. The Medical Health Officer's report shows that you have water there that is infected with sewage matter, so that a septic tank would not be satisfactory, and the sewer would continue to be a nuisance.

WHAT IS NEEDED.

Dr. McCullough went on to explain that what the city should secure and establish is a sedimentation, or Imhoff tank. This affair is being placed in Toronto at the present time to overcome conditions almost identical with what are being encountered in Peterborough. The city of Guelph has one installed also, which is now giving their city thorough satisfaction. This sedimentation tank is an arrangement which although rather expensive, gives much satisfaction when properly constructed and looked after that the sewage matter is sifted and filtered ere it enters the river, and no disagreeable results follow. A treatment of chloridation may be used after this filtering which renders the water almost as pure as the river water itself. A certain amount of pumping would be required at the filtration tank, but the amount depended largely upon the grade or elevation of the land upon which the tank and filter beds were constructed.

Ald Gordon asked for an approximate cost of such an arrangement, but Dr. McCullough replied that not being familiar with cost prices, he would prefer the city's engineer to supply that information.

Other places where Imhoff tanks and filter beds were being used were North Toronto, Weston and Carleton Place.

ALL MUST STOP.

"All towns in Ontario," said Dr. McCullough, "will have to stop within a reasonable time, the emptying of sewage into the river."

Asked how much land would be required in Peterborough to construct a tank and filter beds, Dr. McCullough considered about four acres sufficient. The filter beds require the most land.

Mayor Bradburn—Is it in the interests of the Government to have these cities refrain from emptying their sewage into rivers?

Dr. McCullough — The counties would compel you, even if the Provincial Board of Health did not. If it is not compelled, all the good waterways of Canada will be destroyed as they are largely in the United States. Toronto continued doing it, and now they have had to pay $750,000 for proper sewage disposal.

Ald. Gordon suggested appointing a committee to investigate the cost and possibility of installing a system of sedimentation in Peterborough.

Dr. McCullough, however, said that what the city should do to obtain any degree of satisfaction, was to first engage a competent engineer who would report on exactly what the city required.

"This is getting to be a big city," he said, "and you will never obtain satisfaction until you get a better system. Under the rules of the Provincial Board of Health, and if you find that such a system is necessary for health purposes, you are not required to go to the people with a by-law for the money to build." In connection with this he further explained that the Provincial Board of Health has precedence over everything where the public health is concerned. He would guarantee that if such a system as he had explained was adopted, and worked satisfactorily after being passed by the Provincial Board, that no trouble would be encountered from the township people. In regard to all sewer construction work, a local improvement clause added to the Health Act lately requires all such work to have the approval of the Provincial Board of Health, if it is payable by debentures, else the Debenture Board will not accept the debentures.

After further general discussion on the subject, Dr. McCullough expressed his willingness to 'phone to an engineer in Toronto, and he, himself, the Mayor, the City Clerk and the Board of Health's engineer would drive down and inspect the grounds and hear what the engineer had to say on the matter this afternoon. His kind offer was gladly accepted, only the council decided they would all like to go down and see and hear to their general enlightenment.

All the aldermen were present at the meeting save Ald. Graham.

THE LETTER.

The following is a copy of the letter forwarded to the city clerk by Peck, Kerr & McElderry, acting on behalf of the township residents, who object to the city's sewage being poured into the Otonabee river:

S. R. Armstrong,
City Clerk,
Peterborough:

Dear Sir,—We have been instructed by the townships of Otonabee, North Monaghan and South Monaghan, to apply for an injunction to restrain the city from further pollution of the river Otonabee by the pouring of the city sewage into the river. We beg to remind you that the establishment of the present sewage system by the city was objected to by these townships at the time of the construction, and that it was then understood that the arrangement would be merely a temporary one.

Frequently from time to time the present unsatisfactory condition of affairs has been brought to the attention of the city by our clients, and by residents of these townships, without any steps whatever, however, being taken by the city to remedy the evil complained of. The matter has also received the attention of the Provincial Board of Health, and letters from that Board were addressed to you on the subject on August 22nd last, and on September 15th last. To these communications we understand no reply has been made. The present condition of affairs offers a very serious menace to the health of the community, and under these circumstances our instructions are to take immediate steps to enjoin the city from further using the river for the above purpose.

Yours truly,
PECK, KERR & McELDERRY.

ALDERVILLE INDIAN FINED $24,10 UNDER AMENDED LIQUOR ACT; WAS DRUNK IN LOCAL OPTION TOWN

Havelock Standard.

The first conviction under the new amendment to the Liquor Act was recorded here on Thursday last, when Wm. Smoke, an Alderville Indian, was fined $24.10, for being intoxicated in a public place in a local option municipality. Smoke, who has been trapping muskrats at Mud Lake, journeyed to Peterborough on Wednesday morning with a bundle of fur. He came back on the noon train with a "jag" and a bottle of liquor, which he stated he purchased from two strangers on the train. In company with a local anti-local optionist, the bottle was soon empty and the "jag" increased to a pronounced "drunk." License Inspector Williams crossed his trail and escorted him into camp, cell No. 1, where he sobered up for appearance before Magistrates Mathison and Joyce on Thursday forenoon. He pleaded guilty to the charge of intoxication and was fined the minimum amount under the new amendment to the Act, $20.00 and costs, which he managed to scrape up from various acquaintances about town. Their Worships and the Inspector were of the opinion that Smoke purchased the "joy water" in Peterborough, and although threatened with a further fine of $20.00 and costs for offering to buy liquor from an unlicensed person, the red man persisted in his story that he obtained it on the train. This conviction should be a warning to others not to get

FEW HINTS TO HELP SOLVE THE FARMER'S LABOR QUESTION

The Review is in receipt of the following letter which fully explains itself:

Realizing that one of the most urgent needs of the farmers of our Province is an adequate supply of farm labor, the Colonization Branch has been endeavoring to meet that demand by bringing men from Great Britain and Ireland and placing them with farmers in this Province. During the past few years several thousand been brought out and placed in this way. Instead, however, of the demand lessening, it seems to be increasing. Our observation and experience convince us that while there may be many explanations of this regrettable fact, the one outstanding reason is the practice of employing men for six or eight months of the year and then turning them out to find situations elsewhere for the balance of their time. This works out in such a way that the men who have been employed on the farms now seem to gravitate to towns and cities in the winter months and remain there, with the result that the farmer is compelled to start over again the next spring in his efforts to secure help.

Having regard to these facts, I beg to make the following suggestions, the adoption of which we are satisfied would go a long way towards the stringency which exists at the present time:

1. First and foremost, arrange to employ a man by the year. We have found that the farmer who employs his help by the year, especially if he is able to supply a house and a small piece of land, is the farmer who has the least trouble over the help problem. It is the better way for the man as well as for the farmer. If you feel your work does not warrant the employment of a man the year round, you might be well advised to consider the question of taking up a few branches of farm work, handling additional live stock, and in this way we feel satisfied you would more than make up the extra cost of the help.

2. Do not be too exacting about getting an experienced man. Experienced farm laborers are rare at the present time, as there is a large demand for them in the Old Country as well as on this side. If you take an experienced man, recognizing that he is unfamiliar with the conditions and methods in this country, and devote a little attention to training him for a few months, you will find, in nine cases out of ten, that he will prove very useful to you. Being reasonably generous in the matter of treatment and wages is essential if hired help is to be retained.

We beg to submit these suggestions to the farmers of the Province, feeling satisfied that if they are acted upon, the results will redound to the personal advantage of the farmer as well as to the prosperity of the Province.

Yours truly,
H. A. MACDONALD.

MEMORIAL TO CARTIER.

Montreal Men Head Movement to Honor Statesman.

A national movement is now under way in Canada to erect a monument to the late Sir George Etienne Cartier, Bart, who was one of the Fathers of Confederation and an able lieutenant of the late Sir John A. Macdonald, G.C.B., first Prime Minister of the Dominion of Canada.

The memorial, it is expected, will cost in the neighborhood of $100,000, and will be erected at the base of Mount Royal, so named by Jacques Cartier, the intrepid French explorer who discovered Stadacona (Quebec) and Hochelaga (Montreal), and to whose family Sir George is said to have belonged.

Subscriptions will be taken up all over Canada to defray the cost of the monument, which promises to be one of the largest and best in Canada.

Sir George passed away in London, on May 20, 1873, two days before the date set for his return to Canada. He had been ill for some time and had gone to London to seek expert medical assistance.

Cartier's activities cover the political period extending from 1844 to 1872, that is to say, twenty-eight years. That period was eventful. It was the following and the end of the Union of the Canadas and the beginning of confederation, which was to soon comprise about the whole of British North America from ocean to ocean. This means that it witnessed many changes, many transformations, many struggles. The union was full of danger for us: Cartier, continuing the work of Lafontaine, Morin and Tache, made it turn to our advantage. He built the confederation which, without him, could never have been accomplished, to protect our rights and our institutions, meanwhile founding a new nation.

The name of Cartier is attached to all the greatest political events of that important period.

Among others, let us mention the judiciary decentralization, the abolition of the seignorial tenure, the choice of Ottawa as the capital, the construction of the Montreal and Portland and of the Grand Trunk Railway, and of the Victoria bridge, the codification of the civil laws and of civil procedure, the application of the French laws to the Eastern Townships, the modification of criminal laws, the Act of Municipalities of Lower Canada, the law concerning the registration offices, the organization of our system of public instruction, the foundation of normal schools, the creation of a line of oceanic steamships, the improvement and deepening of the Saint Lawrence river, the digging of canals, the confederation of the provinces of British North America, the acquisition of the Northwest Territories, the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, according to Robinson's draught, the establishment of the Province of Manitoba, the entrance of British Columbia into confederation, the organization of our military service, the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, etc., etc.

More than one of these measures would be sufficient to immortalize the name and memory of Cartier. If Napoleon had not been such a celebrated warrior, could he have claimed a greater fame than that of being the author of the civil code of France? To end his glorious career, does Gladstone seek more than the settlement of the eternal Irish question, which after all, is only a struggle for the possession of the soil? Cartier was at the same time a legislator, a founder of constitutions and a pacific conqueror. A simple stroke of his pen added to his country regions as broad as empires.

The Pride of the Poor.

At the present stage of sociology no onlooker need doubt this New York Sun story of the "might have beens" of a great city:

So many men to whom the city missionary had given money for a night's lodging had expressed a preference for a certain east side lodging house that he wondered what constituted its particular attraction.

"It makes us feel self respecting," the men said when questioned.

So far as the missionary could see it was a typical lodging house, whose inducements to self respect were not apparent to the ordinary eye. He appealed to the manager. By what method did he fan the fires of self respect in his guests?

The manager pointed to a sign above his desk—"Gentlemen Are Requested to Leave Their Valuables With the Clerk."

THE TOWN OF HELLERAN

ANYTHING UGLY IS STRICTLY FORBIDDEN THERE.

Beautiful Town Where German Workmen Have Artistic Little Homes and Fine Gardens Is a Model Community For All Europe—It Is In Saxony and Its People Work In a Great Craftsman Factory.

Work, act and live rhythmically if you wish to do away with friction and strife. At least, that is the argument maintained by a colony of 3,000 thinking men and women who have constructed and are managing with great success one of the queerest little cities in the world. The town, which is called Hellerau, is located in Saxony, Germany, and is the conception of Karl Schmidt, manager and part owner of one of the biggest handicraft factories in that country. Some of the greatest architects in the world give it as their opinion that Hellerau is a model city, perfect in every detail. Karl Schmidt's idea is simply this—employes as well as managers of big concerns are entitled to recognition as individuals. Being that rarest of combinations, a dreamer and a man of keen business ability he worked out, after much thought and investigation, a scheme whereby the men and women employed in his big Dresden factory could either build for themselves or rent neat, charming little houses from the Land Improvement Co., of which they might become members. There is nothing obligatory about this plan and there is nothing exclusive, for any one, whether he is employed in the factory or not, may live there, and the foreman is as likely as not to have his house built right next to the apprentice's. At the corner of one street stands the home of one of the assistant managers; next to him lives a seamstress with her two little children in their four-room house. But as everything is built in keeping with everything else in the place and as every inhabitant is tolerated only when on good behavior there is nothing disturbing about this fact.

But to return to the scheme upon which Hellerau is organized. Karl Schmidt was able to find a tract of about 3,750 acres within 25 minutes' trolley ride from Dresden which he bought at a low price. With a capitalization of 300,000 marks, or $150,000, he founded a Garden City Association, which should parcel off the land for building purposes to factories and individuals, but especially to a co-operative building association which should undertake the erection and maintenance of the workmen's houses. The Land Insurance Co. of Saxony was induced to take the first mortgage at three and one-third per cent. interest, with an annual amortization of one per cent., and a great many people in and about Dresden were found eager to take shares—almost every one in Germany has a share in some co-operative building association or company of one sort or another.

The most important rule governing both companies is that no land shall ever pass out of their possession, that it may be leased for an indefinite time to individuals who have shares in the company, but that these same stockholders shall never receive more than four per cent. on the capital they have invested. The surplus is to be used for objects of general ability, such as a library, a theatre, a school or a public gymnasium.

At the end of the second year the treasurer reported a surplus of a few hundred marks, besides a contribution for the sinking fund and the part payment on the debt for the borrowed capital. The officers of the company figure out that at the present rate they will have cleared themselves of all debts by the year 1920 and have a surplus of 2,500,000 marks in the reserve fund. The co-operative building association has some 419 members who together own 454 shares at 200 marks each. They have built some 140 little houses which are rented at an average of 342 marks, which is calculated to equal five and one-half per cent. of the value of land improved and building.

So much for the co-operation, but what about the rhythm? One of the biggest buildings in the town is occupied by the Dalcroze School of Rhythmical Gymnastics. M. Jacques Dalcroze is a Swiss who believes in the power of rhythmical living and who has converted many thousands to his way of thinking. All the children and all the grown-ups in Hellerau attend his classes and all live a "rhythmic life." Dancing and calisthenics are part of every day's program in the homes and every evening there are gatherings at the gymnasium where even the aged trip the light fantastic with a grace and agility one associates only with the young. But it is really from an architectural standpoint that this little city is more remarkable and most charming. There are not straight streets, no narraw alleys, but winding roads and open places at irregular intervals to supply equal amounts of air and light to each and every building on that street.

The market place of Hellerau is not finished, but there is going to be a very strict committee of censors in charge of the wares to be sold in those shops.

Hellerau also lays claim to being a model town in matters politic, as it has reduced all government to the simplest form—a democracy. At stated times all the stockholders of the community meet in assembly to air their views, to make their criticisms, to offer suggestions and to pass their laws. In the meantime the business affairs and the executive work are left in the hands of committee, appointed by the members, which serve only during good behavior and good service. In other words, the referendum and the recall, commission government and all the other fancy inventions of modern government are in full swing there, though under the simple guise of direct government.

As Karl Schmidt puts it, "There is nothing there that is not useful and not beautiful."

One Thing They Won't Stand For.

Speaking to a Chinese gentleman the other day an Englishman asked him if the Chinese ladies will emulate the men and go in for western headgear. In reply he beamed a smile most child-like and bland.

Pressed for something more definite, he remarked: "Did you not know that it is a well-known fact among the Chinese that the reason so many European husbands look harassed and care-ridden and the further reason why so many of your young men refrain from marriage is this very question of millinery? Ladies' hats cost so much that they spell ruin and so we Chinese have told our women folk that we absolutely forbid them to follow western fashions in this regard, whatever they may do in other directions."

The Smallest Republic.

The smallest republic in the world without contradiction is that of Tavolara, a little island situated about a dozen kilometers (seven and a half miles) from Sardinia. It is a little more than a mile in length and has a population of fifty-five. The sovereignty of the island was accorded in 1836 by King Charles Albert to the Bartoleoni family. Up to 1882 Paul I. reigned peaceably over his litte island kingdom, but at his death the islanders proclaimed a republic. By the constitution of the republic the President is elected for ten years, and women exercise the franchise.

Our New Wheat.

It is not generally known says a Dominion report, that the thousand dollar prize awarded in New York City recently for the best wheat grown on the North American Continent, which was secured by a Saskatchewan farmer, was won by Marquis wheat. Marquis wheat is one of a number of varieties which has been produced at the Government experimental farm at Ottawa by a crossing of Red Fife with various imported wheats of early ripening habit. The early maturing parent of Marquis was Hard Red Calcutta, obtained from India. It was isolated by Dr. Saunders, the Dominion cerealist, by selection, in 1903. After being grown for three years at Ottawa, baking tests were made from the crop of 1906, which showed that Marquis stands in the first rank for baking strength. This wheat was then transferred to the experimental farm at Indian Head for test under prairie conditions, where from larger tests in the field Marquis gave 42 bushels per acre, while in 1909 and 1910 five-acre lots at Indian Head yielded more than 53 bushels an acre.

The C.P.R. fleet yesterday morning sailed from Owen Sound for Port McNicoll, the new steamship headquarters. The squadron was given a good send off, over one thousand citizens being at the dock to bid them farewell.

Following an attack of pneumonia the death occurred at Vancouver on Tuesday of James Oborne, formerly superintendent of the Toronto division of the C.P.R. and at the time of his death superintendent of the Pacific division.

Chatham's population is placed at 11,333.

BALFOUR ASSAILS BILL; FORMER LEADER TAKES PART IN HOME RULE DEBATE

He Says It Has Not a Germ of Finality to It and Sir Edward Grey Rejoins That It Is a Step In a Very Necessary Devolution If the Imperial Parliament Was to Be Useful at All—Couldn't Stand in Way.

London, May 3.—A. J. Balfour and Sir Edward Grey held the stage at to-day's debate on the home rule bill in the House of Commons.

The former Premier showed little of his old-time fire, and his speech was reminiscent of many heard before. He complained that the bill did not contain even a germ of finality, and that its adoption would work a great injury to the representative institution of England, while creating in Ireland an assembly which no Irishman could regard with pride or respect.

The powers of the Irish Parliament would be so hampered, he said, that good men would refuse to serve in it. Every successful federal system, he declared, had been built up on a desire of the separate parts for a closer unity, but the Government was pursuing an opposite course, cutting up the United Kingdom and creating fiscal divisions.

Sir Edward Grey contended that the constitution was becoming increasingly unworkable, and that devolution throughout the United Kingdom was necessary. The usefulness of the Imperial Parliament could not, the Foreign Secretary added, be sacrificed to the feelings of Ulster.

The Foreign Secretary admitted that the settlement provided in the bill was incomplete in some respects. The presence of 42 Irish members in the Imperial Parliament was an anomaly, but he did not mind that, because he believed that it would precipitate further arrangements which, while not endangering imperial unity, would relieve the different parts of the United Kingdom.

If Ulster defied the solution the Government proposed, or made it impossible, some other solution would have to be found which would relieve the overburdened House of Commons of the present monstrous congestion of business and put the control of Irish affairs in Irish hands.

Lord Charles Beresford, in a breezy speech, declared that the Irish question was essentially a land question, and the only way to pacify Ireland was to continue the present land purchase system and "do away with the lord-lieutenant and all that sham and rotten court."

The Right Hon. Ronald C. Munro-Ferguson supported the bill, because it was the first step toward a complete policy of Parliamentary devolution and paved the way for self-government in Scotland. Mr. Munro-Ferguson, who represents Leith burgs, has been an ardent supporter of devolution.

Daniel D. Sheehan, representing the mid-division of Cork, a labor advocate and independent Nationalist, who favors the policy of conciliation as applied to Irish politics, approved the principle of the bill, but said it placed too many restrictions on Irish financial freedom. He maintained that the Irish Parliament should be given full powers with respect to the raising of revenue in Ireland and all expenditures in Ireland.

BRITISH TITANIC FUND $1,600,000

London, May 3.—The British Titanic funds amount to approximately $1,600,000. A conference was held at the Mansion House yesterday to arrange for its distribution. It was decided to extend immediately the relief to widows and bereaved families of the members of the crew, pending the organization of a committee to undertake the administration of the fund. The committee will include the Lord Mayor, the Earl of Derby and the governor of the Bank of England.

Retail Merchants' Officers.

Montreal, May 3.—The eighth annual convention of the Dominion Board of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada, which was held this year in Montreal, has just closed.

The following Dominion officers were elected for the year: President, P. J. Cote, Quebec; first vice-president, A. Weseloch, Berlin; second vice-president, W. V. Bolvin, Montreal; treasurer, J. A. Beudry, Montreal; secretary, E. M. Trowern, Toronto; auditor, J. G. Watson, Montreal.

JUDGE MABEE OPERATED ON SECOND TIME

Special to the Review.

Toronto, May 3.—It was found necessary this morning to perform a second operation for appendicitis upon Judge Mabee, chairman of the Railway Commission. It was of course of a serious nature, but while he is in a critical condition, there is good prospects that he will pull through.

Assembly on June 5.

Toronto, May 3.—Rev. Dr. Somerville is issuing the call for the Presbyterian General Assembly. It will meet at Edmonton on Wednesday evening, June 5, under the moderatorship of Rev. R. P. McKay, D.D., Toronto.

The financial reports will show a substantial increase in the givings for the assembly's funds, but it is doubtful if the actual million dollars aimed at will be quite reached.

The budget for the year 1912-13 will be on an estimated aggregate revenue of $1,000,000 an increase of $100,000.

In view of the enthusiasm created by the laymen's movement the estimates for the present year were on a lavish scale. While the contributions were larger than before, they did not warrant the exaggerated anticipations and a cut of $50,000 has been made in this year's foreign mission estimates.

Fell Three Storeys.

Toronto, May 3.—Fall from a third storey window in the Princess Hotel, 252 East King street, about midnight, David Nicholson, a Scotchman, aged 25 years, was probably fatally injured. He was taken to St. Michael's Hospital in an unconscious condition, and it is thought that his skull is fractured. His wrist was broken and his face badly lacerated.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE TO STEP OUT

Rumor is Semi-Officially Contradicted in London Papers.

Special To The Review

London, May 3—In this mornings' papers it is semi-officially announced that there is no foundation for the rumor that ambassador Bryce has been actually recalled from Washington embassy. It is also pointed out that his holidays began before Taft's letter in reference to Canadian reciprocity was published.

London, May 3.—Unionist members of the House of Commons are preparing to catechize the Government regarding what they characterize Ambassador Bryce's "treasonable act" in supporting the proposals made by President Taft in the matter of Canadian reciprocity, and as to whether the Government propose to recall the ambassador.

Arthur Shirley Benn is anxious to know if Mr. Bryce was aware that the object of the reciprocity was to make Canada an "adjunct of the United States"; if his acquaintance therein was not treasonable, and whether, in view of the published correspondence between President Taft and Theodore Roosevelt it is the intention of the Government to recall the Ambassador.

The Daily News last night gave special prominence to conjectures whether Mr. James Bryce's journey to Australia means he has been recalled. It points out that he left Washington apparently on the very day Taft published his letter to Roosevelt admitting reciprocity would make Canada only an adjunct of the U.S. "The fact is," declares The News, "Bryce has made himself impossible at Washington."

CHILDREN GO ASTRAY

Special to the Review.

Montreal, Que., May 3.—One hundred and forty-three children were lost or mislaid in the hurry of Montreal's annual moving day and found their way through various channels to the police station. Thirteen were still unclaimed this morning.

ASKS DAMAGES OF $50,000

New York, May 3.—Papers in the first suit for damages brought by a relative of a Titanic victim were filed in the Federal District Court here yesterday. Suit, in admiralty, is brought by Mrs. Louise Robins, widow of Victor Robins, Col. John Jacab Astor's valet, who lost his life when the Titanic sank, and is that in which the testimony of J. Bruce Ismay and officers of the sunken stteamer is desired. It charges negligence on the part of the Oceanic Steam Navigation Co., and asks for $50,000 damages and costs.

Now Mr. Justice Lennox.

Toronto, May 3.—Mr. Haughton Lennox, K.C., ex-M.P. for South Simcoe, was sworn in by Sir John Alexander Boyd, president of the high court of justice, yesterday morning, as a judge of the Supreme Court of Judicature and a justice of the High Court of Justice of Ontario, and took a seat in the Court of Appeal.

MAGNIFICENT CEREMONY MARKS DEDICATION OF NEW CAMPANILE

A most notable gathering attended the dedication of the new Campanile of St. Mark's, at Venice, to replace that which fell ten years ago. The whole city was gay with flags and bunting, and people came from miles to witness the magnificent spectacle attending the ceremonies. In the procession were many who rank high in State and Church, including the Duca di Genova and Cardinal Cavallari, Patriarch of Venice. The latter received an autograph rescript from the Pope blessing the Campanile and rejoicing at its resurrection. At the conclusion of the ceremonies two thousand carrier pigeons fluttered to the four points of the compass, each with a little note attached to its neck, to carry the glad tidings.

WARDEN PLATT TAKES HOLIDAY

Kingston Institution will be Officially Investigated.

Inspector Douglas Stewart of Ottawa Has Been Made Temporary Warden For a Month nad Warden Platt Is Taking a Holiday—Escapes of Prisoners Are To Be Looked Into—Murder Narrowly Averted.

Kingston, May 3.—The Government has stepped in to make an investigation regarding the working system in the penitentiary. Douglas Stewart, of Ottawa, one of the inspectors, has arrived here, and taken over the position of warden for a month to see how work at the big prison is carried out. Warden Platt has been given a month's leave of absence, and his resignation is looked for in that time. Some time ago he intimated his intention of resigning.

Some interesting developments are expected to result from the investigation which Inspector Stewart says will be most thorough.

That McNeil and his four fellow convicts, the western outlaws, had intended and hoped to kill Deputy Warden O'Leary during their manoeuvres, is the opinion of many of the penitentiary authorities, the judgment being based upon the attitude and mutterings of the prisoners. O'Leary was the officer in charge of the Stoney Mountain gang when they attempted to escape at Toronto while being transferred to Kingston. It is the duty of the deputy warden and chief keeper to inspect the isolation building every morning, and the quintette, knowing this, were awaiting their arrival. Fortunately for the deputy warden, inspection was not made as early as usual on this particular morning, or the gang might to-day be facing a murder charge.

TAIT TO SUCCEED CHAS. M. HAYS

Montreal, May 3.—Head officials of the Grand Trunk Railway here yesterday afternoon, when asked about a Toronto report that Sir Thomas Tait, the former commissioner of railways for Australia, is prominently mentioned as Mr. Hays' successor, said nothing would be known in this connection until Chairman Smithers arrived here from England next week.

Two Linemen Badly Hurt.

Kingston, May 3.—Falling from a telephone pole while at their work, about 5.30 p.m., two linemen, Chas. Hay, Kingston, and Peter Currier, Toronto, received terrible injuries. Currier will likely recover, but grave doubts are entertained for Hay.

King to Act as Umpire.

London, May 3.—The King will begin a review of the fleet of 125 vessels off Portland on Tuesday. He will pass three days on board a battleship and act as umpire, in a sham battle between the blue and red fleets, the former defending the coast.

A novel feature of the review will be a demonstration of the utility of aeroplanes in naval war. The battleship Hibernia left Sheerness yesterday with four aeroplanes. She has been fitted with a special launching platform, fixed forward and extending from the foremost gun turret to the bows.

The system consists of two guide rails sloping downward. The aeroplane is mounted on a trolley, which slides down these rails under the force of gravitation, and as the propeller simultaneously drives the machine forward, only a short run is required to enable the aeroplane to rise in the air.

BOAT ARRIVALS

The Virginian, of the Allan Line, has been reported east of Cape Race. Due at Quebec Saturday night and Montreal Sunday evening.

WANT THE TUNNEL BONDS GUARANTEED

Ottawa, May 3.—A delegation of a hundred from the vicinity of Montreal yesterday afternoon asked the Government to guarantee for 50 years 4 1-2 per cent. bonds of the Montreal Tunnel Co. to the extent of fifteen million dollars. The tunnel is for steamer and electric railways. The Premier promised immediate consideration.

A point urged was that the new line would furnish access to Montreal for the I. C. R. which now goes over the Grand Trunk.

Disaster Not Confirmed.

London, May 3.—There is no confirmation of the Constantinople despatch reporting the loss of the Italian battleship Umberto near Zuara.

The battleship has been engaged in convoying landing expeditions to Tripoli. Built in 1887, she carries over 700 men, and was 400 feet long, 77 feet wide. Her armament includes four 12-inch guns.

Railway Firemen's Demand.

New York, May 3.—One of the demands made by the locomotive firemen is that on coal-burning locomotives in freight service a fireman and an assistant firemen shall be employed. This would mean the employment of 14,000 additional firemen.

Jews Nominate Candidate.

Montreal, May 3.—The Jews of St. Lawrence division, Montreal, have nominated Mr. H. Bloomfield to run as Conservative candidate for the local Legislature.

YOUTH MUST STAY IN JAIL

Special to the Review.

Toronto, May 3.—John McCarger, a youth, charged with the theft of a package of money from the Receiver General's Department, appeared in police court this morning and was remaded till the tenth without bail. No evidence was taken.

Toronto, May 3—After stealing $700 in notes from the receiver-generals' department, Toronto street, during the past month, John F. McCargar, jr., a trusted clerk, was arrested in his rooming house, 277 Sherbourne street last night by Detective Tipton. McCargar is only 19 years of age and had worked in the government financial house for two years He comes of a prominent family in Belleville, Ont., his father, John F. McCargar, sr., being a wealthy resident of that city and unsuccessful candidate for the house of commons.

Riotous living caused the youth's downfall. The purchasing of a second-hand motor car for $300, paid for in $4 notes, completed the chain of evidence against him and brought about his arrest. Beneath the carpet in his room, $244 was found. Still unrecovered $122.

In the early part of April, Assistant Receiver-General Creighton discovered that a bundle of $4 notes, amounting to $400, was missing from the vault. Government Inspector Parkinson was placed on the case along with two local detectives, Tipton and Archibald. After satisfying themselves that McCargar was the guilty person, despite the fact that suspicion pointed to another junior clerk, who has since been completely exonerated, the three detectives made an investigation in all McCargar's movements.

Three $4 notes were found behind a water tank in a lavatory in the office, and it was learned that McCargar had purchased a second-hand motor car. A visit to a garage elicited the information that the purchase price had been given in notes of the missing denomination.

Two weeks ago McCargar told a fellow clerk that he was in the motor car business as a side line and asked if he wished to join him on the commission basis. He said he had purchased a motor car from J. K. Green, 189 1-2 Church street, and was trying to sell it at a profit. On hearing of this conversation the detectives called at the garage and found that McCargar had given $75 four dollar notes. When questioned the boy said he had got the notes at the Quebec bank, but this was soon proven a falsehood.

During the investigation that was going on in the banking house, the receiver-general ordered all the clerks to produce all their bank books. McCargar was the only one who could not show any money on deposit.

"I have not any bank book," he said. "I spend my money as I get it."

McCargar lived with his grandmother. He earned $600 a year and received a remittance from home.

Asks for Damages

Mr. Joseph Clark, of South Monaghan has sent in another claim for damages by high water for this season.

U.S. HARD COAL STRIKE STILL IN THE BALANCE; MINERS ARE UNDECIDED

Full Committee of Workers Reject Tentative Agreement and Decision Is Made to Confer Again With the Operators to See If Further Concession Can Be Secured—May Call Emergency Meeting.

New York, May 3.—Calling of a miners' convention to approve or disapprove of the sub-committee's agreement for settlement of the wage and other differences between the miners and operators in the anthracite coal fields was practically decided upon by the committee of miners' representatives and members of the boards of the three anthracite districts affected at a session here last night.

Another joint conference with the operators will first be sought by the miners, in all probability, to see if further concessions can be obtained, it was said, after last night's session. The miners' committee adjourned until to-day, when a decision will be reached, it was announced, whether a further conference with the operators shall be sought or an immediate call be issued for a miners' convention.

This action followed rejection by the miners' full committee yesterday, at the joint conference with the operators' committee of ten, of the tentative agreement for a settlemen reached recently between the sub-committees of the two interests.

If a convention were called, as it seems certain it will be, Wm. Green, who represented President White of the United Mine Workers, in yesterday's conference, said last night that it would be held in either Scranton or Wilkesbarre, and would be comprised of 400 delegates from the three districts. Such a convention could be convened within four days after notice of it was given. Mr. Green declared, Mr. Green expressed the opinion that if a convention were held at once, before another conference with the operators, it would uphold the action of the miners' full committee and vote disapproval of the sub-committee agreements.

In their statement and accompanying memoranda last night the operators' committee opposed another meeting with the miners' representatives until after the latter had endeavored to secure ratification of the present settlement agreement.

Aid for Pipe Smokers.

Washington, May 3.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Curtis has come to the aid of pipe smokers by amending the customs regulations so as to authorize travelers to bring into the United States free of duty three pounds of prepared smoking tobacco, in lieu of the permitted fifty cigars or 300 cigarettes.

Drydock For the Soo.

Ottawa, May 3.—A new company has been formed for the construction of a drydock at Sault Ste. Marie. Plans were filed yesterday and a subsidy is asked on a proposed expenditure of $1,400,0000. The Clergue interests are connected with it.

Two Brothers Disappear.

St. Thomas, Ont., May 3.—Thomas and Irvan Randall, aged 14 and 11 years respectively, sons of Israel Randall, living a mile north of West Lorne, went out 6.30 Monday morning to do chores and no trace of them has since been found.

A search is being made. No reason can be assigned for the disappearance.

Bank of Montreal Increase Capital.

Montreal, May 3.—Shareholders of the Bank of Montreal have been called to attend a meeting June 18, to authorize application for an increase in capital from $16,000,000 to $25,000,000.

EARL GREY FIRST IN HORSE EVENT

Yeager's Horse Carries Off Big Event In Toronto.

Toronto, May 3.—The attendance on the third night of the eighteenth annual Canadian Horse Show was the largest of the week. Every corner of the armories was well filled, and it indeed was a pretty sight. The display of horses was again of sterling quality, the attention of the enormous crowd being eager throughout the performance. Society and the ladies were as usual engrossed in the saddle horses and jumpers, while the regulars looked on approvingly at the harness classes and hackneys.

A. Yeager of Simcoe repeated his performance of last year in the King Edward Hotel Challenge Cup. Earl Grey gave a fine exhibition and won with a fair margin. Capt. Rodden's Louise was a good second. Mrs. Beck's Lady Norfolk, driven by the Power Minister, was third.

In class 22, for combination harness and saddle horses, Capt. Rodden's Miss Dainty was a gem. She was ridden by a lady and had everything in the category. She was versatile gaited, walking, trotting or cantering superbly. Miss Dainty won easily.

In class 75, the Guelph entry landed the blue nicely, Crow & Murray's chestnut being a good second.

R. Matthews of 509 Young street ran one-two in the light delivery class, his exhibit being exceptionally fine. A. W. Holman's Silver Heels was third.

The class for trotters not exceeding 15.2 provided the excitement of the evening. Two spills that might have resulted fatally took place, and both were the result of reckless driving. It was a well-filled class, and the judges had a hard task awarding the ribbons. Dress Parade was declared the winner, with the red going to Lady C., and W. J. Crossen also got the third with Molly Chimes.

The last event of the evening was class 48, for the jumpers, and was one of the best of the night. Hon. Clifford Sifton lifted first and third with Paddy and The Wasp, the second going to H. S. Wilson's Sarah Moore.

TWENTY-SIX QUESTIONS FOR TITANIC WITNESSES

Ismay Sails For England.

New York, May 3.—J. Bruce Ismay, president of the International Marine, sailed for his home in England yesterday on the White Star liner Adriatic. Mr. Ismay said that he was worn out.

He boarded the Adriatic a few minutes before she sailed at 12 o'clock, and went at once to his stateroom.

To the press he said: "I have no ill-feeling against the American public and think the Senate investigation was thorough. I am feeling very tired and wish to retire."

Homer Davenport Dead.

New York, May 3.—Homer Davenport, the cartoonist, died yesterday in this city of pneumonia.

Mr. Davenport had been working on the Hearst newspapers in this city until a few days ago. His was the hand that drew some of the cartoons concerning the Titanic disaster, which were discussed on two continents.

He was 44 years of age. He owned an up state farm where he made a specialty of breeding Arabian horses.

Too Much Conservation.

Ottawa, May 3.—Hon. Wm. Ross, Minister of Mines and Forests in British Columbia, is here interviewing members of the Government. He fears that the regulations compelling all railways in British Columbia to use oil after December, 1914, so as to avert forest fires, will be a blow to the coal industry. He wishes the new provincial system of forestry patrol to be given a trial.

SALVATION ARMY OFFICER FINED $10

Quebec, May 3.—Adjutant McRae, of the Salvation Army of Quebec, was condemned yesterday by Recorder Dery to a fine of $10 and costs for having held a public religious service at John and Dauteuil streets, thus obstructing traffic.

The recorder advised the Army not to hold any more public services in the streets.

Board of Trade Enquiry Into Loss of White Star Liner

London, May 3.—Lord Mersey, in his capacity as wreck commissioner, and five assessors who will advise him in his questioning on the technicalities of nautical affairs, held yesterday morning the first session of the Board of Trade enquiry into the loss of the White Star steamer Titanic.

The spacious armory of the Scottish Rifles was chosen with a view to seating an expected crush of auditors, but when the enquiry opened not more than one hundred spectators were present, and the majority of these were women.

From the series of twenty-six questions which the Attorney-General announced would be taken up, it became evident that the enquiry would cover practically the same ground as the investigation of the American Senate, but would be conducted more in accordance with the procedure of a court of law and deal definitely with stated cases. Eight questions, Sir Rufus Daniel Isaacs said, would relate to happenings before the casualty; six to warnings given the Titanic and the resulting precautions taken; ten to the casualty itself and consequent events, one to the equipment and construction of the vessel, and the last to the rules of the Merchant Shipping Act.

The only reference to the American investigation was Sir Rufus' announcement that owing to the detention of many witnesses for the Senatorial enquiry in the United States, the testimony would not be presented in a logical order. The seamen who arrived from New York on the steamer Lapland were called first as witnesses to the construction and equipment of the Titanic. Several lawyers, representing interested parties, requested permission to participate in the proceedings. Lord Mersey recognized Thomas Scanlan, member of Parliament for the north division of Sligo, who appeared for the Seamen's and Firemen's Unions, and an attorney for the Merchants' Service Guild, and took under consideration the application for representation of the Seafarers' Union, the Ship Constructors' Association and the Mercantile Officers' Union.

An adjournment was then taken.

UNION LABEL

A PRESIDENTIAL RECORD

The record of the administration of the President of the United States is thus summarized by the Toronto News:

"Mr. Taft originated the famous arbitration treaties emasculated by the Senate. He has enforced the Sherman Anti-Trust law without discrimination. It may be that dissolution of the Trusts has not been a shining success, but that is the fault of the law, not of its enforcement. A Tariff Board has been created to secure reliable and exhaustive information before any tariff charge is made. Judicial appointments have been taken out of politics. Treaties with Japan and some of the South American Republics have been negotiated and the extension of appointments by merit to the Civil Service has been endorsed by executive order."

This record does not count, though, when Mr. Taft stands in the way of the ambitions of Theodore Roosevelt, and the "big stick" is now wielded vigorously against him.

THE PURPOSE REVEALED

Politicians of the United States are shrewd, and it was felt in Canada that when Messrs. Fielding and Patterson made the reciprocity arrangement with them, they did not reveal to the Canadian negotiators the real object they had in view. There was a strong opinion that they led on the representatives of the Canadian Government and that those representatives were not a match for the men at Washington. It is now seen that either this was a correct opinion or that the Ottawa politicians were willing to shut their eyes to the fact that President Taft and his associates desired to "make Canada only an adjunct to the United States." That such was the object they had in view, and that they wished the reciprocity pact to become a fact for "political" as well as "economic" reasons has been revealed by the correspondence made public by the President. The results of the arrangement might not be affected by the opinions or intentions of the Washington negotiations. Even if they had merely desired a fair trade arrangements and nothing more that would not have improved the matter from the Canadian point of view, for on this side we are able to judge for ourselves what is good for the Dominion and what would be unwise. But the revelation made by the President shows that the negotiations on one side had more than trade in view—that political reasons had influence with them, and that this hope was to detach Canada from Imperial interests and connections and make it "only an adjunct of the United States." And the arrangement they succeeded in having the Laurier Government and the Liberal party accept was one well adapted to have the effect they desired.

This was not the first time that the Liberal leaders had adopted a trade policy that would have had political results if they had succeeded. For a time they advocated commercial union, and then much the same thing under the name of unrestricted reciprocity. This was a policy that would have had a more immediate political effect than the recent reciprocity pact, and one Liberal leader, the late Edward Blake, withdrew from public life in Canada because he would not support it. The reciprocity proposed last year was not so sweeping in its character, but it went far enough, in provisions that would have been economically injurious to Canada and in making this country dependent upon tariff legislation at Washington, to justify the hope of the President and the sweeping rejection of the arrangement by the Canadian people.

President Taft and Mr. Roosevelt agree on one point yet. They recognize that the reciprocity deal is dead, and that Canada has definitely decided that her destiny will be an Imperial one, in which a great Dominion will be built up linked with Britain and the other overseas British dominions.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The London Advertiser says: "It is a long drop from the Mark Twain to the Jeff and Mutt school of humor."

The Ottawa Journal says that a small borrower, a man on salary, cannot borrow money from a bank. It illustrates by the case of a man with a salary of $1,800 a year who applied in vain to the banks for a small loan. We knew a man on salary who applied to a chartered bank for a loan, and got it on his own note without an endorser. Unfortunately, we cannot recommend the Journal's man to apply to that bank for it is not doing business now.

A writer in a London paper advocates the taxing of bachelors by excluding them from income tax exemption. Ontario has adopted that idea to some extent. In this province bachelors, or non-householders are only allowed half the exemption that householders are given. But Ontario will scarcely adopt the writer's hint that bachelors should be shot. So long as he remains a bachelor there is some chance that he may yet get married.

AEROPLANES IN WARFARE.

Italy Proves Their Value In Her War Against Turkey.

When the prediction was made, not long ago, that the aeroplane would be an important factor in future warfare, it was considered absurd by many of those who had given special study to the subject. Why, did not experiments show that the machine could not be depended upon? Pshaw! The enemy could riddle it in less than no time. Such arguments found favor with those versed in the science of war, as well as with others identified with aviation. The air was full of discussions pro and con when—unexpectedly came the news that Italy was at war with Turkey and that a fleet, or flock, of aeroplanes was to be put in commission over in Tripoli.

Results have fulfilled the prophecy and the flying machine has proven itself a distinct necessity. It was, perhaps, in defensive work that the airman provided the best evidence of his value. Scouts, noting the enemy's plans, position and manoeuvres, furnished reports which brought about severe losses to the Arabs' offensive movements. As for the aggressive, the aeroplane has yet to prove its worth. Bombs dropped by aviators caused much disorder within the Turkish ranks, but comparatively little damage. Effective service was rendered by officers circling above the line of battle, directing the fire of the big guns of the battleships, as well as that of mountain artillery.

France has long been the leader in aviation, and has gained an advantage over other nations by early recognition of the value of aeronautics in warfare, fostered by liberal appropriations by the Government. Fate decreed, however that Italy should have the advantage, through her war with Turkey, of being the first to gain practical experience in utilizing this new arm of service. But the demonstration will prove of value to all the powers.

While England, Germany, Russia and Japan have spent considerable sums of money in experimenting with aeroplanes and dirigibles, the United States has done very little. The army received a congressional appropriation last year of $125,000, and has probably a dozen qualified aviators and less than that many machines. The navy has also made some experiments, including trials of the hydro-aeroplane, an invention of recent date. The slow development of flying is not due to the lack of an appropriation, or to the lack of aeroplanes, however, but rather to the lack of officers to operate them.

Admiral's Retirement.

Rear-Admiral W. O. Storey, who has retired, is 53 years of age and entered the service in January, 1872, serving as a midshipman in the Malay Peninsula in 1875-76, for which he has a medal with clasp.

Specially promoted to lieutenant in September, 1882, he served in the Dryad during the operations near Suakin in 1884, and became commander in June, 1896.

After filling various positions of importance, he was in April, 1909, appointed to the command of the Eastern Coastguard district, with headquarters at Harwich. This post he vacated on October 1 last, a fortnight after his promotion to flag rank, at the same time relinquishing a good service pension.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 2.—Despite a private forecast that the government report would suggest a winter crop of 72,000,000 bushels less than a year ago, the wheat market to-day sagged because of a lack of buyers. Closing prices ranged from last night's level to ⅜c to ⅞c below. Latest trading left corn varying from ⅜c to ½c lower to ⅛c advance; oats unchanged to ¼c off, and provisions strung out from the same as 24 hours before to 7½c decline.

Liverpool wheat market closed on wheat to-day ⅞d to 1¼d lower. Corn, ⅛d to ½d lower. Berlin wheat closed 1½c lower, Buda Pest ½c lower, Paris ¼c to ⅝c lower, and Antwerp unchanged.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 2.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat were weaker and little business was done. A fair amount of business was done in butter for shipment to the west and a steadier feeling prevailed in the market. The demand from English buyers for cheese is improving. Eggs active. Provisions firm under a steady demand.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 54½c; Canadian western, No. 3, 50½c; extra No. 1 feed, 51½c; No. 2 local white, 50½c; No. 3 local white, 49½c; No. 4 local white, 48½c.

Barley—Manitoba feed, 64c to 65c; malting, $1.06 to $1.10.

Buckwheat—No. 2, 74c to 75c.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.80; seconds, $5.30; strong bakers, $5.10; winter patents, choice, $5.10 to $5.35; straight rollers, $4.65 to $4.75; bags, $2.15 to $2.25.

Rolled oats—Barrels, $5.35; bags, 90 lbs., $2.55.

Millfeed—Bran, $25; shorts, $27; middlings, $29; mouillie, $30 to $36.

Hay—No. 2, per ton, car lots, $16.50 to $17.

Beef—Plate, bbls., 200 lbs., $14.50; tierces, 300 lbs., $21.50.

Buffalo Grain Market.

BUFFALO, May 2.—Spring wheat, no spot offerings; winter, strong; No. 2 red, $1.22; No. 3 red, $1.20; No. 2 white, $1.20.

Corn—Easy; No. 3 yellow, 83¾c; No. 3 yellow, 81¼c; No. 3 corn, 81½c to 82¼c; No. 4 corn, 79½c to 80c, all on track, thru billed.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, May 2.—The railways reported 75 carloads at the City Market, comprising 863 cattle, 2564 hogs, 6g sheep, 230 calves and 14 horses.

Butchers.

There were cattle bought for butchers' purposes of export weights at prices ranging from $7 to $7.80; butchers' cattle, weighing from 1000 to 1100 lbs., at $6.75 to $7; cattle, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $6.50 to $6.75; cattle, 800 to 900 lbs., at $6.25 to $6.40; cattle, 660 to 710 lbs., at $5 to $5.85; cows, $3 to $6, with some extra quality cows at $6.25 to $6.50; bulls, $4.50 to $6.

Stockers and Feeders.

Since the farmers got busy seeding the demand for feeders and stockers has not been as great. Stockers sold from $4.75 to $5.25; feeders, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $5.50 to $6.15.

Milkers and Springers.

Scarcity of really choice cows is still apparent, and buyers with orders for such are finding much difficulty in filling them. Of medium to fairly good cows there is a showing, and sales for such range chiefly from $50 to $60, but cows good enough to command $65 and $70 are scarce, and a price limit on a strictly choice Holstein or big Durham cow cannot be placed below $80, and something fancy would sell higher. Common and inferior thin cows sell around $40 to $45 each. See sales given below.

Veal Calves.

Receipts of veal calves were large, prices remained steady at $3.50 to $7 for the general run, with a few good reaching up to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep ewes sold at $5.50 to $3.50, with a few selects reaching $7; rams, $4.50 to $5.25; yearlings, $7 to $8.50 per cwt.; spring lambs, $3.50 to $7 each.

Hogs.

The hog market was not quite as firm, at least it was so reported by those who ought to know. Selects fed and watered sold from $8.75 to $8.85 fed and watered, and $8.50 f.o.b. cars at country points.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, May 2.—Cattle—Receipts, 50 head; market, active, steady; prime steers, $8.40 to $8.75; butcher grades, $2.50 to $8.25.

Calves—Receipts, 400 head; market, active, 25c lower; cull to choice, $6 to $9.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 5000; market, slow; lambs, 10c lower; choice lambs, $9 to $9.90; wool lambs, $9 to $10.35; cull to fair, $7.50 to $8.75; yearlings, $8 to $8.50; sheep, $4 to $7.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 3400; market, fairly active, 20c lower; Yorkers, $7.80 to $8; pigs, $7.10; mixed, $8 to $8.05; heavy, $8.05 to $8.10; roughs, $7 to $7.10; stags, $5.50 to $6.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, May 2.—Cattle—Receipts, 6000; market, steady to strong; beeves, $4 to $9; Texas steers, $5.35 to $7.35; western steers, $5.75 to $7.70; stockers and feeders, $4.30 to $6.80; cows and heifers, $2.85 to $7.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 32,000; market, weak; light, $7.25 to $7.65; mixed, $7.30 to $7.72½; heavy, $7.30 to $7.75; rough, $7.30 to $7.45; pigs, $4.75 to $6.85; bulk of sales, $7.55 to $7.70.

Sheep—Receipts, 18,000; market, 10c to 25c lower; native, $5 to $8; western, $5.25 to $8.25; yearlings, $6.50 to $8.75; lambs, native, $6.75 to $9.80; western, $6.50 to $10.40.

Cheese Markets.

VANKLEEK HILL, Ont., May 2.—Vankleek Hill Cheese Board held their annual meeting to-day and the following officers were elected: President, C. S. Northcote; secretary-treasurer, D. S. McInnes. There were 341 boxes of cheese boarded and all sold at 15⅝c. Five buyers were present.

The Bashful Suitor.

Mrs. Brown was a mistress who allowed her servant, Jane, to bring her young man into her kitchen at nights.

Now, Mrs. Brown was very inquisitive and listened outside the door to the conversation.

A short time ago Jane got a fresh young man, and the mistress noticed how quiet all was when he was in the kitchen.

"Jane," said Mrs. Brown the next morning, "how is it I never hear any talk in the kitchen when your new young man visits you?"

"Oh, mum," replied Jane, "he's that modest he does nothing but eat when he calls on me!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

"Yes. Some [illegible] told me it was more like a Florentine picture gallery than a hotel. Is that true?"

"I have not been to Florence, but the picture gallery notion is all right. When I was a youngster I came here often, and my—my people always—well, you see——"

He nibbled his moustache in dismay, for it was hard to keep up a pretense when Cynthia was so near. She ended the sentence for him.

"You came to the Bath Hotel. Why not stay there to-night?"

"I would like to very much, if you have no objection."

"Just the opposite. But—please forgive me for touching on money matters—the charges may be rather dear. Won't you let me tell the head waiter to—to include your bill with ours?"

"On the strict condition that you deduct twelve shillings from my account," he said, stealing a glance at her.

"I shall be quite business-like, I promise."

She was smiling at the landscape, or at some fancy that took her, perhaps. But it followed that a messenger was sent to Dale to the hostelry where he had booked a room for his master, and that Mrs. Devar, after one stony and indignant glare, whispered to Cythia in the dining-room:

"Can that man in evening dress, sitting alone near the window, by any possibility be our chauffeur?"

"Yes," laughed the girl. "That is Fitzroy. Say, doesn't he look fine and dandy? Don't you wish he was with us—to order the wine? And, by the way, is there a pier at Bournemouth?"

CHAPTER IV.

Shadows—With Occasional Gleams

Mrs. Devar ate her soup in petrefied silence. Among the diners were at least two peers and a countess, all of whom she knew slightly; at no other time during the last twenty years would she have missed such an opportunity of impressing the company in general and her companion in particular by waddling from table to table and greeting these acquaintances with shrill volubility.

But to-night she was beginning to be alarmed. Her youthful protegee was carrying democratic training too far; it was quite possible that a request to modify an unconventional freedom of manner where Fitzroy was concerned would meet with a blank refusal. That threatened a real difficulty in the near future, and she was much perturbed by being called on to decide instantly on a definite course of action. Too strong a line might have worse consequences than a laissez faire attitude. As matters stood, the girl was eminently plastic, her naturally gentle disposition inducing respect for the opinions and wishes of an older and more experienced woman, yet there was a fearlessness, a frank candor of thought, in Cynthia's character that awed and perplexed Mrs. Devar, in whom the unending struggle to keep afloat in the swift and relentless torrent of social existence had atrophied every sense save that of self-preservation. An open rupture, such as she feared might take place if she asserted her shadowy authority, was not to be dreamed of. What was to be done? Small wonder, then, that she would tackle her fish vindictively.

"Are you angry because Fitzroy is occupying the same hotel as ourselves?" asked Cynthia at last.

The girl had amused herself by watching the small coteries of stiff and starched Britons scattered throughout the room, she was endeavoring to classify the traveled and the untraveled by varying degrees of frigidity. As it happened, she was wholly wrong in her rough analysis. The Englishman who has wandered over the map is, if anything, more self-contained than his stay-at-home brother. He is often a stranger in his own land, and the dozen most reserved men present that evening were probably known by name and deed throughout the widest bounds of the empire.

But, though eyes and brain were busy, she could not help noticing Mrs Devar's taciturn mood. That a born gossip, retailer of personal reminiscences confined exclusively to "the best people," could eat stolidly for five censecutive minutes, seemed somewhat of a miracle, and Cynthia, as was her habit, came straight to the point.

Mrs. Devar managed to smile, pouting her lips in wry mockery of the suggestion that a chauffeur's affairs should cause her any uneasiness whatsoever.

"I was really thinking of our tour," she lied glibly. "I am sorry you missed seeing Salisbury Cathedral. Why was the route altered?"

"Because Fitzroy remarked that the cathedral would always remain at Salisbury, whereas a perfect June day in the New Forest does not come once in a blue moon when one really wants it."

"For a person of his class he appears to say that sort of thing rather well."

Cynthia's arched eyebrows were raised a little.

"Why do you invariably insist on the class distinction?" she cried. "I have always been taught that in England the barrier of rank is being broken down more and more every day. Your society is the easiest in the world to enter. You tolerate people in the highest circles who would certainly suffer from cold feet if they showed up too prominently in New York or Philadelphia; isn't it rather out of fashion to be so exclusive?"

"Our aristocracy has such an assured position that it can afford to unbend," quoted the other.

"Oh, is that it? I heard my father say the other day that it has often made him tired to see the way in which some of your titled nonenities grovel before a Lithuanian Jew who is a power on the Rand. But unbending is a different thing to groveling, perhaps?"

Mrs. Devar sighed, yet she gave a moment's scrutiny to a wine-list brought by the head waiter.

"A small bottle of 61, please," she said in an undertone.

Then she sighed again, deprecating the Vanreen directness.

"Unfortunately, my dear, few of our set can avoid altogether the worship of the golden calf."

Cynthia thrust an obstinate chin into the argument.

"People will do things for bread and butter that they would shy at if independent," she said. "I can understand the calf proposition much more easily than the snobbishness that would forbid a gentleman like Fitzroy from eating a meal in the same apartment as his employers, simply because he earns money by driving an automobile."

In her directness, Cynthia had gone just a little beyond the bounds of fair comment, and Mrs. Devar was quick to seize the advantage thus offered.

"From some points of view, Fitzroy and I are in the same boat," she said quietly. "Still, I cannot agree that it is snobbish to regard a groom or a coachman as a social inferior. I have been told that there are several broken-down gentlemen driving omnibuses in London; but that is no reason why we should ask one of them to dinner, even though his taste in wine might be beyond dispute."

Cynthia had already regretted her impulsive outburst. Her vein of romance was imbedded in a rock of good sense, and she took the implied reproof penitently.

"I am afraid my sympathies rather ran away with my manners," she said. "Pelase forgive me. I really didn't mean to charge you with being a snob. The absurdity of the statement carries its own refutation. I spoke in general terms, and I am willing to admit that I was wrong in asking the man to come here to-night. But the incident happened quite naturally. He mentioned the fact that he often stayed in the hotel as a boy——"

"Very probably," agreed Mrs. Devar cheerfully. "We are all subject to ups and downs. For my part, I was speaking a la chaperon, my sole thought being to safeguard you from the disagreeable busy-bodies who misconstrue one's motives. And now, let us talk of something more amusing. You see that woman in old rose brocade—she sitting with a bald-headed man at the third table on your left. Well, that is the Countess of Porthcawl, and the man with her is Roger Ducrot, the banker. Porthcawl is a most complaisant husband. He never comes within a thousand miles of Millicent. She is awfully nice; clever and witty, and the rest of it—quite a man's woman. We are sure to meet her in the lounge after dinner and I will introduce you."

SIMMONDS

Cynthia said she would be delighted. Reading between the lines of Mrs. Devar's description, it was not easy to comprehend the distinction that forbade friendship with Fitzroy while offering it with Millicent, Countess of Porthcawl. But the girl was resolved not to open a new rift. In her heart she longed for the day that would reunite her and her father; meanwhile Mrs. Devar must be dealt with gently.

Despite its tame ending, this unctuous discussion on social ethics led to wholly unforseen results.

The allusion to a possible pier at Bournemouth meant more than Mrs. Devar imagined, but Cynthia resisted the allurements of another entrancing evening, went early to her room, and wrote duty letters for a couple of hours. The excuse served to cut short her share of the Coutess's brilliant conversation, though Mr. Ducrot tried to make himself very agreeable when he heard the name of Vanrenen.

Medenham, standing in the hall, suddenly came face to face with Lady Porthcawl, who was endowed with an unerring eye for minute shades of distinction in the evening dress garmets of the opposite sex. Her correspondence consisted largely of picture postcards, and she had just purchased some stamps from the hall porter when she saw Medenham take a telegram from the rack where it had been reposing since the afternoon. It was, she knew, addressed to "Viscount Medenham." That, and her recollection of his father, banished doubt.

"George!" she cried, with a charming air of having found the one man whom she was longing to meet, "don't say I've grown so old that you have forgotten me!"

He started, rather more violently than might be looked for in a shikari whose nerves had been tested in many a ticklish encounter with other members of the cat tribe. In fact, he had just been disturbed by coming across the unexpected telegram, wherein Simmonds assured his lordship that the rejuvenated car would arrive at the College Green Hotel, Bristol, on Friday evening. At the very moment that he realized the imminence of Cynthia's disappearance into the void, it was doubly disconcerting to be hailed by a woman who knew his world so intimately that it would be folly to smile vacantly at her presumed mistake.

How Zam-Buk Cures Burns.

Stoker Kingsnorth, of H.M. First Class Cruiser "Cochrane," says: "One day I fell with my arm on an exhaust steam pipe, which fairly frizzled the skin. At once the ship's surgeon dressed my arm, but from the first, the burns took the wrong way, owing to a lot of coal dust and dirt from the pipe having got embedded in the flesh and setting up blood-poison.

"For weeks I remained under treatment, but the ordinary ointments proved no good for my arm. Indeed, I got worse, and I became alarmed at the spreading of the poison. I therefore obtained a supply of Zam-Buk and almost as soon as this was applied I got ease. From the very first application, healing commenced; and a few boxes of Zam-Buk healed my wound completely."

Zam-Buk is just as good for piles, blood-poison, festering sores, pimples eruptions, cuts, bruises, and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box all druggists and stores, or post free for price from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Try Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

STORIES OF "G.G."

Some Tales of Great English Entertainer's Adventures.

An almost innumerable number of more or less true stories have been fastened on to the late Mr. Geo. Grossmith, whose death has removed from the public stage a clever comedian and witty entertainer—though, to be sure, Mr. Grossmith had not appeared professionally for some time before his decease. Very early in his career he was appearing at a London hall in his capacity of musical entertainer. Addressing his audience, he said, "I shall now have the honor of introducing to your notice a little sketch after the manner of the late John Parry." The words were scarcely out of his mouth when a gentleman in the body of the hall rose with the emphatic remark, "No, I'm d——d if you will." It was Parry himself, who not unnaturally objected to being classed among those who had gone over to the great majority.

Mr. Grossmith met his wife, who died in 1905, when they were both young. She was ill for 14 months, and Mr. Grossmith had to sacrifice all long-distance engagements to be near her. "She kept my little list by her, and constantly asked me why I was not in Scotland or in Ireland or up North, as the case may have been. I had to excuse myself by white lies, by saying that it was suggested that I should go later on in the season, and so I went on paying forfeitures everywhere, for without the slightest affectation I may honestly say I would rather have sacrificed the loss of thousands of pounds by being near her than by gaining double the amount by being away from her. I have never regretted my action; it has been a great comfort to me. We were little more than children when we first met, and ever since that time she was my best adviser and my most faithful and incomparable friend."

One of the best stories ever told about Grossmith had to do with some correspondence he once had with the Income Tax Commissioners. Long after his father's death George received a "first notice" from the income tax people, assessing his (the father's) income at $10,000. Taking the interesting document, George wrote across the face of it: "I am glad to learn that my father is doing so well in the next world; $10,000 is a good deal more than he ever earned in this. Kindly forward this notice to his new address, and remember me affectionately to him." Mr. Grossmith stated that whereas $190 a week was the highest fee he ever received at the Savoy, he cleared $50,000 during a seven months' tour as entertainer. It is not surprising that it was extremely difficult to induce Mr. Grossmith, in his later years, to return to the stage.

An Animal Dinner.

That poets and artists can "rag it" with as much zest as medical students is shown by the exploits of the forty members of the new Studio Club in London. They are to hold every month a "freak" dinner. At their first all the guests, including several women, came as animals, and dogs were brought dressed as humans. The waiters represented animal trainers.

A well-known woman novelist came as an ichthyosaurus, Mr. E. Storer, secretary of the club, made up as an elephant. Miss M. Chepstow came as a leopard, and another poet disguised herself as a Chinese pig.

Others represented lions, dogs, monkeys, cats, and other four-footed creatures. The menu, which was otherwise normal, included, "rabbits' food" and other provender. Dessert had to be "begged for" by the animals. To maintain the realism, the elephant had to keep on trumpeting, the lions roaring, the donkeys braying, the dogs barking, the cats mewing—all had to act their parts.

Following the dinner came a dance. The ichthyosaurus, emitting reptilian cries, waltzed with the lion, the pianist, dressed as a clockwork top, banged the piano.

"Stop!" cried the master of ceremonies, "make room for the caterpillar race!" And, panting with their exertions, the poets watched a race between a clockwork caterpillar and a jumping frog, with rapt faces.

Literal Interpretation.

A sneak thief had got into the car and made off with a fellow traveler's pocketbook. A greeny, who was evidently on his first trip to the city, had taken the episode in with a certain amount of relish and, despite his supposed greenness, apparently knew more about the identity of the guilty one than any one present when the alarm was raised.

He touched the conductor on the arm and pointed to a man who was hurrying down the block for dear life. "There's the thief," he chuckled dryly.

The conductor turned on him sharply.

"You —— fool! If yer saw 'im pickin' th' gent's pocket why didn't yer report 'im 'stead o' lettin' 'im slip off that way?"

"That sign up there scared me," returned the hayseed.

"What sign?"

"Th' one thet sez 'Beware of Pickpockets'!"

When Does a Man Need Life Insurance?

When he comes to die. Nine men out of ten, no matter how prosperous thay may have been during some period in the past, will leave no other estate, or at least not enough of other assets to save their families from pinching poverty.

He needs life insurance before he dies, as, for example, when he finds himself no longer insurable. He knows he needs it when he cannot get it. He always intended to take insurance, or to add to the amount he already carries, but he deferred too long. Procrastination is the robber of widows and orphans.

He needs life insurance now—all he can possibly carry. He needs it now because to-morrow, or next month, or next month, or next year, by reason of accident or disease, he may be unable to get it.

He needs it because he is poor; or because, if fairly well to-do, he would yet not leave such a provision for his family as he would like to leave, if he were suddenly taken away.

He needs it because, though he may be rich, he knows that riches often "take themselves wings." He needs it because, being rich he is able to pay for it, while a little later he may be unable to pay, or unable to get it even if he can pay.

He needs it because he can buy it cheaper to-day than ever he can in the future. He must have it sometime, and every year adds to the price that he will have to pay.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

Harry Adams

DEATH OF MR. SAMUEL ADAMS AT EDMONTON

Brother of Messrs. Frank and Harry Adams of This City—His Short Illness.

The sad and shocking intelligence reached the city early this morning of the unexpected and sudden passing of Samuel Adams, of Edmonton, a former Peterborough young man, who left here fifteen years ago. He was a son of the late Samuel Adams, of East City and brother of Messrs. Frank Adams, the city treasurer, and Harry Adams, the George street merchant.

The first intimation received by the members of the family here, came by wire at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, telling of his serious illness, and urging them to come quickly. Time did not permit of Mr. Frank Adams, catching the first train, the 4.28 C.P.R., so a wire was sent to another brother, William, near Winnipeg. At six o'clock, another telegram arrived, saying that recovery was hopeless, and at two o'clock this morning a telegram from Mr. David Conroy in Edmonton, reached the family, telling of his death. His illness was very brief and was caused from a swift attack of pneumonia.

The late Mr. Adams was only 35 years of age, and at one time was one of the best known hockey players in this district. He left Peterborough fifteen years ago, the first five of which were spent in Sault Ste. Marie, and the last ten in Edmonton. He carried on a real estate business in the latter city and was widely known and greatly esteemed.

Mr. William Adams of Winnipeg, on receiving the news of his brother's illness, hurriedly left for his bedside, but arrived too late. He will take charge of the body in Edmonton, and arrange for forwarding it to Peterborough for interment.

Surviving the deceased, besides his sorrowing mother, are two sisters and five brothers, who are,—Mrs. Burgess, East City, and Miss Maude Adams, Frank and Harry, of Peterborough; William of Snowflake, and George, of Iditerod, Alaska.

Further funeral announcements will be made on the arrival of the body in Peterborough.

MOONLIGHT IN COLLISION WITH LIGHT ENGINE

A head on collision occurred on the Grand Trunk just near the John street crossing, Port Hope, about one o'clock yesterday morning. As the Moonlight from the north was proceeding to the station it collided with a light engine which was going down for water. The engine of the freight was derailed, but the crews of both engines, noticing the approaching danger, jumped and escaped injury. The auxiliary from Belleville was called and the track was cleared about five o'clock.

DR. NORVAL'S NUTRITIVE HYPOPHOSPHITES

When a person feels "blue" — "all tired out" — "dosen't feel like doing anything" — "connot concentrate his mind on his work" — "feels weak mentally and physically" — "doubts his powers" — "complains of poor appetite and sleeplessness" — "suffers from headache" — Then his nervous system is run down and demands a good up-building tonic. Nervous exhaustion is a modern disease, caused by too close attention to business, overwork worry, cares, overstudy, etc.

Dr. Norval's Nutritive Hypophosphites forms the best nerve and brain food known, and have restored thousands of sufferers to health.

CALGARY REAL ESTATE AGENT IS HELD ON SERIOUS CHARGE

Lindsay Post.

E. Lloyd Jones, the Calgary real estate operator, appeared before Magistrate Jackson this morning after having been brought back from Toronto by Chief Chilton, the charge being that of obtaining money under false pretences.

Arthur Crandell, the complainant, was represented by Mr. L. V. O'Connor and Mr. A. M. Fulton, while G. H. Hopkins, K. C., appeared for the defendant.

On behalf of the prosecution Mr. O'Connor asked for an adjournment till Monday next in order to gather some of the witnesses who lived out of town.

Mr. Hopkins styled the charge a barefaced attempt to extort money, and asked to have his client allowed out on his own bail.

There were really two agreements, the second of which was cancelled.

The first agreement, which would be fully carried out by his client when the complainant had completed the terms on his side, was regarding the sale of two lots on which $500 had been paid with a further $400 to be paid in a year.

The cancelled agreement was to purchase three lots in substitution which was not carried out and Crandell's check and notes were returned.

His client simply refused to cancel the first agreement and gave the money back, but would deliver the deed when the contract was fulfilled.

Mr. O'Connor said it was something new for the defence to outline the case for the prosecution. According to information he had Jones left town the afternoon of receiving his (Mr. O'Connor's) letter demanding an explanation and had not turned up since.

The case was adjourned until Monday, May 6.

In view of the serious nature of the charges and the heavy penalty attaching thereto, bail was placed at $4,000, on his own and two securities of $1,000 each.

PRESENTATION BY CHOIR MEMBERS TO MISS C. BOWMAN

Miss Clara Bowman, Gilmour street, who is leaving for Montreal on Monday, was presented with a charming model dresser clock last evening by the choir of Charlotte street Methodist church, of which she has been a popular and valued member, for the past two years. The presentation was informally made at the home of Miss McWilliams, another member of the choir. Needless to say, Miss Bowman appreciated very deeply, the choir's evidence of the esteem in which she was held.

"THE CHOCOLATE SOLDIER"

Of all the lighter works of the European composers that have come across the water to amuse and entertain American audiences, none has reaped a success in any degree, comparable to that of "The Chocolate Soldier," the exquisite Viennese opera by Oscar Straus, based upon Bernard Shaw's satiric comedy of war and romance in Bulgaria, "Arms and The Man." Its exuberant melodies, radiant with freshness and beauty, lend harmony to a story told amid a score of delightful comic situations and peopled with the charming contradictory, ludicrous human types that Bernard Shaw draws with unerring pen.

Mr. Whitney has given a new grace and elegance to the production this season by the construction of new scenery, and by duplicating the costumes throughout, in order to maintain the high standard of excellence which has for years been associated with a Whitney production. In the Whitney Opera Company, the star system is unknown, and this eliminates all weakness in the minor roles, which is the short-coming of most light opera companies. The high degree of talent which Mr. Whitney insists upon in his companies is increased by the fact that every member of the company presenting "The Chocolate Soldier" can boast of a grand opera training.

The last word in summing up the features of Mr. Whitney's third season of "The Chocolate Soldier" is a mention of the special orchestra of twenty musicians engaged to negotiate Straus' music.

The cast which will present this masterpiece of comic opera is exactly the same as has given it during two engagements in Toronto and Montreal, and which has played in Toronto only last week. Mr. Whitney says of this cast, that it is the best which he has ever gotten together for "The Chocolate Soldier" and in this view he is backed by the critics named above. The prima donna part is played by Miss Alice York, a Toronto girl, and she has a clever alternate in the person of Miss Bessie Lyon. Miss Mildred Rogers, formerly of the Boston Grand Opera Co., and Miss Juanita Fletcher, play the other female roles, while the male roles are still in the hands of those who originated them in this country three years ago, and include George Tallman, as Alexius, Francis J. Boyle as Massakroff, George O'Donnell as Popoff, and Charles Purcell, who has the title role of "The Chocolate Eating Soldier."

The seat sale will open Monday morning.

One interested listener an orator has is himself.

RATHER ROUGH ON THE POST

Mr. David Porter who recently acquired a Hupmobile auto car, had an exciting little accident on Monday in the yard at the rear of the Carey Moher Company's garage. He was backing the car into the yard and neglected to take his foot from off the clutch in time to avoid striking a wooden post supporting a shed. The all-steel back of the car struck the post with such force that the steel bulged in deeply, and afterwards came out again without damaging the car in the least, just as a stiff hat will resume a normal appearance after it has received a dent.

The post, however, was knocked sideways, and nearly resulted in the collapse of the whole shed which it supported.

LEADING HOTEL AT PICTON IS WITHOUT BAR

BALL PLAYERS SHOW CLASS; THE FANS LIKE THEIR WORK

The first full practice of the White Caps, was held yesterday afternoon at the Exhibition grounds, with about 60 fans looking on.

Manager Templin put the players through their paces in faultless style. First he paired them off and had them play catch for about 25 minutes. Then, he gave pitchers their turn in the box, and batting practice began. He next formed up the infield and outfield and had men knockout to both, and lastly, the players took their half mile run headed by pitcher Harry Scull.

Cresswell and Quinlan were out with the squad in uniform. Quinlan did not take his place in the box because his arm is not in shape yet.

All the pitchers who worked, seemed to have piles of speed and good control.

Brode, Trout and Mooney did the receiving and judging by the way they whipped them around, there will be no team running wild on the paths in this town.

The infield are all to the good, their speed being a revelation to many of the fans.

"My men can't work here," said "Tempy." Wait till I get on the ball park and then I'll show you good ball.

Frank Dolan, the big first sacker, from Wilmington, certainly has class Connolly did not work at the first corner yesterday.

Joe Umer of Philadelphia, took Templin's place at second and showed up well.

JERRY EDMUNDS WITH WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, May 3.—Winnipeg will be the mecca for professional ball players this week, as no less than thirty are carded to try out for places on the Maroons this season, and if they all show up there will sure be a merry chase for positions on the team. Manager Jim Brown is likely to have his hands full picking out the good from the bad before the league season opens on May 9. Brown has the Coast League recruits at Edmonton to-day, and will play three games before arriving in Winnipeg on Friday.

In the meantime the many other recruits that have been signed will caper around the River Park diamond and some classy work will no doubt be pulled off before the end of the week. Among the players already reported are Shea, the Vancouver catcher; Jerry Edmonds, from Toronto; Van Dine, the demon slugger, who was traded by the Maroons to Edmonton last year, and finished up with Calgary. Van thinks he has a few more home runs left in that bat of his and expects to make the team Wilson, who twirled good ball for the club two years ago; McCutcheon, a former Fort William boy, who is a fair pitcher; Kirkman, who played some good ball for the team last year; Gardiner, an outfielder from Clearwater, besides Frank Lohr, Donovan and Hollinger, who were previously in the city.

Belleville's assessment list has increased $671,000.

CAN BROWNIES REPEAT TO-NIGHT AGAINST NEMOS

The Brownies and Nemos will meet at the Y.M.C.A. gym. to-night at eight o'clock, in the second of a series of games for the intermediate championship.

The Brownies took the first exhibition, and while logical favorites in the contest to-night, the Nemos, who, by the way can travel some, may spring a big surprise, as they did on the Ekos, city league champions, when they registered the only defeat of the schedule against the Ekos. A win for the Brownies means the championship.

BALL PLAYERS TO MEET LOCAL BASKETBALL FIVE

There are ball players in Manager Templin's squad who are also handy at the basket ball game, in fact several are known as star performers in their home towns.

Physical director Thompson of the Y.M.C.A., has a few phenoms who he will introduce to a picked team from the ball players, a game being under arrangement for next week at the gymnasium.

GUN CLUB SHOOT

The Peterboro Gun Club's first regular shoot of the season was held last evening with a good attendance. Several new member were out.

Following are the scores at 25 birds each—

H. Routley	22
H. C. Hill	18
C. Mills	17
C. James	16
C. Wood	16
I. Hall	13
A. Cook	12
C. Lech	12
J. Loucks	11
W. T. Belleghem	10
E. C. Boswell	9
E. Graham	6
A. H. Stratton	5

The next regular shoot will be on Thursday, May 16th.

DIAMOND DUST FROM THE CIRCUIT

Harry Burridge is working at first base for Eatons. The Toronto team was defeated by Knotty Lee's Canadian Leaguers in an exhibition game.

An informal dance was given to the Ottawa ball players at Chatham by the hotel management.

"Lefty" Smith, last year with Brantford, Canadian League, and now with Providence, in the International, beat Toronto.

St. Thomas—Dad Stewart, manager of the local Canadian League, Ball Club, has returned from Kalamazoo, Mich., where he pulled off one of the biggest deals put through in minor league circles this season. Manager Stewart would not give the details of the transaction, but it is said three St. Thomas players and two crack pitchers and a catcher from the Southern Michigan circuit figure in the trade. It is thought the deal will be completed by Wednesday. Eight of the locals reported to-day and 35 men will be here by Thursday.

The Thistles baseball team, who won the Juvenile championship last year, have re-organized. They will play their first game with Park St. Baptist, on the latter's field, on Saturday at 2.30 o'clock.

London Advertiser—Zabell, the pitcher, looks like a good one. When he first signed with London it was given out by the local management that he was an Indian, but one glance at Zabell is enough to dispel this illusion. He is of French descent, but looks like a full fledged American. He played with the Sioux Indian team for a number of seasons and was adopted into the tribe, but this was about as near as he ever got to being a real redskin. He is about the same height as Silcox, but is of heavier build.

Carr also appears to be in good shape, and he will give Nichols and the rest of the new infielders a great fight for the second base job.

The Peterborough Red Sox will organize a ball team this season. It will be composed of all young players under twenty years of age. The games will be played after six o'clock. Arrangements have not yet been made for the grounds.

The farmhouse of John Watson, near Mitchell, was burned while the occupants were in town.

SEPARATES IN SCHOOL LEAGUE

First Game Postponed and New Schedule Will be Made.

The first senior game of the public school baseball league, between Centrals and South Centrals, scheduled for this afternoon, was called off, at a meeting held last night, when the request of the Separate School for entrance into the league was acceded to. This means a new schedule and a committee has the matter in hand. The games will likely commence next week.

CANADIAN HOT SPRINGS.

Sinclair's Warm Waters One of the Rockies' Wonders.

Away up among deep passes and gorges in the Canadian Rockies; close by a rushing mountain torrent, whose icy waters take their source from the perennial snows of the Beaverfort Range, overlooking the Columbia-Kootenay Valleys there existed, long before the first white man made his appearance over the summit or even ventured in his frail river boat near the source of the beautiful Columbia, two or three Indian huts, formed of poles and rudely interlaced with branches and thwarted brush from the neighboring forest, says J. Launing in The Toronto Globe. Those rude shelters, modified a little by continued public usage, still remain and mark the spot from whence the Thermal Springs of Sinclair have their source. The Sinclair Creek flows from the watershed between the Columbia and Kootenay Valleys in a succession of swift rapids and cataracts through canyons, extremely picturesque, the waters growing more powerful and noisy as they rush onward to swell the flood of the quiet and unassuming Columbia.

The junction of the heated waters with the icy mountain torrent occurs at a point about three miles from the banks of the main river, and in addition to the few rude baths of stones dug out by the Indians in earlier times is marked by a thin veil of mist hovering continually over the junction point.

So closely united are the sources of the spring waters with those of the creek bed that it is quite possible to stand between the two streams and place a hand in each — the heated waters bubbling from the fissure at 60 or 70 degrees C, forming a marked contrast in temperature to the almost icy waters from the mountain snows. The beauty of the surrounding view is enhanced by its very naturalness.

Though the Indians and white men alike have used the springs for ages, leaving records of their frequent visitations in old camp sites, brush huts, and pebble baths, the waters are free and uncontrolled.

There are no luxurious hotels within a stone's-throw, no marble entrances to the various springs, no linen-clad attendants or toll collectors, but everything wild and undecorated as nature formed it, modified only by time and its eroding influences. The Indian, still living in the belief of his ancestors, resorts to the baths as a specific for rheumatism and other diseases, and enjoys the same privileges as the white man in this regard, the British Columbia Government having very wisely reserved these springs and others of similar occurrence in the region for public use.

Through summer and autumn, winter and spring, the waters issue and flow on. There is no diminution through the changing seasons, either in volume or temperature, evidencing the geologist's faith in the existence of juvenile waters (waters which have never reached the surface) at depths beneath the earth's crust.

The process by which nature boils water away down at immense depths must indeed be one of great interest, and we fain would pierce the resisting crust to observe it. Such a measure, however conclusive, is by no means practicable, and if we would know anything of nature's sources of heat and fuel supply we must be content to reason somewhat conclusively from experiment and observation.

In this interesting district also along the valley of Toby Creek, which joins the Columbia near the town of Athelmar, there are numbers of delicious soda springs, much resorted to by travelers and tourists while en route to the summit of the Pass.

Even the tired pack horses laboring along the trails to the lumbering and mining camps are privileged to halt at the springs and quench their thirst from those natural soda fountains.

They Just Smiled.

Dr. George C. Creelman, president of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, admits that in the following story the joke was on him:

For ten years he had held the position of secretary of the American Association of Farmers' Institute Workers, but he found that his other duties would not permit of his continuing in that office. So, at the annual meeting in Washington, D. C., just before the election of officers was to be held, he explained that he would no longer be able to act as secretary.

The other members smiled when he said that.

So, Dr. Creelman emphasized the fact that he could not continue as secretary.

Again his statement was met with a smile, so he said: "Now, I'm serious about this. I really couldn't spare the time to look after the work of secretary, and if you elect me to the office I will be obliged to decline it."

Once more there was a general smile.

After the first balloting had been held, the doctor learned why they had smiled. They didn't elect him to the secretaryship again—they made him president.

WHY A WATCH WEARS OUT

Neglect is responsible for most Watches going wrong. A Watch should be thoroughly overhauled, at least once a year. Dust collecting in a Watch causes it to run dry, the grit will then wear away the delicate bearings. DEATHS FROM TYPHOID FEVER IN ONTARIO

(From "The Economist.")

The Provincial Mortality Tables for 1910 have been issued by the Ontario Government. The typhoid figures for 1911 have been gathered from the various city clerks, and, these having been tabulated on a basis of the number of deaths per 100,000 of population, the figures are given hereunder. Readers are cautioned that the number of deaths recorded opposite each place is, as we have said, on the basis of 100,000 of population and they do not represent the actual number of deaths. For instance, places like Chatham, Berlin or Woodstock had nothing like the actual number of deaths which are opposite their names, but if these places had 100,000 of population, then in the same proportion the deaths would have been such as are shown.

Another point to remember is that the mortality from this disease in the larger cities is swelled somewhat by the sending to them from other municipalities of cases for treatment. Four o. London's eight actual deaths in 1911 were outsiders, so that so far as its citizens are concerned the ratio of deaths was really only one-half that shown in the tabulation. Similarly, one-half of the deaths in Woodstock were of outsiders.

Port Arthur's appalling death rate from this disease is no doubt largely due to the number of outsiders treated there. In fact, the lumber and mining camps, where infection is at a maximum, sometimes show a low ratio because patients are hurried off to the nearest hospital for treatment. It will be remembered that Sarnia had a broken intake pipe last year, which accounts for the very high record in that place.

The usual source of infection is impure milk or water and the fact that Toronto's rate is now so low is very reassuring in view of the recent great impurity of our water supply.

It is hoped that a publication of these statistics will be useful in stimulating those in communities where the death rate is unusually high to take some action towards better sanitary conditions. This, while being of greatest benefit tro the community concerned, should indirectly be of assistance to our life companies; and life insurance men would do well to follow this matter up where circumstances seem to warrant it. The tabulation is as follows:

Mr. John Horner, section foreman on G.T.R. at Millbrook, is retiring and will be given a position in keeping with his age at Peterborough or Lindsay.

ADDRESS TO THE CANADIAN CLUB ON ONTARIO

Meeting To-night is at Y.M.C.A. Commencing at Eight O'clock.

The Canadian Club officers would like to see a large attendance at the last meeting of the season, which will be held to-night at the Y.M.C.A., commencing at eight o'clock sharp.

The speaker is Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., of Toronto, and his subejet will be "Ontario."

The report of the nominating committee is to be received, at this meeting.

IS APPOINTED TO DISTRICT IN TORONTO

Promotion for Mr. John Rothwell by Metropolitan.

Mr. John Rothwell, local superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company for the past seven years and four months, has again been honored by an upward jump in the service of the Metropolitan. This time Mr. Rothwell goes to Toronto to assume the superintendency of one of the Toronto districts, a very responsible appointment. He is to take over his new duties, Monday, May 6.

During his stay in Peterborough, Mr. Rothwell has won numerous friends, in both business and social circles. His district recently won the honor of transacting the largest volume of business of any district wherein the Metropolitan is established, a fact which was celebrated by a banquet at the Oriental.

The vacancy at the local office will be filled temporarily by an inspector from the Home Office, until such time as a suitable man can be found to take the office of superintendent. A new district has been created with headquarters at Kingston, Ont., and Mr. E. G. Ferguson of the local office has been appointed to take charge.

FIVE YEAR TERM IMPOSED ON CROSS; HAS BAD RECORD

Joseph Cross, who was arrested some time ago, and charged with an unnatural offence, came up for trial before Judge Huycke yesterday at the County Court, and was sentenced to five years in the penitentiary.

He pleaded guilty. Evidence was produced to show that the accused had been in prison on previous occasions.

DREDGE HANDS HAD COLD BATH; RAN THE SLIDE

Sam Neil and Fred Bonneville, of No. 8 dredge, took their annual bath on Sunday morning and incidentally ran the big slide of the dam in a punt, the punt being bottom up when they got to the bottom of the slide and going about twenty miles an hour.

They had been up to the No. 7 dredge, which was above the dam, and in coming back, got caught in the current near the slide. There is only about three feet between the dam and the water here, and where the timbers reach out it is much less. One of these timbers struck the punt as she was going through and upset her, throwing both into the water. Bonneville held onto the punt, and Neil, after trying to frog it, decided also that the punt was the best for him and regained it again, meanwhile they were all going down the river at a furious pace. A rescue party ran down the shore and helped them out down near Mr. Bryant Scriver's boathouse and administered restoratives, after which, they were able to walk back to the dredge which is lying just below the foundry.—Hastings Star.

ANNUAL DISTRICT E. L. CONVENTION

The annual convention of Peterborough District Epworth Leagues is to be held this year in Lakefield, on May 17th, afternoon and evening. An excellent program has been prepared, and delegates from all the Leagues in the district are expected to attend in as large numbers as possible.

Speakers of note have been secured in the person of Rev. Dr. Smith, Peterborough Methodist missionary in China, at present in Toronto; Rev. Mr. Farewell, Sunday school secretary, and Rev. Isaac Couch, of George street Methodist church.

The convention will be held in the Methodist church, Lakefield.

The Seashore

The Grand Trunk Railway aims and intends to make New London and its environments a popular seaside resort. The first move in this direction is the inauguration of an up-to-date night express service service between Montreal and New London, which will have connection at Montreal for passengers eastbound and westbound between Chicago and Montreal and intermediate points. Such well known resorts as Fisher's Island, Watch Hill, Block Island, and Long Island, which are in the immediate vicinity of New London, will be reached with ease and comfort. There are splendid hotels at these places to suit the pockets of all, and many delightful cottages are open to those who desire more exclusive accommodation. A handsome booklet profusely illustrated will be mailed free on application to A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Toronto, Ont.

ADDITIONAL PASSENGER SERVICE ON C. P. R. FROM LOCAL STATION IN JUNE

A direct train between Toronto and Ottawa will be the chief feature of the new timetable of the Canadian Pacific, effective the first week in June. This train will make few stops and is intended to give a fast service between the two cities, irrespective of connections at either end. It will be quite parliamentary.

But this is not the only change. There will be a new local train from Toronto to Havelock, leaving the Union Station at 8.20 in the morning, and returning to Toronto at 7.20 in the evening. By reason of this new train, the two day express between Toronto and Havelock will be relieved of all the local traffic between Havelock and Toronto. These day expresses leave and arrive at Toronto at 9 a.m. and 7 p.m. respectively. At present they are overworked. The Tweed accommodations up and down will remain about as they are.

The Ottawa train will probably leave Toronto as late as 11.30 at night, and will be the first to come in the morning. It will be to and from the Union Station, and will be a high-class train in every respect, and will, especially during the session, carry more passengers than any train going or coming into the city to the east. It will have high-class equipment.

SOME PEOPLE FORGET AND ADD TO TROUBLE OF GARBAGE COLLECTORS

Mr. C. A. Spence, Sanitary Inspector, is meeting with a very fair degree of success, considering the short period that the office has been established, and the difficulties which are sure to be encountered, in commencing a system, such as garbage collection, to the satisfaction of all. The three new wagons placed on the road by Mr. Scriver are becoming familiar now, and the men who drive them are experts in manipulating the garbage barrel and other receptacles of refuge. There are two single horse wagons and one team, but Mr. Spence thinks it may be necessary for Scriver to secure another wagon. The first day's collections were made from all the hotels, fruit and fish stores and restaurants lying in the section from Charlotte street to George, and Water street to Aylmer. Each wagon collected just one load, which shows that their hauls were not exceptionally heavy. In many cases hotel owners have existing arrangements with butchers and stock dealers, for the removal of purely refuse matter from the hotel yards, the refuse being found to answer the purposes of food for pigs and other farm stock. Of course this lightens the duties of the collectors to quite an extent.

Many householders, although served with notices to have convenient and suitable receptacles for refuse, at their houses, have failed to provide them, consequently the collectors have some difficulty in their work. One lady happened to be called upon by the Sanitary Inspector while one of the garbage wagons was at her place. The inspector inquired why she had failed to be provided with a garbage barrel, after receiving a notice, and was informed that it had been burned without thinking.

Only garbage is being accepted by the collectors that has accumulated since May 1st. Many residences have no place for the wagons to drive into the yards and the garbage barrels and receptacles have to be carried out to the wagons. In other instances wagons must be backed into lanes owing to lack of room for turning around.

The second day the wagons made a little over four hundred and fifty calls. The garbage is being dumped on the Hilliard property at the north end of the city at present.

The district from which garbage will be collected to-morrow lies between the Grand Trunk Railway on the west to George street on the east, Smith street north and Murray street south.

MEETING FOR BOY SCOUTS TO-NIGHT

The first and third troop of Peterboro Boy Scouts, are reminded of the special meeting to be held in the Armories to-night at 7.30 o'clock Color Sergeant Waterman, of the 57th Regiment, has promised to give his assistance to the local scout movement and will be present to-night.

DEATH OF MR. JOHN IRWIN

Passed Away at Omemee—Funeral on Sunday.

The many Peterborough friends of Mr. John Quinn of Omemee, will be sorry to learn of his death which took place at his home near Omemee yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Irwin has resided near Omemee for many years and has won the esteem and respect of all of the large circle of his acquaintances, many of whom live in the city. His former friends will be grieved to learn of his demise, and extend their sincerest sympathy to the bereaved family.

The late Mr. Irwin is survived by his sorrowing wife, one son at home, and a daughter, Mrs. F. Degen, of this city. Two brothers, James of Victoria county and William of Emily county also survive.

The funeral will be held on Sunday next at two o'clock to the Omemee cemetery.

HORSE BROKE CLEAR OF BUGGY

Mr. Wm. Bradshaw of Monaghan Had Exciting Experience

Mr. Wm. Bradshaw, of South Monaghan, while in the city this morning, in connection with a deal in cattle with Messrs. Thos. Brown and Wm. Morris, met with a mishap near the G.T.R. station, that might have under other circumstances, proved very serious.

Mr. Bradshaw, and little daughter, Cora, were driving in a buggy when the horse stepped on a flattened stovepipe in such a manner that the animal's leg was lacerated. The horse frightened, and managed to free itself, from the buggy, by breaking parts of the harness. Mr. Bradshaw had acted promptly and was thus able to get his daughter out of the buggy. The horse made for a fence and demolished part of the structure and damaged the lawn before being caught.

COL. ASTOR'S MILLIONS

His Son Vincent Gets an Inheritance of $60,000,000.

New York, May 3.—With the body of Col. John Jacob Astor arriving in Halifax, with Mrs. Ava Willing Astor hurrying across the Atlantic to this city, and with Mrs. John Jacob Astor approaching motherhood climax in that austere Fifth avenue speculation concerning the terms of the Astor will has become intense.

One of the great dramas of present day social life is fast drawing to a climax in that austere Fifth avenue mansion, and its various personages are priming themselves for a final struggle that involves many millions. In the ocean of talk that seethes about them no one apparently realizes that the denouement is already written.

Col. Astor made no will which is known of in this country since his second marriage.

The outstanding fact in connection with the Astor inheritance is this: Eighty per cent. of the Astor estate is left as it was left to John Jacob Astor by his father, William Astor, goes to Vincent Astor.

The remaining twenty per cent. goes to the other children. At present there is but one other child, Muriel, ten years old. Should there be issue from the second wife, this child will share the twenty per cent. with Muriel.

With the terms of this bequeathal John Jacob Astor had nothing to do. They were made by his father, William, and have been on file in the surrogate's office for over forty years, but have never before been published.

When William Astor died, the estate amounted to approximately $30,000,000. At the present time it amounts to $75,000,000.

Of this $75,000,000 all but a few millions is in the entailed astate. Thus, Vincent Astor's inheritance will be approximately $60,000,000. If there is no issue from the second marriage, Muriel Astor will receive approximately $15,000,000.

The young man is not of age. In five months he will be twenty-one years old. And he is the first man in the lineal descent of the family, who will hold his fortune in fee simple, to do with as he pleases. There will be no trustees to watch over him, as there were to watch over his father, and if he chooses to make a will or to make any disposition of his property in his own life, he will be in a position to do with it as he pleases.

When Miss Madeline Force married Col. Astor, she signed away all claims to any dower rights in the estate for a cash settlement of $200,000.

Therefore, herself or his family or her friends will have no opportunity to contest the will, and she has but one chance to increase her fortune. That will be in the presentation of a posthumous heir. The arrival of this heir has been confidently predicted as due at any time after the 1st of June.

Mrs. Ava Willing Astor does not share in the estate, having forfeited her dower in return for the income from the Knickerbocker hotel, amounting to $60,000 a year. At her death, this will revert to the estate.

IMMEDIATE ACTION IS NECESSARY SAYS THE MAYOR ON BIG SEWAGE PROBLEM

Immediate action, in the opinion of Mayor Bradburn and the City Council offers the only solution to the big question which confronts them, of preventing a writ being issued against the city for sewage pollution of the Otonabee river. The township residents are thoroughly agreed upon preventing it as quickly as possible, and the city, therefore, is prepared to go ahead with any remedial agency feasible. The city authorities realize that the appellants are right in their complaints, and are agreeable to alleviate present conditions as far as lies in their power.

Mayor Bradburn and some of the city fathers, accompanied by Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Medical Health Officer of Ontario, with the consulting engineer of the Provincial Board, visited the city's sewage outlet yesterday afternoon for the purpose of inspection. The engineer did not suggest anything definite, except endorsing what Dr. McCullough explained what was necessary to the Council on Wednesday night. The city will have to have their city engineer prepare plans for some system of filtering and purifying the water, which must pass the Provincial Board of Health. Either an Imhoff sedimentation tank must be constructed, or some other system that will purify the sewage and satisfy the townships. According to the Provincial Board of Health regulations, the city has perfect liberty to proceed with the construction of a system without coming to the people for permission to raise the money.

Mayor Bradburn states that quick action must be taken to save the city from being involved in a legal action. Also if such a system is carried through, that it should be well done, and to meet the purposes required, for years to come when the city's population will be greatly increased.

Meanwhile, no action will be taken until further communication is received from the Provincial Board.

Since the amendment to the Health Act this year, all sewer construction work in the city, payable by debentures, must be passed upon by the Provincial Board.

OVER THE TRANS.-SIBERIAN RAILWAY

Over the Trans-Siberian Railway

Following closely upon the arrangements the Canadian Pacific Railway has made with the Austrian Government for the privilege of running observation cars upon their lines, with the same enterprise the C.P.R. simultaneously made provision for Around the World tickets, to be good over the Trans-Siberian Railway. The traveller taking this route has various options according to the fares paid and connection with the railway—which has never before opened its arms to any outsider, can be made by the Canadian Pacific Railway's Royal Mail Transpacific Steamships at Yokohama, Kobe, Nagasaki and Shanghai and thence by a variety of routes in connection with the Trans-Siberian. The whole time required for the entire trip from Vladivostock to Dairen to Moscow or St. Petersburg is between nine and ten days. The whole distance between Vladivostock and Moscow is about 5,425 miles, and between Vladivostock and St. Petersburg about 5,600 miles. The journey is through most interesting country. Siberia is a land of great fertility, well wooded and watered, and along the routes are many important towns and cities which are bound to attract attention of the tourist. A magnificent panorama is afforded the traveller by the delightful scenery of the great lake Baikal, consisting of 35,000 square miles, and the tunnel and loops by which the Khingan mountains are crossed possess great interest. The trains carry sleeping and dining cars, in which meals are served at reasonable rates. It must not be overlooked that all travellers in Russian territory must be provided with a passport issued by his own government and bearing the signature of the Russian Consul, which has to be presented to the Russian authorities on entering and leaving Russia and when staying over night at hotels in Russia.

Homeseeker's and Settler's Train to Camrose, Edmonton and Western Canada.

Via Chicago and St. Paul, will leave Toronto 10.30 p.m., Tuesday, April 30th, via G. T. R. System, for Camrose, Edmonton and points in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Stopping at all points on Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, west of Winnipeg. Through coaches and Pullman Tourist Sleepers will be carried, fully equipped with bedding and porter in charge. Berths may be secured in these cars at a low rate. This is an exceptional opportunity for those wishing to take advantage of the remarkably low one way settlers rates or round trip homeseekers' excursions through the American cities, no change of cars. Full particulars, berth reservations, etc., from any Grand Trunk Agent, or write A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

ELLIS CONFESSES TO KILLING PORTER; MEN HAD DUEL

Brother-in-Law of Dead Man Says the Trapper Fired on Him and They Fought on the Lonely Road---Lived In Terror of Porter for Years---The Story as Told by Ellis.

First Bullet Fired by Porter Went Wide—Ellis Hid Behind Trees and Shot at His Victim.

Minden, May 4.—Arthur A. Ellis, brother-in-law, and sworn enemy of Lew Porter, the farmer and trapper, who was shot on the lonely road at the edge of Ellis' little farm in the dusk of Thursday evening, confessed to the shooting of Porter to Provincial Detective Reburn, who arrested him at his farm on the Cameron road early yesterday morning. He repeated the confession last night.

Ellis requested permission to go into the box and tell his story at Coroner Pogue's inquest last night. The little courthouse has never seen such a crowd as packed it and overflowed in gossiping groups, who waited at the close for word from the luckier ones who had succeeded in gaining entry. He said that on Thursday evening, the night of the shooting, he noticed Porter passing his house going north on the Cameron road. The witness soon after went south along the road to look for some stray cattle, but was unable to find them. He returned to his house to get his dog and gun. After this he went north still looking for the cattle. He met Porter who was returning to his father's house, which is a little south and off the road from Ellis' farm. He asked Porter if he had seen the cattle. Porter answered, "No. Is it cattle you are looking for or is it me you want to get?" Ellis says he replied that if it was Porter he wanted he could easily have found him long before.

Ellis declared that they walked some distance together and then Porter said, "Damn you, if you want me you can get me right now." Porter turned and fired at Ellis, but the bullet went wide. Ellis raised his gun and said, "Lew, that will do," and Porter then went on down the road. Ellis said that he went on to the open land, where he had expected to find his cattle, but not finding them he started back for his house. He saw Porter coming back toward him. Ellis stepped into concealment under a tree and when Porter had passed he spoke to him. Porter wheeled about again and opened fire on him. This time the bullet barely missed his face. Ellis hid behind the trees and fired three shots, all of which took effect. He says he cannot remember whether it was two or three shots which he fired. but dropped as the last shot was discharged.

He walked cautiously to the form upon the ground and found that Porter was dead. He then grasped the body by the collar and hauled it around a road which he had used the previous winter for taking out wood, and hid it behind the upturned stump of a fallen tree. Then he hid the rifle, where it was found behind a log close to the road.

Lewis Porter, the father of the murdered man, went over his story as previously told on the spot. Edith Porter, the 14-year-old daughter of the victim, told of having met Ellis on the day after the shooting and that he wanted to talk with her, but that she would have nothing to say to him. C. Kellett, the man who found the body, told of coming down the hill behind the log, behind which it lay and finding the hidden corpse.

Constable Welch of Minden, who was with Provincial Detective Reburn, when the confession was made, confirmed Ellis' story as virtually that which he had told in his confession earlier in the day.

The inquest was adjourned till Monday night.

Detective Reburn drove to the little farm six miles from here yesterday morning. He found Ellis attending to his chores, and led him to the scene of the murder, which is on a rise of ground about 200 rods toward Minden, along the road. The officer took Ellis over every inch of the road dwelling upon the ghastly markings, which are still present, and Ellis, who appeared upon the verge of a breakdown, when interviewed by the press at this same spot, two days ago, completely collapsed.

He declared that he had been in terror of Porter for four years, ever since his wife and Porter's sister died in child birth, and from what all the Porter family had declared to be Ellis' neglect. The man was a pitiful sight as he told his story. He kept running his long, nervous fingers through his shock of curly gray sandy hair, and scraping at his unshaven chin in nervous unrest.

The burden of his secret had been too great, for as he lay in his shack, every wheel that passed on the road seemed to him to mean some one coming for him. One day he went into Kinmount, 18 miles away, to do some work, hoping to drive away the terror from his mind by companionship, but every man he met seemed to accuse him of his crime. He became possessed with a hunger to share his secret, which he could resist no longer under the questioning of the detectives. This is Ellis' story:

Reburn and Constable Welch took their prisoner to Minden. He was handcuffed and carefully guarded. He is lodged in the lock-up here, but will be taken to Lindsay after he has been arraigned before Magistrate Fielding and remanded.

When Ellis was arrested he asked permission to write a letter to his father. The following was written in his little shack at Gull Lake:

"Dear Father,—I am arrested for the shooting of Porter. I admit doing it Of course it was self defence. Please forgive me for telling you what I did. I will be taken to Minden. I want you to pick up everything around here and rent the place to someone, as I don't expect I will get a trial till fall. Come to Minden as soon as you can and see me.

Signed "A. A. Ellis."

WIDOW GETS HER LIBERTY

Toronto, May 4.—After three days spent in jail, Mrs. Lillian Murphy, the widow with four children who was sentenced to two weeks in jail by Judge Winchester for the theft of five dollars, was released yesterday.

Detective Finch, who had furnished the crown with the information, was placed in the witness box. According to his story the version given at the time the woman was sentenced was not quite correct.

He stated that Mrs. Sturgeon of Carleton place, who was waiting to take a train from the C.P.R. Royce avenue station, had placed her chatelaine bag, containing a five-dollar bill, over the back of a chair and, forgetting it for the moment, rushed out to see if the train was coming. When she returned it was gone.

Mrs. Murphy, who was employed as a matron at the station, on being accused, broke down and admitted taking it. She had apparently repented her act as soon as committed, as she had torn the five-dollar bill into little pieces and threw them in the waste paper, basket, being afraid to return it.

In discharging Mrs. Murphy, Judge Winchester said: "I am doing this because I am informed your health is bad and for the sake of your children. I am acting somewhat beyond my jurisdiction, but I think the circumstances justify me."

A MESSAGE FROM MINIA

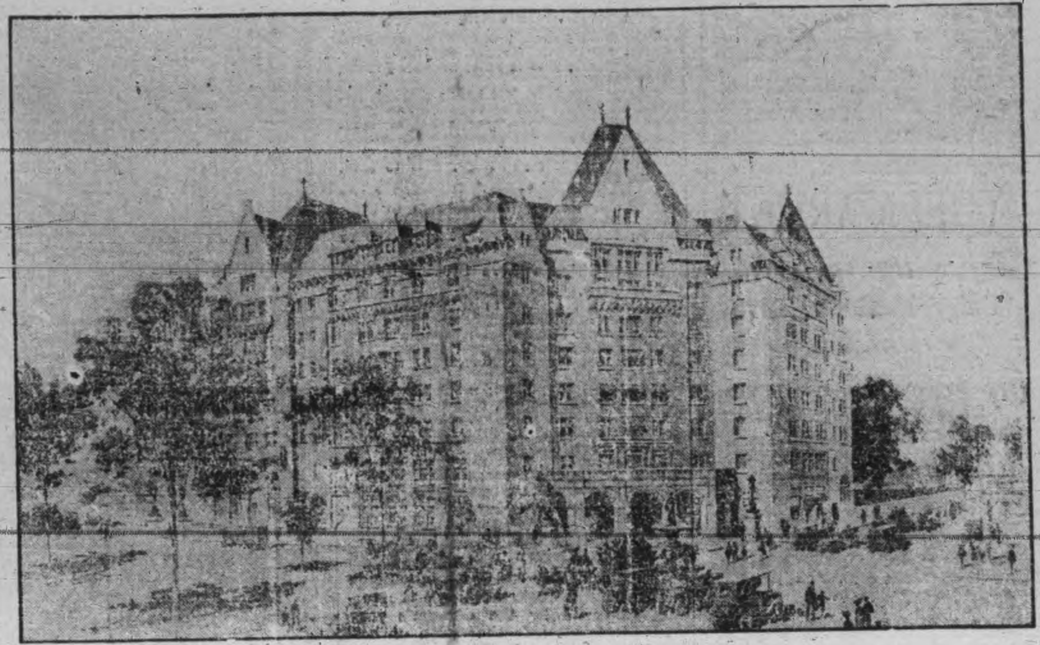
New York, May 4.—P. V. G. Mitchell, Halifax agent of the White Star Line, transmitted yesterday to the company here a wireless message which was received from the steamship Minia, which had been searching for bodies in the vicinity of the Titanic's ocean grave. The message, dated Thursday, follows:

"Returned to position last night during east gale and fog and searched all day; found no bodies; omitted giving you following: Joseph Finney, second-class, rubber merchant, Brown Building, Liverpool; Thomas Mullin, Badge No. 32, steward. Have searched from latitude 49,25 eastward to 48, and north from 41.20 to 41.50. No doubt some single bodies remain; no groups. As they cannot be seen more than half a mile, you will understand how difficult it is to search every square mile for them. Regret must leave Friday night, but will make another search to-morrow. Passed one body during dense fog; unable to find it afterward."

BRAKEMAN FELL TO HIS DEATH

Toronto, May 4.—James H. Wray, a brakeman, living at 27 Euclid avenue, was killed by a freight train in the Grand Trunk yards just west of Bathurst street yesterday morning. Last night Coroner Dr. Hardy opened an inquest and adjourned till May 9. Wray was walking across the top of a long strip of freight cars when he slipped and fell between two cars, his body being mangled by the wheels. Wray had been a railroad man for 25 years. His wife died eight months ago. He is survived by two daughters and two sons, the latter being workmen on the railroad.

THE GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC'S PALATIAL HOTEL AT EDMONTON



Active operations are soon to be started in forging the third link of the chain of hotels which the Grand Trunk Pacific are to erect throughout Western Canada.

For some time. Messrs. Ross & McFarlane, architects, of Montreal and Winnipeg, have been engaged in the preparation of drawings for a hotel at Edmonton, Alberta, and within a few weeks the actual work of building will commence.

The site chosen for the hotel is possibly unequalled anywhere in Western Canada. for it combines convenience to the business centre with a wonderful outlook over the valley of the Saskatchewan River. The building is to be located on McDougall street, almost at the crossing of Jasper Avenue, and directly opposite to the Edmonton Club.

The main entrance has been placed at the corner of McDougall street, and a private thoroughfare, which has been widened sufficiently to provide a splendid outlook for the rooms along the north side of the hotel.

From the rotunda a spacious corridor leads right and left, the former to a large, well-lighted, octagonal palm parlor, the latter to the cafe. and main dining room, while midway along this corridor on either side is the coat room and ante room, the latter leading to the buffet, barber shop and billiard room.

Between the ground floor and the first bedroom floor a mozzanic gallery provides space of ladies' parlor and drawing room, fronting on McDougal street.

Above the mozzanic floor are five typical bedroom floors, making seven stories in all, and giving two hundred sleeping chambers, each room having a private bath room, arranged so that it may be rented singly or on suite.

The interior decorations and furnishings will be in keeping with the rest of the building, and the hotel when completed should play a big part in the future development of the city of Edmonton.

JEWISH RABBI CREATES SENSATION AT HALIFAX

He Opened Coffins and Took Away Remains of Ten Hebrews Without the Authorities Being Aware of the Fact—Big Crowd, Clergymen and Band Present at Cemetery When Episode Is Discovered.

Halifax, May 4.—A sensation was created at Fairview Cemetery yesterday afternoon when the funeral services began over the bodies of the unidentified Titanic dead. A big crowd was present, a military band was there and half a dozen clergymen were on hand to officiate in the interment exercises.

The plan for the burial was to inter the bodies in a long trench, each body numbered and a corresponding number to be placed on a slab over the graves when filled up, so that the remains could be exhumed should this be necessary in the future.

When the officials, including representatives of the White Star Line, arrived, it was found that ten bodies were missing. The interment went on, however, of the incomplete number in spite of some confusion. It developed when enquiries were made that the ten vacant graves should have been occupied by the remains of Hebrews and that the bodies had been taken away in the forenoon by the Jewish rabbi with some of the principal Hebrews of the city and had been deposited in the mortuary room of the Jewish cemetery.

The rabbi had been given nine Hebrew bodies at the morgue after his report to the registrar of deaths that he had found them to be Hebrews. This was all right, but the rabbi said he had had no opportunity of examining the other bodies at the cemetery awaiting interment which had been taken out previously to his investigation at the morgue. He therefore repaired to the cemetery, opened the coffins waiting for interment, satisfied himself that they were bodies of Hebrews and forthwith, with some assistants, had them taken to the Jewish burying ground.

Nothing was said to any of the officials about his intention, but the rabbi acted thus promptly, he says, because if he had waited the burial would have taken place and it would have been too late. The authorities' action is awaited.

The burial permit distinctly states that the interment was to be at Fairview Cemetery. The rabbi went over all the bodies at the morgue and reports that of 190 brought in by the Mackay-Bennett, 43 are Hebrews.

Of the 98 bodies still in the morgue, 43 have been claimed by friends and shipped to destination; permits for the burial of 58 unidentified have been issued and the baby boy will be buried to-day by the crew of the Mackay-Bennett.

The 98 that remain are all identified.

FOUND REMAINS OF SPORTSMAN

Kingston, May 4.—Last October Bernard McColl, aged 23, drug clerk of Rochester, N.Y., was visiting at his home, Camden East, when he went out on a hunting trip and disappeared. The police scoured the country, but he could not be located. To-day his body was found in the woods near Newburg and his rifle lay at his side. It is supposed his gun was accidentally discharged. Little more than his bones remained. The rifle lay in front of the remains and was discharged. He is survived by his mother, a widow.

Fifty British Financiers Coming.

Ottawa, May 4.—Arrangements have just been completed for the visit to Canada next mont hof some fifty representatives of the best known business and industrial firms of Great Britain. They include chairmen and directors of corporations renowned throughout the world, representing a total capitalization of approximately $200,000,000. The London Chamber of Commerce and other British Boards of Trade will also be represented in the party.

The party will arrive June 6 at Quebec and will tour Canada and become acquainted with the resources of the Dominion.

HAS NOT BEEN ADVISED

No Confirmation of Report of Tait's Appointment

Special to the Review.

Ottawa, May 4.—Wm. Wainwright, vice-president and acting head of the Grand Trunk who is here to-day, knows nothing confirmatory of the London report that Sir Thomas Tait has been selected to succeed the late Charles M. Hays. "Should such appointment have been made," said Mr. Wainwright, "I think I would have been advised otherwise than through the newspapers."

London, May 4.—Sir Thomas Tait yesterday was chosen president of the Grand Trunk Railway, to succeed Charles M. Hays, who was lost in the Titanic disaster, says a story current here to-day.

The officials of the line, however, vigorously deny the report and say that it is utterly without basis.

Sir Thomas is well known. He was formerly connected with both Grand Trunk and the Canadian Pacific Railway, and is one of the foremost authorities on railroads in Great Britain.

Sir Thomas James Tait, son of Dr. Melbourne Tait, was born in Melbourne, Que., July 4, 1864. He received a high school and McGill University education and in 1880 entered the railway service. He was first a clerk in the audit office of the G.T.R. at Montreal, but in July, 1881, became clerk in the office of the assistant to the president of the Chicago and G.T. Railway. He was next clerk in the solicitor's office at Belleville, was then clerk in the general manager's office, and then from October, 1882, till September, 1886, was private secretary to the vice-president and general manager of the C.P.R. For the next six months he was clerk in the general traffic manager's office, and in May, 1887, became assistant superintendent of the C.P.R. at Moose Jaw.

From Feb. 1, 1889, until March 12, 1890, he was superintendent of the Ontario division, with headquarters at Toronto, and for the next three years was general superintendent of the Ontario and Quebec divisions. For four years he was manager of transportation of all C.P.R. lines, when he resigned in 1903 to become chairman of the Victorian railways commission at Melbourne, Australia, from which post he resigned in September, 1910. He was knighted in 1911. In Australia he brought the almost bankrupt state railways to a paying basis.

TWO MAY HAVE LOST THEIR LIVES

Walls of Candy Factory Collapsed—Many Girls in Building

Special to the Review.

Toronto, May 4.—Two persons may have been killed, and at least twelve were seriously injured when the walls of Neilson's new candy factory on Gladstone Avenue collapsed at eleven o'clock this morning, precipitating many of the workers into the basement and burying them under a tangled mass of debris. About two hundred were working in the section of the building which fell, the majority of them being girls.

Overheard 'Phone Conversation.

Calgary, Alta., May 4.—Because he alleges that he overheard a conversation not intended for his ears, that was being conducted over the telephone, J. B. Royal, a builder's supply man of this city, has instituted proceedings against Edwin J. Albert and T. E. McCauley, contending that they were parties to a conspiracy to monopolize the builders' supply business.

Both Linemen May Recover.

Kingston, May 4.—Although suffering from a fractured skull from a fall Clarence Hays is still alive, and the doctors say he has a chance of recovery. He alighted on his head.

Peter Currier, a Toronto man, is doing well. He had two ribs broken in his fall off a pole. Hays come here recently from Napanee.

FINAL SETTLEMENT IS NOW IN SIGHT

Washington, D.C., May 4.—The Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Hon. J. Douglas Hazen, and Sir Edward Morris, the Newfoundland Premier, on the one side, and Chandler Anderson, solicitor for the Department of State, on the other, are expected to confer here next week regarding the regulations to be adopted by the two Governments to carry out the award of The Hague arbitration regarding the North American fisheries.

The arbitrators left for the adjustment of the two Governments a few things involving no question of principle, but of considerable importance to the fishermen, the settlement of which must be determined by the development of facts unknown to the arbitrators at the time the decision was rendered. It is expected that next week's conference will result in a permanent settlement of the last of the issues connected with the fisheries, which have caused friction between the two countries for the last century.

JUDGE MABEE PASSED FAIRLY RESTFUL NIGHT

Special to the Review.

Toronto, May 4.—At eleven o'clock this morning St. Michael's Hospital reported that Judge Mabee's condition had shown no improvement since midnight, although he had passed a fairly restful night.

MINERS ARE HOPEFUL; CALL CONVENTION TO ASK FOR FURTHER POWERS

LORD STRATHCONA.

London, May 4.—Lord Strathcona has accepted the presidency of the great Imperial Exhibition, which is to be held in 1915, and which is intended to demonstrate to the world the capabilities of the British Empire.

The committee intend that each Dominion as well as the Mother Country shall be fittingly represented with the object if possible, of making the exhibition a better expression of what a world-wide empire can achieve than has ever yet been accomplished.

The Anthracite Boards of the U. S. Issue a Call For a General Meeting of the Miners' Delegates—Will Urge That Recent Agreement Be Rejected and Committee Authorized to Try For Another One.

New York, May 4.—After being in conference for four hours yesterday, the members of the three anthracite boards issued a call for a general convention at Wilkesbarre, Pa., on May 14, to consider the tentative agreement entered into by the sub-committees representing the operators and the mine workers, and which was rejected by the full committee of the miners in joint conference with the operators here Thursday. The convention also will be urged to empower the committee of ten to enter into a second joint conference with the operators and conclude an agreement subject to ratification by a referendum vote of the mine workers.

"Negotiations have not been broken off," said William Green, who is acting for President White of the United Mine Workers, "and we have arranged for another conference with the operators after the Wilkesbarre convention. We are confident that an agreement will be reached."

Those who participated in the conferences here left for their homes last night.

The operators' committee of ten also issued a statement reiterating their conviction that the leaders of the mine workers can secure the ratification by the miners of the agreement signed after discussion and deliberation by all the members of the subcommittee, after consultation with the members of the general committees on both sides. Under the circumstances, therefore, they say, they cannot be expected to advance any further proposition in view of the great care and thoroughness with which this one was prepared and in view of the authority and standing of the mine workers' representatives who took part in its preparation.

KIDNAPPED AND THEN DEPORTED

Mexico City, May 4.—The deportation from Mexico Thursday of A. Z. and Joseph Rattner, president and manager, respectively, of the Tampico News Co., and dealers in general merchandize by application of the famous Article 33, providing for the banishment of pernicious foreigners, has caused a sensation.

The Rattners, who are Russian subjects, were accused of trafficking in arms and ammunition with Zapatistas. They were taken by a subterfuge without court process of any sort, and their families and associates were ignorant for 24 hours of their whereabouts. Both men were called to police headquarters under the pretext of a business transaction, and placed under arrest, and two hours later were escorted under guard to Vera Cruz. Thursday they were placed with the utmost secrecy on board the German steamer Corcovado.

Chicago Newspapers Strike.

Chicago, May 4.—The differences between the pressmen and the publishers of the principal Chicago dailies yesterday assumed the aspect of a determined contest, although the prospect for a settlement was believed by some to be not distant. Limited editions of the afternoon papers were printed and carried from the newspaper offices by wagons under guard.

The newsboys' union and the wagon drivers sided with the pressmen and none of the papers appeared on the usual street stands, and great difficulty was found in delivering papers which were printed.

One afternoon paper found its motor delivery wagons unfit for service, necessary parts having been taken from the mechanism, and horse-drawn vehicles were pressed into service.

CHARGED WITH THE MURDER OF WHOLE FAMILY

Special to the Review.

Kamloops, May 4.—The arrest has been made here of Charles Marzyok, supposed to be the man who last October murdered the entire family of William Showman, made up of father, mother and three children, at Ellsworth, Kansas.

WOMAN SAVED MAN'S LIFE

New York, May 4.—Daniel Buckley, who was a steerage passenger on the Titanic, in his testimony yesterday before Senator William Alden Smith, who is chairman of the U. S. Senate committee which is investigating the cause of the wreck, stated that a fireman who was on the steamer told him that the Titanic did not, he believed, hit an iceberg, but that while trying to make a record the boilers burst.

Regarding treatment of steerage passengers, Buckley said that he thought they were given as good an opportunity to escape as the first and second class passengers. He got into the sixth lifeboat to leave the ship, and when an order came for men to leave the boats, he was crying. A woman, whom he thought was Mrs. John Jacob Astor, saw him, and covered him up with a shawl in order that he might escape.

Boys Smoking Caused Fire.

Berlin, Ont., May 4.—Two boys smoking in a barn were responsible for a $2,500 fire at St. Clement's on Thursday night. The lads were in the village hotel barns, up in the hay loft having a smoke. The fire spread to the Catholic Foresters Hall, and at one time the whole village was threatened.

Fielding and Borden Silent.

London, May 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Hon. W. S. Fielding, who sailed for Canada yesterday, refused to be drawn out regarding the Roosevelt-Taft disclosures and wouldn't "discuss the subject from any viewpoint."

Sir Frederick Borden said: "Anything I could say wouldn't alter the situation or alter the argument of Canadians. It is obvious Taft was trying to persuade Roosevelt to his view. Taft is a politician and a very deep one. I think he is doing his utmost to carry his point."

AFTERNOON EXPRESS LEFT THE RAILS NEAR BURKETON

Baggage Cars and Mail Train Went Down Embankement—Passengers Not Seriously Injured.

Burketon, May 4.—Of the eight cars which composed the day express from Montreal on the Canadian Pacific Railway for Toronto, seven left the rails at Sandbank, five miles east of Burketon Junction at 5.30 last evening. Two baggage cars and a mail car rolled down the embankment, which at that point is about 30 feet high. The second-class car slid half way down the bank and lay upon its side. All the other coaches were off the rails save the sleeper at the end.

Strange to relate no one on the train was seriously injured. Two men went over the embankment in the baggage and mail cars, and one of them, Roy Maybee, a baggageman living at 163 St. Germain St., Montreal, was cut about the legs and severely bruised. He was attended by Dr. H. B. Anderson, of Toronto, who was on the train, and was subsequently taken to St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto.

Boy Was Identified.

Toronto, May 4.—Coroner Dr. Pickering opened an inquest last night into the death of John Whitehouse, the ten-year-old boy who was killed on the Brock avenue crossing Thursday night. No evidence was taken and the enquiry was adjourned till May 10. John Whitehouse was the son of a stoker in the Toronto Glass Works and lived at 150 Brock avenue. The mutilated body of the boy remained in the morgue for twelve hours before being identified by the father.

CLUB LICENSES DOOMED TOO

Ottawa, May 4.—"The impression that seems to have become prevalent that our policy does not include the wiping out of club licenses, is wrong."

Such was the statement of N. W. Rowell, who was in Ottawa yesterday.

Mr. Rowell stated that while club licenses were not expressly mentioned in the first clause of his resolution, it was the party's intention to wipe them out under its second clause.

Doctors Condemn Oily Liniments

The Public are Warned to Be Careful of These Strong-Smelling Oily Liniments Containing Harmful Acids, Ammonia, Etc.

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not—and they know.

Recently a number of these white, oily liniments were analyzed, and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when first applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation and causes endless trouble.

When a doctor warns you to quit using a white, oily liniment—do so. He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of the pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, Dr. Roberts stated that he considered a strong, penetrating, pain-subduing liniment such as "Nerviline," to be superior to any of the white, ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice he had witnessed cases of rheumatism, sciatica, and lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment—but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house always, because of cramps, diarrhoea, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache, and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first-class cure. There is scarcely an ache or a pain, internal or external, that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

A NOBLE ORATION

The Montreal Witness says:—"A truly noble oration is that spoken by Mr. Borden over the wires to an international press gathering in New York. Uttered from a quiet vacation retreat, it is, in its majestic sweep over the world, like a searchlight from without. It is an interesting contrast with the jocular utterances of Mr. Taft, spoken from between two election diatribes in Boston. It would be hard to utter nobler sentiments than those of Mr. Borden, or to utter them better, or to take a more comprehensive view of the faults and needs and hopes of our western civilization, with its engrossing and vulgarizing material pursuits. The improvement in the general well-being during the present generation is, he says, undeniable, but there is a dangerous inequality in the distribution of wealth. There always, he says, must be great inequality under an individualistic system, and we are left untold whether at bottom he condemns the individualistic system or not—that is, whether pure socialism is or is not his highest ideal. All will more or less follow him, however, in his declaration that in equality of opportunity lies the only path of safety for the democratic communities of today."

MORE THAN ONE REASON

There are Liberal papers who persist in saying that reciprocity was opposed because it was argued that increased trade with the United States would undermine the loyalty of Canada to the Empire. There was more than one reason why the reciprocity pact was believed to be contrary to the best interests of Canada, and one undoubtedly was because it would "make Canada only an adjunct of the United States," as President Taft confidentially told Mr. Roosevelt. The arrangement, if carried out, could have been ended at any time the United States chose to do so. An Act of Congress only would be required to terminate it. If it had been accepted, after it had been in operation some years, business interests would have developed that would be to a large extent dependent upon its continuance. This could have been used as a lever to obtain further concessions from Canada, and this country would have been dependent upon Congress for an undisturbed business condition. This state of dependence would not have been wise.

Canada at one time would probably have been ready to make a reciprocity treaty including a number of articles of trade. Since then she has expended her efforts and pledged her resources to provide other outlets, and has been exceedingly successful in doing so. If she had accepted the reciprocity pact, and later the United States had demanded further concessions, we would have been compelled to accept them or to begin again to look for and build up other channels of trade. Increased concessions to keep the arrangement in force would afford greater leverage for securing still further advantages from this country, and we would have been caught in a mesh from which it would have been exceedingly difficult to escape.

Perhaps those who still look with regret upon the defeated arrangement do not think that United States statesmen would have used it to affect the political relations of this country. But we have the statement of the President that his object was to make Canada "only an adjunct of the United States"; the letter of ex-President Roosevelt that he favored it "for political reasons," and the expression of the Democratic leader that "reciprocity meant annexation."

There were good political, as well as economical reasons for rejecting the proposed arrangement, and the "Adjuncters" may as well make up their minds that the majority of Canadians will not be persuaded to approve of it in the future.

SENATE REFORM

Senate reform has been a subject of discussion periodically during the past thirty years. Some have advocated a very radical reform—its entire abolition, but those who have found fault with its present constitution, have for the most part favored a less radical step and have suggested various methods of amending it.

In order to abolish, or perhaps reform or alter the constitution of the Senate, the consent of the provinces which, united in the confederation, would be necessary. The Senate was provided for in the act which established the confederation, and it would be difficult to change it without the approval of the parties to the agreement.

It is generally admitted that there are objectionable features in the present constitution of the Upper Chamber. It is not so easy, however, to agree on a method of amendment. If the senators were elected, as some have suggested, that would not do away with the danger of the Senate thwarting the will of the House of Commons, but would have a tendency to make the senators more aggressive as being elected representatives, as well as the members of the other chamber. Another proposal is to have the senators appointed by the Provincial Legislature, as is done in the United States. This would cause Dominion and Provincial politics to become more mixed than they are now. At present, an elector may support one party in the Dominion arena and another in the Provincial field without nullifying one vote by the other. But if the Provincial Legislatures elected the senators, a vote for a member of the legislature would have a direct effect upon the Dominion parliament. Many Liberals voted to defeat the discredited Ross government, who might have hesitated to do so if by so doing, they would have assisted to send opponents of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Ottawa.

The rejection by the Senate last session of important government measures passed in the Commons by large majorities, has given renewed vigor to the demand of Senate reform. It is felt that measures passed by the representatives of the people, should not be thrown out by a body not responsible to the electors, and it may be that a scheme of reform will be evolved that will remove objectionable features of the Senate's constitution without introducing others that would be equally objectionable.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The things that men do live after them. The late W. T. Stead was a believer in spiritualism, and since he lost his life in the Atlantic mediums have given out what they say are messages received from him from the other world. The alleged messages will not add to Mr. Stead's reputation as a journalist.

A New York paper protests that the Senate Committee did good service in its investigation of the Titanic disaster, "whether with technical skill or in landlubber fashion." But if the investigation had been guided by men who had knowledge of ocean steamers and the business of managing them on the ocean the facts might have been more fully and accurately brought out. It was scarcely to be expected that people would not smile at the ignorance displayed in some of the questions asked witnesses.

Girl Driven to Suicide.

Brantford, May 4.—Death by suicide under mental excitement was the verdict rendered by the coroner's jury at the inquest into the death of Lottie Gibson, whose body was recovered from the Holmedale mill race on Saturday last.

It was shown that the girl's frenzied determination to end her life was caused by the threatening contents of a letter which she received, the sender of which is alleged to have been Reginald Robbins. The letter referred to the girl's rejection of the writer and his intention to get even.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A Discovery of Vast Importance

It Is Now Admitted That Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Coughs, and Colds Can Only Be Quickly Cured By Mixing a New Medicine With the Air You Breathe.

Scientists acknowledge that medicated air treatment is the only treatment that will cure these diseases, and that stomach medicines are worse than useless.

Catarrhozone air treatment has been found to be the most effective way to cure all diseases of the throat, lungs, and nasal passages. Its action is so prompt that in less than an hour an ordinary cold is cured, and after a more thorough use of Catarrhozone, Bronchitis, Catarrh, and all diseases of the throat and lungs are completely cured.

Catarrhozone is a very simple and powerful method of treatment. You simply breathe it through the inhaler and it immediately passes over every air cell of the throat, lungs, and bronchial tubes, curing and healing as it goes.

Catarrhozone treatment affords little drops of healing for sore places in the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

Some glint of annoyance must have leaped to his eyes, for the lively countess glanced around with a mimic fright that testified to her skill as an actress.

"Good gracious!" she whispered, "Have I given you away? I couldn't guess you were here under a nom de vayoge—now, could I?—when that telegram has been staring at everybody for hours."

"You have misinterpreted my amazement, Lady Porthcawl," he said, spurred into self-possession by the hint at an intrigue. "I could not believe that time would turn back even for a pretty woman. You look younger than ever, though I have not seen you for——"

"Oh, hush!" she cried. "Don't spoil your nice speech by counting years. When did you arrive in England? Are you alone—really? You've grown quite a man in your jungles. Will you come to the lounge? I want ever so much to have a long talk with you. Mr. Ducrot is there—the financier, you know—but I have left him safely anchored alongside Maud Devar—a soft-furred old pussie who is clawing me now behind my back, I am sure. Have you ever met her? Wiggy Devar she was christened in Monte, because an excited German leaned over her at the tables one night and things happened to her coiffure. And to show you how broad-minded I am, I'll get her to bring downstairs the sweetest and daintiest American ingenue you'd find between here and Chicago, even if you went by way of Paris. Cythia Vanrenen is her name, daughter of the Vanrenen. He made, not a pile, but a pyramid, out of Milwaukees. She is it—a pukka Gibson girl, quite ducky, with the dearest bit of an accent, and Mamma Devar is gadding around with her in a mo-car. Do come!"

Medenham was able to pick and choose where he listed in answering this hail of words.

"I'm awfully sorry," he said, "but the telegram I have just received affects all my plans. I must hurry away at this instant. When will you be in town? Then I shall call, praying meanwhile that there may be no Ducrots or Devars there to blight a glorious gossip. If you bring me up to date as to affairs in Park Lane I'll reciprocate about the giddy equator. How—or perhaps I ought to say where—is Porthcawl?"

"In China," snapped her ladyship, fully alive to Medenham's polite evasion of her blandishments.

"By gad," he laughed, "that is a long way from Bournemouth. Well, good-bye. Keep me a date in Clarges Street."

"Clarges Street is off the map," she said coldly. "It's South Belgravia, verging on Pimlico, nowadays. That is why Porthcawl is in China . . . and it explains Ducrot, too."

An unconscious bitterness crept in to the smooth voice; Medenham, who hated confidences from the butterfly type of woman, nevertheless pitied her.

"Tell me where you live and I'll come around and hear all about it," he said sympathetically.

She gave him an address, and suddenly smiled on him with a yearning tenderness. She watched his tall figure as he strode down the hill towards the town to keep an imagninary appointment.

"He used to be a nice boy," she sighed, "and now he is a man. . . Heigh-ho, you're a back number, Millie, dear!"

But she was her own bright self when she returned to the bald-headed Ducrot and the bewigged Mrs. Devar.

"What a small world it is" she vowed. "I ran across Medenham in the hall."

The banker's forehead wrinkled in a reflective frown.

"Medenham?" he said.

"Fairholme's eldest son."

Mrs. Devar chortled.

"Such fun!" she said. "Our chauffeur calls himself George Augustus Fitzroy."

"How odd!" agreed Countess Millicent.

"You speak in riddles. Who or what is odd?" asked Ducrot.

"Oh, don't worry, but listen to that adorable waltz." Ducrot's polished dome compared badly with the bronzed skin of the nice boy who had grown to be a man, so her ladyship's rebellious tongue sought safety in silence, since she could not afford to quarrel with him.

It is certainly true that the gods make mad those whom they mean to destroy. Never was woman nearer to a momentous discovery than Mrs. Devar at that instant, but her active brain was plotting how best to develop a desirable acquaintance in Rodger Ducrot, financier, and she missed utterly the astounding possibility that Viscount Medenham and George Augustus Fitzroy might be one and the same person.

In any other conditions Millicent Porthcawl's sharp wits could scarcely have failed to ferret out the truth. Even if Cynthia were present it was almost a foregone conclusion that the girl would have told how Fitzroy joined her. The luncheon provided for a missing aunt, the crest on the silver and linen, the syle of the Mercury, a chance allusion to this somewhat remarkable chauffeur's knowledge of the South Downs and of Bournemouth, would surely have put her ladyship on the right track. From sheer enjoyment of an absurd situation she would have caused Fitzroy to be summoned then and there, if only to see Wiggy Devar's crestfallen face on learning that she had entertained a viscount unawares.

But the violins were singing the Valse Bleu, and Cynthia was upstairs, longing for an excuse to venture forth into the night, and three people, at least, in the crowded lounge were thinking of anything but the amazing oddity that had puzzled Ducrot, who did not con his Burke.

Medenham, of course, realized that he had been vouchsafed another narrow escape. What the morrow might bring forth he neither knew nor cared. The one disconcerting fact that already shaped itself in the mists of the coming day was Simmonds tearing breathlessly along the Bath Road during the all too brief hours between morn and evening.

It is not to be wondered at if he read Cynthia's thoughts. There is a language without code or symbol known to all youg men and maidens—a language that pierces stout walls and leaps wide valleys—and that unlettered tongue whispered the hope that the girl might saunter towards the pier. He turned forthwith into the public gardens, and quickened his pace. Arrived at the pier, he glanced up at the hotel. Of girls there were many on cliff and road way, girls summerlike in attire, girls slender of waist and airy of tread, but no Cynthia. He went on the pier, and met more than one pair of bright eyes, but not Cynthia's.

Then he made off in a fume to Dale's lodging, secured a linen dust-coat which the man happened to have with him, returned to the hotel, and hurried unseen to his room, an easy matter in the Royal Bath, where many staircases twine deviously to the upper floors, and brilliantly decorated walls dazzle the stranger.

He counted on the exigencies of Lady Porthcawl's toilette stopping a too early appearance in the morning and he was right.

At ten o'clock, when Cpnthia and Mrs. Devar came out, the men lounging near the porch were too interested in the girl and the car to bestow a glance on the chauffeur. Ducrot was there, bland and massive in a golf suit. He pestered Cynthia with inquiries as to the exact dates when her father would be in London, and Medenham did not hesitate to cut short the banker's awkward gallantries by throwing the Mercury into her stride with a whirl.

"By Jove, Ducrot," said someone, "your pretty friend's car jumped off like a gee-gee under the starting gate."

"If that chauffeur of hers was mine, I'd shoot him," was the wrathful reply.

"Why? What's he done?"

"He strikes me as an impudent puppy."

"Anyhow, he can swing a motor. See that!" for the Mercury had executed a corkscrew movement between several vehicles with the sinuous grace of a greyhound.

Now it was Mrs. Devar, and not Cynthia, who leaned forward and said pleasantly:

"You seem to be in a hurry to leave Bournemouth, Fitzroy."

"I am not enamored of bricks and mortar on a fine morning," he answered.

"Well, I have full confidence in you, but don't embroil us with the police, We have a good deal to see to-day, I understand."

Then he heard the strenuous voice addressing Cynthia.

"Millicent Porthcawl says that Glastonbury is heavenly, and Wells a peaceful dream. I visited Cheddar once, some years ago, but it rained, and I felt like a watery cheese."

Lady Porthcawl's cocmendation ought to have sanctiled Glastonbury and Wells—Mrs. Devar's blue-moldy joke might even have won a smile—but Cynthia was preoccupied; strange that she, too, should be musing of Simmonds and a hurrying car, for Medenham had told her that the transfer would take palce at Bristol.

She was only tweny-two, and her very extensive knowledge of the world had been obtained by three years of travel and constant association with her father. But her lines had always been cast in pleasant places. She had no need to deny herself any of the delights that life had to offer to youth and good health and unlimited means. The discovery that friendship called for discretion came now almost as a shock. It seemed to be a stupid social law that barred the way when she wished to enjoy the company of a well-favored man whom fate had placed at he disposal for three whole days. Herself a blue-blooded American, descendant of old Dutch and New England families, she was quite able to discriminate between reality and sham. Mrs. Devar, she was sure, was a pinckbeck aristocrat; Count Edouard Marigny might have sprung from many generations of French gentlemen, but her paid chauffeur was his superior in every respect save one—since, to all appearances, Marigny was rich and Fitzroy was poor.

Curiously enough, the man whose alert shoulders and well-poised head were ever in view as the car hummed joyously through the pine woods had taken on something of the mere mechanic in aspect since donning that serviceable lien coat. The garment was weather-stained. It bore records of over-lubrication, of struggles with stiff outer covers, of rain and mud—that bird-lime type of mud peculiar to French military roads in the Alpes Maritimes—while a zealous detective might have found traces of the black and greasy deposit that collects on the door handles and side rails of P. L. M. railway carriages. Medenham borrowed it because of the intolerable heat of the leather jacket. Its distinctive character became visible when he viewed it in the June sunshine, and he wore it as a substitute for sackcloth, since he, no less than Cynthia, recognized that a dangerous acquaintance was drawing to an end. So Dale's coat imposed a shield, as it were, between the two, but the man drove with little heed to the witching scenery that Dorset unfolded at each turn of the road, and the woman sat distrait, almost downcast.

Mrs. Devar was smugly complacent. Difficulties that loomed large overnight were now vague shadows. When the Mercury stopped in front of a comfortable inn at Yeovil it was she, and not Cynthia, who suggested a social departure.

WHERE DOCTORS FAILED TO HELP

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Green's Health—Her Own Statement.

Covington, Mo.—"Your medicine has done me more good than all the doctor's medicines. At every monthly period I had to stay in bed four days because of hemorrhages, and my back was so weak I could hardly walk. I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I can stay up and do my work. I think it is the best medicine on earth for women."—Mrs. JENNIE GREEN, Covington, Mo.

How Mrs. Cline Avoided Operation.

Brownsville, Ind.—"I can say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me more good than anything else. One doctor said I must be operated upon for a serious female trouble and that nothing could help me but an operation.

"I had hemorrhages and at times could not get any medicine to stop them. I got in such a weak condition that I would have died if I had not got relief soon.

"Several women who had taken your Compound, told me to try it and I did and found it to be the right medicine to build up the system and overcome female troubles.

"I am now in great deal better health than I ever expected to be, so I think I ought to thank you for it."—Mrs. O. M. CLINE, S. Main St., Brownsville, Ind.

Machinery and Matches.

A log of wood and a roll of paper are placed in a new matchmaking machine, and when human hands next touch the material it is all bound up in packages of one gross of boxes of matches ready for the consumer. During the process the machine cuts the wood into proper lengths, sulphurs the ends, counts them, makes the paper boxes, prints the labels on them, fills each box and packs them. The machine has been patented by a Norwegian match company.—Argonaut.

Our Postage Stamps.

A statistician has figured out that if all the stamps issued by the government during the past fiscal year were collected and laid end to end they would form a chain 18,000 miles long, about equal to the distance from New York to the Philippines. The number was 10,061,439,768, representing a face value of $180,957,385. Of the whole number 5,130,249,018 were two cent stamps and 3,798,961,039 were one cent stamps. But one thirty cent stamp was issued.

Chinese Sewing Bag.

As today is a day of fancy stitchery, of knitting, of crochet and of embroidery among women who are busy and women who are at leisure, workbags are very important. Hundreds of them are being made for gifts, but the newest idea is the bag of heavy Chinese mandarin embroidery, the top of which is run through a jade bracelet and the sides of which are trimmed with those funny little Chinese ornaments in green wood and beads that are put on the lanterns and can be bought at the oriental shops.

Avoiding Waste.

"Here's something clever," said Mr. Fadoogus to his wife. "Blimso, the novelty publisher, gave me this set of dinner cards to give to you with his compliments. They're a new idea he is pushing. They sell for 50 cents a set."

"How nice!" cooed Mrs. Fadoogus.

Two weeks later Mr. Fadoogus said:

"My dear, I do not want to find fault, but really I couldn't see any urgent reason for your giving that big dinner last night. It cost over $150, and I can't afford such expenses."

"Well, my goodness," she replied, "I had to do something to use up those place cards you brought home to me."

When Does a Man Need Life Insurance ?

When he comes to die. Nine men out of ten, no matter how prosperous thay may have been during some period in the past, will leave no other estate, or at least not enough of other assets to save their families from pinching poverty.

He needs life insurance before he dies, as, for example, when he finds himself no longer insurable. He knows he needs it when he cannot get it. He always intended to take insurance, or to add to the amount he already carries, but he deferred too long. Procrastination is the robber of widows and orphans.

He needs life insurance now—all he can possibly carry. He needs it now because to-morrow, or next month, or next month, or next year, by reason of accident or disease, he may be unable to get it.

He needs it because he is poor; or because, if fairly well to-do, he would yet not leave such a provision for his family as he would like to leave, if he were suddenly taken away.

He needs it because, though he may be rich, he knows that riches often "take themselves wings." He needs it because, being rich he is able to pay for it, while a little later he may be unable to pay, or unable to get it even if he can pay.

He needs it because he can buy it cheaper to-day than ever he can in the future. He must have it sometime, and every year adds to the price that he will have to pay.

You will find the most up-to-date policy of to-day issued by THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

DR. NORVAL'S NUTRITIVE HYPOPHOSPHITES

When a person feels "blue" — "all tired out" — "dosen't feel like doing anything" — "connot concentrate his mind on his work" — "feels weak mentally and physically" — "doubts his powers" — "complains of poor appetite and sleeplessness" — "suffers from headache" — Then his nervous system is run down and demands a good up-building tonic. Nervous exhaustion is a modern disease, caused by too close attention to business, overwork worry, cares, overstudy, etc.

Dr. Norval's Nutritive Hypophosphites forms the best nerve and brain food known, and have restored thousands of sufferers to health.

We sell it, and strongly recommend it.

CANADIAN CLUB SUGGESTS THAT DOMINION DAY BE CELEBRATED IN PETERBORO

Mr. W. R. Morris the New President of the Club — Mr. Johnstone Did Not Give His Address.

In one sense it might be considered unfortunate, but yet in another fortunate, that the Canadian Club was not honored by the presence of Mr. E. F. B. Johnstone, K.C., of Toronto, last evening, who was billed to deliver an address. Mr. Johnstone reached the city, however, but owing to a delay during transportation it was too late when he did arrive to speak, and he returned to Toronto.

But the absence of Mr. Johnstone afforded an opportunity for several of those present to discuss several questions and express their opinions freely on matters of Canadian Club importance, some of which will be undoubtedly vigorously acted upon in the very near future.

A splendid spread, however, was supplied to those present by Messrs. Coleman Bros., who catered in a most capable and pleasing manner. About nine o'clock, the Club finding the promised speaker absent still, decided to wait no longer, and brought in the report of the nominating committee, which was as follows:

NEW OFFICERS.

Peterborough, May 3.
Canadian Club of Peterborough:

Dear Sirs,—Your Nominating Committee beg to propose the following as officers for the club for 1912-13:

President—W. R. Morris.
1st Vice Pres.—G. E. Wainwright.
2nd Vice Pres.—D. Walker.
Sec.-Treas.—W. H. Munro.
Executive Committee — Judge Huycke, A. H. Stratton, A. J. Grant, Basil Hall, Keith Leech, Claude Rogers, Rev. F. J. Sawers, A. Mowat, W. H. Dunsford.
Ex-Officio—F. D. Kerr, H. R. H. Kenner, D. O'Connal, Dr. Cameron, E. L. Goodwill.

It was adopted.

The newly elected President, Mr. W. R. Morris took over his position immediately presiding the remainder of the evening.

Dr. G. Stewart Cameron at this juncture rose to move a hearty vote of thanks to be tendered to the Y.M.C.A. officials for their kindness in placing the use of the banquet room at the disposal of the Club. He paid a tribute to the work of securing and bringing young men into the Canadian Club, and was pleased to discern such a large sprinkling of the younger men in the gathering. It indicated a desire to obtain information on national and general topics, and a wish to distribute such information to the best advantage.

Mr. J. W. Bennet ably seconded Dr. Cameron's remarks in a neat and brief speech. He hoped that the work of the Canadian Club would tend to have an ennobling effect, and stimulate hearty interest and more zeal along all lines of national endeavor. Mr. Bennet wished the gathering to remember that it had been necessary to use the boys' room for their banquet, but hoped that the Canadian Club, if it was possible, should aim to hold all their meetings in the Y.M.C.A. As a member of the Executive of the Y.M.C.A. he would have much pleasure in conveying the thanks of the club for the use of the room to the Y.M.C.A. officials.

DOMINION DAY.

Canon Davidson suggested that many of the younger members of the Club present might like to suggest some matter of interest, and that the time was excellent then for them to speak. In taking up this suggestion, Mr. G. C. Wainwright introduced the matter of holding some sort of celebration on Dominion Day this year. Some special and central effort should be made to commemorate the day, said Mr. Wainwright. Last year, he added, the Canadian Club presented the school children with buttons. The Club this year had received letters from other Clubs, urging that some general demonstration of patriotism and rejoicing be arranged for on the holiday this year. Inspector Mowat of the public schools, replying to Mr. Wainwright, expressed the appreciation of the teaching staff for their interest last year in presenting to the scholars prizes and buttons for Dominion Day. The prizes which were for the advanced scholars had been the means of stimulating most encouraging interest in Canadian history. A big impetus in history interest had been the result.

SAMUEL CHAMPLAIN.

Dr. Cameron had another suggestion which he brought forward. It was that some special recognition should be made of the fact that as far as traceable, Samuel Champlain was the first white man to visit what is now Peterborough. It was in the year 1615, in the month of September that a search of records reveals as the day when the famous explorer passed over the site where now stands the city. He felt that Peterborough was rather negligent in commemorating important events and personages and that the visit of Champlain should be worth consideration, in view of the circumstances. In Ottawa they were taking the matter up and also in the Maritime Provinces.

Assisted by Mr. Grant, Dr. Cameron had written away for information concerning the time of Champlain's visit to Peterborough, and had received a document that in the opinion of authorities, Champlain came here in September, 1615. Such a fact, he felt, was of sufficient historical importance to warrant commemoration. A tablet of some description, not necessarily expensive, might be placed in the Public Library, or some other prominent place.

The matter had been taken up before by the club, Dr. Cameron remarked, but had been pretty well strangled at the time. He would like to see something tangible done on this occasion. Sheriff Hall in agreeing with Dr. Cameron, considered it a worthy desire. They did not require to be sure of the date when Champlain visited here. If it came to that point they would fix the date he visited here themselves.

Mr. F. D. Kerr next referred to a matter being much discussed in the public press lately, namely, whether Canada should continue to celebrate May 24th, the birthday of our late beloved Queen Victoria, or do honor to King George's birth-day in June. May 24th, said Mr. Kerr, is sacred to young and old. The traditions that surround that day, render it a rallying time for the children of the Empire. To change that day with its celebration so long customary would to some extent break the links that bound us in love to the Empire.

"Would it not be right," said Mr. Kerr, "for the Peterborough Canadian Club to show that they consider the traditions which surround May 24th, too sacred and too hallowed to be given up, and some expression of opinion be given in that direction.

On July 1st Canada celebrates her own national day, but on May 24th, she joins hands with all the colonies forming the British Empire, to celebrate the fact that we enjoy liberty, freedom and peace.

CANON DAVIDSON.

Canon Davidson rose again to express his entire concurrence with the celebration locally of Dominion Day this year. The Club, he said, should consult with the City Council and take some steps towards a commemoration of the great day this year.

Continuing, he remarked that he sometimes felt that the Club members were too seldom consulted on the policy of the Club. From a national standpoint the Canadian Club's work was one of the utmost importance. Canadian Clubs should be a great unifying centre of the best opinions of the prominent men throughout the country; a centre that should bring definitely to the people definite ideas. The Canadian Club should make valuable contributions to the highest ideals of the land. Locally the Canadian Club had a splendid record, splendid speakers, and thoughtful varied addresses, on great national questions. But in addition to this, the public opinion of this land, as represented by public men in the Canadian Clubs should be collected and crystallized and then brought to bear upon the government of the country. The government, said Canon Davidson, should be glad to feel that and know that through the medium of Canadian Clubs they had a channel for receiving public opinion. The Canadian Club was an effective channel through which they could ascertain it. The Canadian Club, in the opinion of the reverend speaker, should have more evenings similar to the one in progress, when opinions could be freely expressed.

Canon Davidson referred to the flags of Canada and of Great Britain, and of their significance. Proceeding, he added that our national holiday was insufficiently celebrated.

On May 24th our communion with the Empire should be quickened; we should realize what the Empire stands for. We should have the militia out, the band, and in every way form a popular demonstration of rejoicing. Finally, his suggestion was that the Club act vigorously this year in the matter and consult with the officer commanding the 57th Regiment and the City Council with a view of securing their assistance in celebrating our national holiday celebrating our national holiday, which should be for our own country what the 24th of May was in regard to the Empire.

Major Vincent Eastwood, who was present, in a few appropriate words, evidenced his entire approval of Canon Davidson's words, and promised to do all in his power to assist. He also suggested securing the co-operation of the Daughters of the Empire in the matter, a proposal heartily received.

During the evening Tucker's orchestra played, and Mr. Coleman sang, "I Love a Lassie."

The singing of the National Anthem concluded a very successful and enjoyable banquet.

WEDDING BELLS

LAVIGNE—O'NEIL.

At Hamilton Monday morning, April 29, Rev. Dr. Mahony, V. G., officiated at the marriage of Fredrick Lavigne, of Toronto, and Miss Anna O'Neil, of Hamilton, formerly of Peterborough, the ceremony taking place at St. Mary's Cathedral.

The bride was attended by Miss Agnes Kennedy, of Hamilton, while Mr. McLaren, of Toronto, attended the groom. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Lavigne left for Toronto where they will reside and whither they will be followed by the best wishes of their many friends. The bride had been a resident of Hamilton for the past six years.

FINANCE MATTERS DEALT WITH BY THE COMMITTEE

The chief item of business which confronted the City Finance Committee yesterday afternoon was the making of arrangements to supply the Central Charity Board with the money provided for them in the estimates. The Board had exhausted all their funds and waited upon the committee with the information. Moved by Ald. Johnston and Buller, a motion carried, that the sum of $2,734.76, provided in the estimates for the Central Charity Board for the purpose of making payments to the Protestant Home and the House of Providence, be paid in equal monthly instalments, the first payment to include the amounts up to the end of May.

The only other matter was in reference to the payment to the wrong quarters, of the fine imposed upon Mr. Clayton, proprietor of the Red Mill Theatre at the time all the moving picture proprietors were fined for overcrowding the aisles. The one fine of $50.00 was paid to the city by mistake, instead of being forwarded to the Government. The City Treasurer was authorized to issue a cheque for the amount to be sent to the Government.

REV. JAMES ROSS, D.D.,
London, who will conduct anniversary services in St. Andrew's Church to-morrow.

The seventy-ninth anniversary of the origin of Presbyterianism in Peterborough, will be fittingly observed in St. Andrew's church to-morrow, when Dr. Ross of St. Andrew's Church, London will conduct the services.

Rev. Dr. Ross is minister of one of the largest Presbyterian Churches in Western Ontario. His name was proposed as moderator of the general assembly last year, and he will no doubt fill the highest position in the gift of the assembly. He is an excellent preacher and lecturer, and he will be heard to advantage, both to-morrow and Monday evening, when he will deliver his lecture on "Scottish Life and Character." The clans should foregather.

The present pastorate is the eighth in the life of St. Andrew's. Mr. Rollins' predecessors averaged 11 years each.

COSY HOMES AND GOOD GARDENS

At Low Prices and on Rent terms, are what we are now offering to good honest Wage-earners. Walk down to Western Avenue and see the nice homes and gardens just far enough from work to compel you to take ten minutes' walk, which is good for you but very bad for the doctors.

You can own a Home just like those if you want to, and we can give you any sized garden you want. We have a Large House, Orchard and Garden to rent, suit one large or two small families only $6.00 per month each. We commence at once to build two Houses like Mr. Wallworth's, see it, then tell us you want one. Our Price and Terms will please you as they have pleased others.

OBITUARY

Mr. David Crowley

Mr. David Crowley, of North Monaghan, passed away yesterday at the home of his brother-in-law, Mr. Lynch, who lives just a short distance south of the city in Monaghan. For many years Mr. Crowley was a resident of Otonabee, engaging in farm work in that township, but several years ago his health forced him to give up his work and he went to live with his brother-in-law, with whom he had since resided.

The late Mr. Crowley was well known in Peterborough and the townships of Otonabee and Monaghan. He had won the esteem and respect of all his acquaintances and friends who will be grieved to learn of his death.

He is survived by one brother, James, in the State of Missouri, U.S.

The funeral will take place Monday morning at 9 o'clock to the Sacred Heart church and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

One interested listener an orator has is himself.

REV. DR. BARCLAY OF MONTREAL AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH TO-MORROW

The 77th anniversary of St. Paul's church will be observed to-morrow when the Rev. Dr. Barclay, of Montreal, will be the preacher. Dr. Barclay is a preacher of note and has occupied a large place in the educational and religious life of the Dominion, and particularly Montreal, since he came to Canada many years ago. He was the minister of St. Cuthbert's, Edinburgh, while in Scotland.

PUPILS OF MISS BESSIE ELCOME GAVE RECITAL

Students Delighted Audience at Conservatory of Music by Clever Playing

A recital given last evening by the pianoforte pupils of Miss Bessie Elcome at the Conservatory of Music, was one of the most enjoyable and successful musical events of the season. The pupils were assisted by Miss Hazel Pentland, violiniste, a pupil of Miss Julia Choate.

The program afforded splendid opportunities for Miss Elcome's pupils to display the excellent training they have received, the little ones captivating the audience by their clever and masterly work. Their selections were varied sufficiently to assure pleasure for the listeners, and a highly satisfying demonstration of the musical ability of all who appeared on the program. Several charming duet selections were introduced with fine effect.

Miss Elcome and the pupils deserve the well-earned commendation that was bestowed upon them at the conclusion of the recital.

TWO VAGRANTS ORDERED TO LEAVE LIMITS

Two "vags" appeared before His Worship this morning in Police Court. They were arrested last night in Boylers woods. They were allowed off with a warning, and they promised to get out of town.

E. Coons of Smith was charged with being drunk, while on the blacklist. He could not appear, but sent a letter admitting his guilt. The fine imposed was $10 and costs, to be paid in 30 days.

A youth was charged with truancy. His father appeared for him, and promised to see that he attended school in the future.

COL. TAYLOR TO VISIT CITY

Will Address Meeting at S. A. Temple Monday Night

Colonel Taylor, of International Headquarters, London, England, will visit Peterborough on Monday next, 6th inst., and will conduct a service in the S.A. Temple at eight p.m. The Colonel is an officer of much prominence in S.A. circles, having seen many years service in varied capacities, and his visit will doubtless be of great interest to those who attend this meeting. All are invited.

FIRE LOSS FOR APRIL AMOUNTED TO $4,230

The toll of the fire fiend for the past month of April has been unusually heavy. During the month, the fire brigade has been kept busy being called upon to extinguish seventeen fires in addition to odd calls for chimneys.

The total loss by fire was $4,230. This is the largest monthly loss for some time and is much greater than that of April, 1911, when the loss amounted $1587. In that month 21 fires demanded attention of the brigade.

Two large fires occurred last month that in Mann's planing mill and the destructive blaze in Mason's flower emporium, were the conflagrations that made the loss figures look large.

SUMMER MUST BE HERE NOW; PARK OPENINGS

It will be glad news to citizens to know that all the parks will be thrown open on Monday morning. The caretakers of these various pleasure and rest resorts have been busily engaged beautifying and making them as attractive as possible in preparation for the opening.

TO-DAY'S MARKET

The market this morning was fairly large, there being a good supply and brisk demand in every line.

On the square little pigs and seed potatoes were the chief articles for sale and inside the building was the usual offering of butter, eggs, chickens, etc.

Potatoes sold for $2.00 to $2.50 a bag though many people claimed that they could be secured at $1.75 from the groceries.

There were no apples for sale and pork was the only meat being offered by the quarter.

To-day's prices were:
Potatoes, per bag, $2, to $2.50.
Pork, per lb., 13c, and 14c.
Butter, per lb., 28c, to 30c.
Eggs, per doz., 20c and 21c.
Chickens, per pair, $1.30 to $1.50.
Turkeys, each, $1.80 to $2.50.

Leaving the City

Mr. R. B. Pearson, 522 Charlotte street, for the past eight years, foreman of the Review press room, left this afternoon on a short visit to Lindsay and Toronto, prior to leaving for the West. Mr. Pearson may ultimately locate in Portland, Oregon but for the next six months, however, will tour the West, stopping at all the important towns and cities in that portion of the Dominion. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Pearson. His comfortable residence on Charlotte street has been sold to Mr. H. C. Waram, Weller street. Mr. Pearson has been a consistent worker in George street Methodist church, where he was treasurer of the Mission fund and assistant secretary of the Sunday school. The best of wishes will go with him to his new field.

Perhaps dynamite would prove efficient in elevating some of the stages.

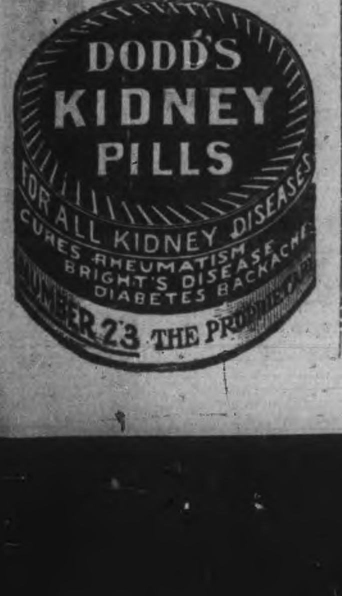
FOOTBALL

For the purpose of formng a junior district in the city for the Midland League, a meeting of the junior players and any who may be interested in the propostiion is called for 8 o'clock on Monday night at the Y.M.C.A. The secretary of the league will be present to give any desired information and it is anticipated that three or four local teams can be formed and a schedaule arranged. The success of this movement depends entirely on the attendance at this meeting and as the season is rapidly advancing it will be necessary for the junior enthusiasts to turn out in large numbers.

Gatineau Point, Que., council has revoked the prohibition by-law passed two years ago.



DIAMOND DUST FROM THE CIRCUIT

The White Caps practiced yesterday afternoon and morning at the exhibition grounds. The feature of the afternoon practice was the sensational fielding of Jimmie Beard and Bill Schwartz, both of Reading.

Tully at short will be too fast for this league when he gets going at full speed, and Templin will have to look out for scouts.

Gentleman Jim Mooney looks as if he will deliver the goods with the big mit this year.

Beaver, the school teacher, put too much "stuff" on the ball, and "Old Folks" advised him to stop. He weighs 169 lbs.

Besides being a baseball whirlwind big Bill Schaeffer, of Reading, Pa., is a basketball enthusiast, and has taken into hand the following team, who will play the Y.M.C.A. picked team, probably next week: forwards, Hartman and Ulner; centre, Tully; defence, Beard and Trout. They are all good men, having played in some of the fastest leagues in the States. Hartman was a star when he played in the Eastern B.B.L. of Reading, the second fastest league in U.S.A.

At the morning's practice Benzie hit the ball at a good clip and fielded well.

Frank Dolan, the big first baseman is losing weight rapidly and will soon be in the pink of condition.

Joe Ulmer of Philadelphia got his hand hurt by a fast grounder which he could not judge on account of the roughness of the ground. It is not serious however, and he will be able to turn out on Monday.

Percy Davis is showing up well. He has a good record.

Old Folks says the park is coming along fine and it will soon be ready for use.

BROWNIES ARE CHAMPIONS

The Nemos and Brownies clashed last night in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium. The Brownies took the lead at the first of the game and held on till the end. The final score was 28—15, and the Brownies are now holders of the intermediate championship.

Persian Pipe Bearer on Horseback.

A picturesque feature of Persian field sports is the pipe bearer, an important retainer who rides close behind his master, bearing the whole elaborate paraphernalia of the Persian water pipe down to the glowing charcoal suspended in a small brazier. If the party is a large one it will generally be found that some member of it is riding soberly along, pulling steadily at a large silver kalian, or water pipe, the pointed base of the water bowl being securely supported by a strap fixed to the peak of the saddle.—Wide World Magazine.

Deserves a Medal.

Who was or is the greatest woman in all history? Two hundred schoolteachers answered the question, and with enthusiasm and unanimity the judges awarded the prize to the one who made this reply: "The wife of the farmer of moderate means who does her own cooking, washing, ironing, sewing, brings up a family of boys and girls to be useful members of society and finds time for intellectual improvement."

A SQUIRREL WITH NERVE.

Survived Its Wild Leap Over a Cliff to Escape Captivity.

It may not be generally known that the squirrel can leap from a great height, break its fall in its descent and alight uninjured. A naturalist once saw a squirrel leap from a treetop thirty feet high, drop to the ground and run up another tree for safety.

Some boys in Mexico caught a black squirrel nearly as big as a cat. It had once escaped from them by leaping from the top of a sixty foot pine tree. They thought it bewitched and wanted to throw it down a precipice several hundred feet deep. A traveler intervened to obtain fair play.

The squirrel was conveyed in a pillowcase to the edge of the cliff, then let out, that he might take the choice between captivity and the terrible leap. The crouching squirrel looked down the abyss, then backward and sideways, his eyes glistening.

Seeing no escape except in front, he took a flying leap into space and fluttered rather than fell into the abyss. His legs worked like those of a swimming dog, but faster, while his tail, slightly elevated, spread out like a fan.

He landed on a ledge of limestone, where he could be seen squatting on his hind legs and smoothing his ruffled fur, after which he made for the creek, drank and scampered away into the willow thicket.—London Answers.

QUEER SCHOOLS.

Odd Experiments In the Education of People For Special Work.

Not long ago there was opened in St. Pancras, London, a "school for mothers." This is carried on by philanthropic women who are devoting their leisure time to giving lessons in housekeeping and the management of children to young mothers in that part of London who have not hitherto had the opportunity of learning such important household matters, and have found themselves at a loss in this way since their marriage. The school is extremely well-attended, and already its results, according to the testimony of the local authorities in St. Pancras are very striking.

This innovation reminds us that in St. Petersburg a new experiment is being tried. The municipal government there has started a "policeman's school," wherein young men wishing to enter the force are trained specially for the work. They are initiated fully in all that pertains to the burglar's craft, and are obliged to understand all the latest kinds of his tools and tricks. The passport system, so prevalent in Russia, must be their close study; whilst jiu-jitsu and suchlike accomplishments are also thoroughly taught the budding constables there.

The management of the famous Great Evere Cemetery, in Belgium, have had so many applications from country laborers to be placed on the list of vacancies as gravediggers that they have founded a school for the training of such employes, and no man is to be engaged in future who has not gone through the training given at that school. Indeed, the directors hold a periodical examination for those in the school, and only the candidates who pass this satisfactorily are employed as gravediggers by them.

Near Richmond, Surrey, there is a "school for cobblers." Boys who are either in the highest standard of the elementary school, or have just passed from it into outside work, are invited to turn up free at a class held once a week during the winter months, in order to learn how to make and mend their own and their families' boots. Several boys are able to save their parents no small amount of money each year by their cleverness in thus helping in an important item of domestic expense.

At Hendon there is a farm school where animals are trained for appearing in plays on the stage. From this place come nearly all the horses, dogs, cows, etc., that have recently appeared in various famous productions at different theatres. Much time and care are necessarily given to the training and education of such animals, which may, of course, eventually become very valuable on account of their special accomplishments in this way. The school here spoken of has now become so well-known amongst stage-folk that when any such animal is needed for a new play the first application for it nearly always comes to this Hendon school.

Perhaps Paris has the most extraordinary of these strange schools. For last winter there was opened in the French capital a school for training judges. At this school bogus trials for various crimes are carried out under the supervision and advice of well-known lawyers, and pupils of the law are taught how to proceed in such trials, how to sift evidence, to ask questions, to advise the jury, to sum up, and to deliver sentence. Indeed, the whole formula and procedure of the courts are instilled into these budding magistrates, with the view to making them fully cognizant of everything pertaining to such work long before they actually have to carry on cases themselves from the chief chair on the bench.

Nor should we omit to mention the Monte Carlo school for croupiers. This is held in the Casino building, and it has tables and everything just like the famous rooms in the Casino itself. There are pseudo-players, and the budding croupier has to learn how to take in or pay out money instantly without mistake. Only those out of the usual fifty pupils taught are finally employed who have shown notable capacity and smartness for doing the work of the ordinary croupier at the tables. Pupils who fall short of this are advised to seek some other occupation for their life's work, and are not engaged by the Casino authorities.

Now Mr. Justice Lennox.

Toronto, May 3.—Mr. Haughton Lennox, K.C., ex-M.P. for South Simcoe, was sworn in by Sir John Alexander Boyd, president of the high court of justice, yesterday morning, as a judge of the Supreme Court of Judicature and a justice of the High Court of Justice of Ontario, and took a seat in the Court of Appeal.

TWENTY-FIRST BIRTHDAY OF YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION JOYOUSLY CELEBRATED

Marked Progress in the Work of the Institution, Which Has Paid Membership of 443—First Financial Statement—Establishment of Home for Girls on Rubidge Street—Address by Miss Rose Cullen.

It was with feelings of joy and thanksgiving on the part of officers, members and friends of the Young Women's Christian Association, who gathered in the gymnasium last night to celebrate the twenty-first birthday of their institution.

The past year has been one of considerable progress—not without disappointments and encouragements. The officers have worked hard and faithfully, just to what extent, the members and friends do not know, but the results speak for themselves. It is a big task to conduct successfully, such an extensive institution as is the local Y.W.C.A., and the high aims of the association are certainly being obtained with a very encouraging degree of success.

The past year has witnessed a number of changes. Prominent in the work accomplished, was the establishment of a Home for girls, on Rubidge street, and it is interesting to note that the scheme has enjoyed much success.

That the work is progressing in all departments is not due to any particular officer. All are hard and faithful workers, and they form a happy band. Miss McCalla, the energetic secretary is entering on her fourth summer at the association, while Mrs Roger, the first superintendent of the Y.W.C.A., is still actively engaged in the work.

The reports read at the meeting last night are given hereunder, and will be found most interesting, as they tell the story of the year's work.

The Rev. R. Pogue, officiated as chairman, and after the singing of "All Hail the power of Jesus Name" lead in scripture reading and prayer. Those contributing to the program were Miss E. Pearl Brock, Miss Julia Choate and Mr. W. Wilson. Miss Dean presided at the piano.

A welcome visitor in the person of Miss Rose Cullen, Travelling College Secretary, gave a most entertaining address on "Student Life in Paris." Miss Cullen will be heard again tomorrow afternoon at the Y.W.C.A. The president's address was read by Miss Dickson.

After the program in the gymnasium, refreshments were served by the young ladies and altogether the affair was most successful and thoroughly enjoyed.

GENERAL SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Our hearts are filled with gratitude as we review the work of the past year in presenting our 21st, annual report, and acknowledge, "that God hath done great things for us." The several reports show growth and development in each and every department and our scope and influence is ever widening.

This year has witnessed the development of a most important department or work in connection with our Association, namely the Extension, or Industrial Work. For the past few years girls from the industrial works have come to us, spending many a happy social evening here, but we had felt for some months that we should go to them and provide for their comfort, especially at the noon hour. Accordingly we rented the house at 133 Rubidge street in December and after a busy two weeks of cleaning shopping and furnishing, the house was opened Friday evening, January 5th, and the lunch rooms, Monday, Jan. 8th. Each noon hour, Saturday and Sunday excepted, a ten cent lunch is served in the pleasant dining room. In the house there is also a wash room and kitchen and a bright, attractive rest and reading room furnished with couches and rocking chairs, books and magazines and the daily Examiner kindly donated from that office.

Many a little talk and story has been enjoyed by the girls and the noon hour passes all too quickly for us all, for with the warning ten-minute whistle all hasten back to duty with new energy and strength for afternoon's work. Over seven hundred and fifty lunches have been served in the four months since we opened. We would publicly thank all who so willingly and generously responded to our request for help in furnishing this South Branch House.

September 1st, we welcomed Miss Shuttleworth who rendered most acceptable services in the House and Office and more especially in the junior work until her departure, on March 1st, to Travellers' Aid Work, when Miss Emma Hall was appointed Assistant Secretary.

MEMBERSHIP.

In September an organized effort was made by the "Y." girls to increase our membership. This took the form of a contest and the excitement at times ran high. At the close of the two weeks a supper was given with the winning team as guests of honor. One hundred and seventy-four names were entered in September, Our goal this year was 500 members or an increase of 100 per cent. over last year. The girls did their share nobly, even though we still lack 57 of this coveted number. However, we are pleased to announce an increase of 200 over last year of 443 paid members.

GYMNASIUM

We consider this a very important department of our Educational Work but as it is arranged for by a separate committee it is so reported. We seek to develop the physical life realizing that a healthy body is essential to a healthy mind. That without physical development and wholesome recreation and playtime there can be no real mental and spiritual development. Here we can do the institutional work of the church as in our other educational classes. Miss Coventry has conducted five weekly classes, viz.—Senior, intermediate, junior, Normal and basketball. One hundred and forty-six girls were enrolled in these classes. One hundred and fifty class sessions were held with an aggregate attendance of 3,605 against 1,323 last year. This large increase of over 100 per cent. has been in our junior and basketball classes. Miss Coventry and her loyal efficient girls won laurels at the public exhibitions given in the Collegiate Assembly Hall on the evening of March 29th, and April 2nd. The full schedule of the year's work was there demonstrated.

SOCIAL.

The social work is not a special department of work it is the atmosphere and spirit of the Association. Believing that happiness gives us the energy to enjoy our daily work many a social evening is announced. These happy evenings are too numerous to enumerate. We would merely mention the Welcome to our new members, Oct. 1st; the At Home given to the Normal students and faculty, in Oct.; the Annual Masquerade Hallowe'en Party; the Valentine Party; the At Home to the "Y" boys; the St. Patrick's program, as well as other evenings arranged from time to time for the C.G.E., Brinton, Cereal, Auburn, Cordage and Chicle girls. Over six hundred have been entertained by the Social Committee.

We have also a social club which meets each Thursday evening. While primarily a social organization the Loyalty Club girls are true to their name, and are ever most loyal to the Association work as a whole. Some twenty are enrolled in this class.

JUNIOR.

The junior work has been most satisfactory and gratifying. In September the several public schools were visited and the work presented in the individual rooms. As a result one hundred and fifty-six were during the lesson enrolled in the two junior clubs—the Victoria and the Sunshine. The average attendance has been seventy. The Clubs have met each Saturday from 2 to 4.30. This time is divided in half hour periods of gymnasium exercises and drills, stories and songs, cooking and sewing lessons. We would place on record of our appreciation of Miss Coventry, Miss Shuttleworth, Miss Gwen Smith, Mrs. W. T. Rogers and the teachers resident in the House, who have given of their time and ability to this most important work.

Bible.—While in all our work we would seek first the approval of our Master, yet there are hours when we are specially conscious of His presence. The Sabbath after dinner praise service is an hour enjoyed by our house members. The house girls are organized with Miss Lillian Cadwell as president. The Bible, Missionary and Music committees are each responsible for one service a month. The president takes charge of the fourth meeting. The daily evening prayers bring help and strength to those of us who, after a busy, hurried day, turn aside and spend a few quiet moments in praise and worship. The fortnight service at the Protestant Home has again been carried on throughout the year and brings like cheer to the old people and singers—as does the bedside visiting at the hospital. The Summer Conference at Elgin House, Muskoka, was an inspiration and incentive to more efficient service.

In November our Travelling Student Secretary, Miss Jamieson, spent some days with us. As an outcome of her visit a College Association was organized in the Normal School, and three Mission Study Classes conducted. The liberality of two of our members, and the help of the house girls enables us to contribute $225.00 towards our Foreign Association work in Japan and India.

Resolutions.—We would express our indebtedness and thanks to the teachers and lecturers who have been so generous in giving of their time and ability to the Association, to the convener and members of the Educational Committee for sharing so largely the responsibility and work throughout the entire year, to the Educational Board for allowing us the use of the Collegiate Assembly Hall for our Gymnasium Closing Exercises, to the Y.M.C.A. for their gymnasium for basketball games, and to the press for their kindness in making known the various activities of the Association and donating to the public reading room a copy of their respective papers. Personally I wish to thank the Board, Mrs. Read and Miss Coventry for their sympathetic and hearty generous support, and also the members and citizens for their kindly consideration and help.

We look forward with hope into the new year, united as we are under the leadership of Him in whose Name the Association was organized and is being promoted.

Faithfully submitted.

MARY D. McCALLA.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

The report of the superintendent, Mrs. Read, noted more student's than formerly; improvements to the first flat of bedrooms, the hall and lavatories, and also the kitchen. The stock of linen had been replenished and the coal, although in larger quantity, paid for. The receipts for the year 1905-6 of $2,954.18 had increased to $8,866.47 for the year 1911-12. The total expenditure for the year, $8,866.47.

TORONTO DAILIES TO COME EARLIER

Will Arrive on C.P.R. Train to be Added

As soon as Postmaster Edgar heard that Peterborough was to have a train from Toronto to Ottawa, passing Peterborough at 10.30, as noted in the Review yesterday, he communicated with the post office authorities to see if the Toronto dailies could be had at that hour. The arrangement was at once made and Peterborough will now have its newspapers one hour earlier than usual—when the train is on time.

FIELD PRODUCE EXHIBITION AT OTTAWA

The best grain and vegetable exhibits from field crop competitions, all over Canada, will be shown at the Dominion Exhibition, Ottawa, Sept. 5th to 16th, as a result of the Central Canada Fair authorities having arranged with J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of Ontario agricultural societies, for this big feature. These competitions are held in every province, Ontario leading with about two hundred. The federal grant to the work amounts to $30,000 a year. Every province encourages the endeavor among agricultural classes and the results are wonderful. The produce to be sent to Ottawa will be that winning prizes in the provincial contests, so that only select grains, fruits or vegetables will be entered.

LAST COMMUNION IN MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

To-morrow will be the last Sunday at which communion will be held in the old Murray street Baptist church. The service will be very impressive and will no doubt be largely attended.

MANY LOCAL PEOPLE WERE ABOARD TRAIN

A large number of Peterboro people went up to Toronto yesterday afternoon and had the experience of passing through a wreck, when the 4.28 C.P.R. express left the tracks a short distance from Burketon Junction. As a result of the wreck, the local was delayed. Mr. E. F. B. Johnstone, K.C., and Dr. Graham, of Toronto, who were to give addresses in the city did not arrive in time.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY MEMBERS GET OPTIONS

The rose bushes, shrubs, etc., for distribution among the members of the Peterborough Horticultural Society have been received from The Connon Floral Company of Hamilton, and are being delivered at once. The stock received is exceptionally good and to insure satisfactory results members should plant their allotment as soon after it is delivered as possible. Those members receiving Option No. 2, bedding plants, will not receive same until it is time to plant same directly in the ground.

Apostolic Faith Mission

Mr. H. McAllister, evangelist, of Ottawa, is at the Mission opposite the market, for special services Sunday at 2.30 and 7.30 p.m., and every night next week at 8 p.m. All interested are cordially invited.

Real Estate Deal

A real estate deal was put through in Winnipeg this week, the particulars of which afford but another instance of the remarkable increase in land values in that city within the the past few years, and of what it means financially to be in on the ground floor along real estate lines in Winnipeg at the present time.

A corner in North Transcona was sold to Winnipeg investors by a man named John Matheson for the sum of $75,000. Both the C.P.R. and the C.N.R. run through the land, and the price received, averaged $500 an acre. Just twelve years ago, the owner purchased the land for only $12 an acre.

DIED

CROWLEY.—David B. Crowley, aged seventy-one, at the residence of Mr. John Lynch, corner Park and Braidwood ave., this morning. Funeral, Monday morning, May 6th, at nine o'clock, to Sacred Heart church, and thence to St. Peter's Cemetery.

Discussing the relation of the Commission to the Railroads and the public, Mr. Charles A. Prouty, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission and principal speaker at the annual dinner of the Traffic Club of Pittsburg, said in part—

"Suppose organized railway labor makes a further demand for increased wages and that the railways accede to this demand. The railroad applies to the Interstate Commerce Commission for leave to advance its rates on this account. What now is to be the answer of the Commission? If this increase in wages is unjustifiable, and if on that account an increase in rates is allowed, it results that the general public, including all other forms of labor, is required to pay what is unjust and unreasonable. Must the Government not therefore be satisfied not only that the added wages are paid by the railroads but that they are necessary and properly paid?"

A switch off its main line is being put in by the Grand Trunk Railway at St. Mary's, Ont., enabling north and southbound passenger trains to cross at the town station instead of at the G.T.R. junction as hitherto, which will be a great convenience to the travelling public. A new steel top will also be put on the London Branch bridge this summer, but at a higher elevation than the old one, so as to considerably decrease the heavy grade entering the Junction.

Chatham's population is placed at 11,333.

A Nobby Outfit

Milk Vendor Dummitt, proprietor of the Maple Leaf Dairy, is being congratulated on the appearance of his new delivery wagon. Mr. Dummitt believes that next to supplying a high grade of milk, is the necessity of an up-to-date conveyance, and he now has both.

WHY A WATCH WEARS OUT
Neglect is responsible for most Watches going wrong. A Watch should be thoroughly overhauled, at least once a year. Dust collecting in a Watch causes it to run dry, the grit will then wear away the delicate bearings. If you own a good watch, better be on the safe side — Bring it to our Repair Department where it will receive Skilled Attention.

P.C.I. CONCERT

The annual concert of the P.C.I. Philomathean Society was given last night in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute. The spacious hall was comfortably filled by those eager to hear the four talented artists from Toronto.

The president of the society, Mr. Roy Dixon, gave a brief address to open the concert, and said that he was confident that the entertainment would be of the highest possible order.

Mr. Harry Holgate gave the first number on the program, a well rendered piano solo. In this selection, as well as in his following ones, he displayed the greatest skill in reproducing the slightest changes in expression, and combining that with his artistic fingering and accuracy of touch, his selections were certain to please the most critical of the music-loving audience. In his accompaniments he displayed ever greater skill and excellence of technique.

Mr. Arthur Wright in his solos was repeatedly encored. He has a rich, powerful, baritone voice of wide range and fine expression.

Miss Clarice Spencer delighted the audience in her readings. A few selections were given with musical accompaniment, and in these, as well as in her readings she impersonated the characters to the entire satisfaction of the audience. Particularly in the sketch, "Seeing Things at Night" Miss Spencer was perfect in her reproduction of the humor of the selection.

Mrs. Kennedy, soprano soloist, had in her voice a wealth of strength, expression and sweetness. She climbed to the highest notes with the utmost ease and clearness, and displayed in the lower notes the same purity of tone.

The duets by Mrs. Kennedy and Mr. Wright added greatly to the merit of the music of the evening.

The Collegiate Institute is to be congratulated on the excellence of the entertainment it provided the large number present, and undoubtedly the society could hardly have made a wider choice in securing accomplished entertainers.

Teas come and go, but the tea that always stays, always leads, always absolutely pure, always the best in quality is "SALADA."

Morocco's Sultan Aggrieved.

Paris, May 4.—Mulai Hafid, the sultan of Morocco, in an interview at Fez forwarded to this city yesterday disclaimed all responsibility for the massacre of French soldiery and civilians during the revolt of the Moorish troops April 17, and insisted on his devotion to France, evidenced by the fact that he always had resisted the repeated solicitation of the Germans and Spaniards, subsequent to the incident at Agadir.

Mulai Hafid complained, however, that he had been despoiled of all authority. He never had been consulted even regarding affairs relative to his own family. He advised the French to go slow in winning over the Arabs. If they were treated with gentleness and liberality he declared they would make a marvellous efficient corps of the French army.

Elk Lake Line Goes On.

Toronto, May 4.—Over 300 men are now busy on the construction of the Elk Lake branch of the T. & N. O. Railway, twelve miles of the right-of-way having been cleared already.

On the uncompleted portion of the Porcupine branch ballasting is now being done and the station buildings at Timmins are under construction. Chairman Englehart has hopes of being able to have the line open for traffic by December 1.

All along the railway from Liskeard to Cochrane settlers are flocking in and the prospects are bright for a good season's business.

Funeral of C. M. Hays.

Montreal, May 4.—The remains of Charles M. Hays will reach Montreal on Tuesday evening or Wednesday morning next. The body has been embalmed aboard the Minia. When that steamer arrives in Halifax early Monday morning. Mr. Hays' body will be at once transferred to the special train which has been awaiting it there. Vice-President Kelly is still in Halifax and will remain there until the arrival of the Minia.

The funeral will be a private one at the wish of Mrs. Hays. It will be held either on Wednesday or Thursday.

Germany's Industrial Life.

The industrial life of Germany gives the impression of a great street crowded with heavy traffic. This traffic is formed of units, but all have a common purpose and direction, and it is well regulated. It is aggressive, noisy and dangerous to those who brave its competitive perils. It is artificial, as it caters to the needs of man largely outside of the actual necessities for subsistence, and it is subject to increases or decreases, congestions or even sudden stoppages, for, unlike the bulk of the traffic of the United States, it is not the irresistible flow of a mighty river of natural products seeking the level of supply and demand. Ever increasing its volume, ever extending its zone of influence, the foreign trade of Germany is the marvel of the twentieth century.—James Davenport Whelpley in Century.

A Tactful Request.

Dobbleigh was a confirmed borrower, and, what was worse, he seldom returned the borrowed articles. He had held on to Whibley's umbrella, for instance, for nearly a year.

"And I'm blessed if I know how I am ever going to get it back," said Whibley.

"Easy," said Hickenlooper. "Call a messenger and send Dobbleigh this note."

And he scribbled off the following: "Dear Dobbleigh, if you can spare it I'd like to borrow that umbrella of mine for a couple of days. Can you oblige me?"—Harper's.

Enough Said.

He was limping down the street with one arm in a sling and both eyes in mourning.

"What's the matter?" queried a friend. "Motorcar accident?"

"No," replied the other sadly. "I met a man who couldn't take a joke."—London Telegraph.

Dreading the possibility of having to return to the House of Refuge, W. Livingstone, aged 81 years, hanged himself on Sunday afternoon at Angus Ont.

WHAT STRIKES YOU IN NEW BRUNSWICK

People All Have Confidence in Dodd's Kidney Pills

Everywhered you fin people who have been cured of Rheumatism, Lumbago, Bright's Disease or some other form of Kidney Disease—Cure is always Dodd's Kidney Disease.

Cameron's Mills, Kent Co., N.B., May 3. — (Special).—The one thing that strikes a visitor to New Brunswick is the confidence its people have in Dodd's Kidney Pills as a cure for any and all forms of Kidney Disease. They have used them and they know by their own experience that Dodd's Kidney Pills are all that is claimed for them. Everywhere you go you find this confidence. It is expressed in this village by Mrs. Joseph P. Daigle.

"I have great confidence in Dodd's Kidney Pills," she says. "Six boxes cured me of my Kidney Disease."

All over the Province you find people who have been cured of Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Diabetes, Backache, or some other form of Kidney Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills. You cannot find a case in which they have been given a fair trial that the results have not been beneficial.

Wanted—A Carnivorous Ant Eater.

Just before visiting the circus Sammy had a passage at arms with his aunt, who assisted in dressing him. At the menagerie he was greatly interested in a foreign animal of long, lithe body.

"What animal is that?" he inquired at length.

"That is called an ant eater," his mother replied.

"Mamma, can't we bring Aunt Sally here some time?" he asked earnestly.

The Mystery of Glass

A correspondent recently reported at he described as the 'curious ak' of a backbird flying against a rlor window many times at the ne spot continuously. Such an in- ent is not uncommon. Birds have en known to fight for hours at a ne, day after day, with their own age reflected in a pane of glass, cking and fluttering against the ne and quite exhausting themselves their fury to demolish the supposed al. It is another instance of how e arts of our civilization corrupt d confuse the birds. It is the same th fishes. Darwin tells a story of pike in an aquarium seperated by ate glass from fish which were its oper food. In trying to get at the h the pike would often dash with ch violence against the glass as to completely stunned. It did this r more than three months before it arned caution. Then when the ass was removed the pike would not tack those particular fish, but would vour others freshly introduced. It d not at all understand the situa- on, but associated the punishment it d received, not with the glass, but th a particular kind of fish. Dar- n's American monkeys proved them- lves more 'knowing.'

Avoiding Waste.

"Here's something clever," said Mr. Fadoogus to his wife. "Blimso, the novelty publisher, gave me this set of dinner cards to give to you with his compliments. They're a new idea he is pushing. They sell for 50 cents a set."

"How nice!" cooed Mrs. Fadoogus.

Two weeks later Mr. Fadoogus said:

"My dear, I do not want to find fault, but really I couldn't see any urgent reason for your giving that big dinner last night. It cost over $150, and I can't afford such expenses."

"Well, my goodness," she replied, "I had to do something to use up those place cards you brought home to me."

The Wrong Bit.

An Irish Jarvie was driving an English tourist round Dublin and on stopping for refreshments the tourist remarked to Pat how lean his horse was. Going up to the horse's head, the tourist examined its mouth and, turning round with the air of a man who knew something, he said:

"I am afraid that the want of flesh in your horse is due to the large bit you have in its mouth."

Pat looked at him sorrowfully as he replied:

"Shure, yer honor, I won't argue wid ye, but I'm after thinking it's the small bit that he has in his stomach that's a-troublin' the poor baste!"—London Mail.

ECCENTRIC BEQUESTS

THE VAGARIES OF THOSE POSSESSING MONEY ARE STRANGE.

Employes Who Have Left Sums of Money to Their Employers In Sarcasm or to Relieve Conditions of Fellow Workers—Mean Husbands Who Have Put Hard Conditions on Their Wives.

The home of strange wills is in the old country, although Canada, young as it is, there have been some bequests made which have caused our worthy inhabitants to wonder at the vagaries of the old and even of the comparatively young. For instance take the case still recent in the minds of Montrealers in which an erstwhile inhabitant of the city, at the time of his death desiring to remember in a public manner, the city in which he claimed to have received his first start in life, bequeathed to the Corporation of Montreal a considerable sum of money to be devoted to the relief of the poor. Here are a few English incidents which illustrate curious wills much better.

Judging by the frequent examples of strange wills that every now and again come to light, there seems to be a strong tendency among a large class of testators to make their "last wills and testaments" as eccentric and peculiar as possible.

Not so long ago, for instance, an eccentric Manchester gentleman died who held strong views as to the undesirability of marriage between cousins. Dying childless, he left a large fortune the interest of which was to be divided equally between his nephew and neice, the only children of two elder sisters. Attached to this legacy was a strange proviso that did the young people marry one another, the money should revert to a well-known Lancashire charity. The nephew lived in Blackburn, the neice in Bristol. They had never met, and, under ordinary circumstances, probably never would have done so. Curiosity led the nephew to spend a holiday in Bristol, and there to visit his cousin, the girl whom he was so strangely forbidden to wed. It was a case of love at first sight. In a fortnight the cousins were engaged, and before the year was out there were wedding bells, which caused the trustees of the Lancashire charity to rejoice.

Some of the most amusing wills are those that are inspired by feelings of spite against a testator's kith or kin. The late Mr. Sydney Dickenson takes high rank among testator humorists of this type. He bequeathed $300,000 to his widow on these grimly ironical conditions: "When I remember that the only happy times I have enjoyed have been when my wife sulked with me, and when I remember that as she was nearly always sulking my life with her has been fairly happy, I am tempted to forget the repulsion the sight of her face inspired me with, and leave her the sum of $300,000 on condition that she spends two hours a day at my graveside for ten years in company with my sister, whom I know she loathes more than she does myself."

It was a similar sense of gratitude which inspired Mr. William Darley, of Ash, in Hertfordshire, to leave his wife a shilling, "in admiration of the skill with which she was in the habit of robbing me of all small sums she could lay her hands on."

A mariner of Bristol, who had evidently been blessed with a spouse none too conspicuous for her domestic traits, instructed his executors: "To pay out of the first moneys collected to my beloved wife, if living, one shilling, that she may buy hazel nuts as I know she is better pleased with cracking them than she is with mending the holes in her stockings."

A testator's employer sometimes becomes his legatee but when this is the case the bequest is usually made with some ulterior motive. A Welshman who left the handsome sum of one shilling to his master did so in order that the latter might purchase a "book on manners," as he sadly lacked the merest semblance of the same when dealing with his subordinates. A case not dissimilar to this was that of the lawyer who died of overwork, and who bequeathed $100 to the solicitors who had employed him, conditionally on the sum being devoted to the paying of overtime fees to such of the clerks as were compelled to work after ordinary office hours. In both cases there was more a desire for better conditions of labor than a wish to benefit the employers.

Some executors are called upon to carry out the most peculiar instructions. Thus, a prosperous merchant, who lived and died in the Midlands, desired that his funeral should take place a week after his death, an hour before dawn, and with the strictest economy. At the same time he expressed a wish that eighteen of his bosom friends, whom he mentioned by name, should be present at his interment, and that in return for their services each should be paid ten pounds out of his estate. No signs of mourning were to be allowed, and every acquaintance of his who attended the burial was to be presented with a pair of white kid gloves, and afterwards with a bottle of wine, that they might drink to the health of his soul, "then," as he expressed it, "on its journey to purification before the eternal rest."

It is questionable if any will ever survived a more adventurous ordeal than the one which was made by a laborer who died in New Zealand in 1868. He left all he had—some $1,500 in the British Postoffice—to his wife, who lived at Rye, in Sussex. The will was rather an elaborate affair, engrossed at prodigious length on parchment, and adorned with the seal of the Supreme Court of New Zealand in the bottom left hand corner.

The will after being wrecked off the Scilly Islands was picked up on the beach by some Cornish fishermen and sent on to London.

ST. PETERSBURG

Although It Is In No Respect a City of Health—Built Over Swamp.

St. Petersburg, the beautiful and majestic metropolis of Russia, founded by Peter the Great, is constructed on a veritable swamp. It is said that moisture underlying the city can be seen sometimes oozing up between the paving blocks on the Nevsky Prospect, a busy thoroughfare. The city is not only built over water, which often threatens to inundate it, but it is visited by rain or snow at least 200 days of the year. The city is practically surrounded by water, for swamps abound on two sides, the sea and the river on another.

At the beginning of the building of St. Petersburg Peter the Great set thousands to work, "under compulsion of the knout," to build dykes and reclaim the land. Everyone, nobles and peasants alike, hated the place, all save Peter the Great, who called the city his "Paradise" and forbade the use of stone in building elsewhere in Russia, ordering all the stone accessible to be brought to St. Petersburg. Any peasant who wished to enter the city could do so by fetching a cartload of stone. This was his passport. Indeed, people did not have to beg to enter St. Petersburg. They were forced by the Czar's command to abandon other places and come to dwell in his "pet" city. The consequence was a crowded quarter where the poor herded together like so many rats, living in squalor and misery. Even to this day, the Russian metropolis is the most unhealthy capital of Europe.

But, in spite of all drawbacks, St. Petersburg is a beautiful and majestic city. The Winter Palace is splendid, as are also entire streets of beautiful buildings. It might be called a city of space, for the streets are very wide, and nowhere—save in the slums—does one find crowding. Everything seems on a gigantic scale—cathedrals, public and educational buildings, art galleries, etc. Beautiful statuary is seen in the public squares, the statue of Peter the Great being a magnificent monument to the glory of the ruler who built the city in the face of nature's and man's opposition.

Nevsky Prospect is the fashionable street of St. Petersburg. It is only three miles in length, but it is as celebrated a highway as Regent street, London, or Fifth avenue, New York.

During the winter months the days are very short, artificial light being turned on at 3.30 in the afternoon and daylight not coming in full till about 10 in the morning. But during the summer months—June and July—one will see the sun at 2 o'clock in the morning and easily read a book at 11 o'clock at night by nature's own light.

An Art Connoisseur.

Possessing the name of Villiers, the Earl of Clarendon, is the son of one of the foremost statesmen of the past century, but he himself has been distinguished rather as a courtier than a politician, though he is quite familiar with the interior of the Commons. A courtly gentleman, with a singularly happy habit of expressing himself, he has been a great favorite with the royal family. Queen Victoria appointed him a Lord-in-Waiting, and he subsequently succeeded Lord Hopetoun as Lord Chamberlain.

A keen sportsman, he rides well to hounds, plays golf enthusiastically is an excellent shot and billiard player, and is devoted to his home and estate. A noted art connoisseur, he possesses some splendid pictures, including almost priceless Vandycks. At the Grove, Watford, he entertains most hospitably.

Beneficial.

"Did Dr. Dowler do you any good?"

"Yes, a lot. He charged me so much for his diagnosis that I have had to save money by eating less, and the benefit has been simply wonderful."

Wheat Imports.

Half a million quarters of wheat, on an average, are imported into the United Kingdom each week.

BANISH PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS

In the Spring Most People Need a Tonic Medicine

One of the surest signs that the blood is out of order is the pimples, unsightly eruptions and eczema that come frequently with the change from winter to spring. These prove that the long indoor life of winter has had its effect upon the blood, and that a tonic medicine is needed to put it right. Indeed there are few people who do not need a tonic at this season. Bad blood does not merely show itself in disfiguring eruptions. To this same condition is due attacks of rheumatism and lumbago; the sharp stabbing pains of sciatica and neuralgia; poor appetite and a desire to avoid exertion. You cannot cure these troubles by the use of purgative medicines—you need a tonic, and a tonic only, and among all medicines there is none can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for their tonic, life-giving, nerve-restoring powers. Every dose of this medicine makes new, rich blood which drives out impurities, stimulates every organ and brings a feeling of new health and energy to weak, tired, ailing men, women and children. If you are out of sorts give this medicine a trial and see how quickly it will restore the appetite, revive drooping spirits, and fill your veins with new, health-giving blood.

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Facts About McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace

--The Understudy of the Sun--

The Fire-pot of the "Sunshine" is made of Semi-Steel—that of the ordinary furnace is made of Grey Iron. Here's the difference — Destructive sulphur fumes penetrate Grey Iron easily because it is porous. Semi-steel is not porous—it is a close-grained material with a smooth surface secretly processed by McClary's. Gas fumes cannot penetrate Semi-Steel therefore it lasts longer. The "Sunshine" Fire-pot is built in two sections joined together with our famous cup joint. The shape of this joint, combined with a layer of McClary's asbestos cement, makes it absolutely gas, smoke and dust-proof.

Clearly, the "Sunshine" is the premier furnace as far as the Fire-pot is concerned.

The Grates of the "Sunshine" Furnace have three sides each. Plainly, they have three times the endurance of one-sided grates. Every time you rock down the ashes of the "Sunshine" you can expose a fresh side of the grate to the fierce heat of the fire—lengthen the life of the grates.

And the short, strong teeth of "Sunshine" grates simply grind up clinkers. The "Sunshine" Furnace is the best as far as grate construction goes.

Shaking an ordinary furnace is hard, back-breaking labor. You don't need to shake the "Sunshine"—you simply rock it and the ashes drop into the ash-pan. A child can easily rock the grates of a "Sunshine" — merely another reason why you should buy a "Sunshine" Furnace.

Ordinary furnaces are called coal gluttons. There may be good reasons for that—we don't know. But—we have built the "Sunshine" Furnace so that it is very easy on coal. Hundreds of people now using the "Sunshine," and having used ordinary furnaces, declare that the "Sunshine" makes two tons of coal do the work of three. Evidently, the "Sunshine" Furnace saves coal and money.

The ordinary furnace has a water-pan hidden somewhere about the base. There, it cannot carry out the purpose for which the water-pan was devised. The water-pan of the "Sunshine" Furnace is placed scientifically above the radiator near the dome—the heat laps up the water, before being diffused all over the house. It contains the same amount of moisture as the air of a balmy June day. Plainly, as far as the water-pan is concerned, the "Sunshine" is the furnace you should buy.

There are many more reasons why you should invest your money in "The Understudy of the Sun"—McClary's "Sunshine" Furnace. Call on the McClary agent and ask him to show you all the mechanical reasons and exclusive devices which go to make the "Sunshine" the best and therefore the cheapest furnace you can buy. FAR APART.

Wise Heads Disagree Concerning Life on the Planets.

No less far apart than the millions of miles separating our two nearest plants, Venus and Mars, are the opinions of scientific men concerning the possibility of there being anything like human inhabitants on those heavenly bodies. Some affirm while others deny that these planets can support life like ours; and the world of mankind looks on and grins, caring not a rap which faction is right. If either place were available for Sunday excursions there would be far more interest displayed in the question, but the airships come to grief instead of port when headed for such far places, so there is little likelihood of common men bothering their heads any more about the scrap than they would if it were so many newsboys engaged in a scuffle over the respective fighting merits of two yellow pups. And yet, the controversy has its points of interests for certain ones. The fight may be far above our heads, like that of eagles in the clouds, but as the feathers come floating down one can not resist a glance upward now and then to see how the conflict is progressing. Just now there are more feathers in sight.

Prof. E. Walter Maunder, of England, declares that Mars is uninhabited. He says the temperature on that planet often approaches absolute zero, which would make life there impossible, of course. Oddly enough, he believes Venus may be inhabited. It receives about twice as much of the sun's heat as the earth, but he believes the envelope of vapor around it may keep the temperature down as low as is that of this planet of ours. To properly understand this it should be recalled that Venus is only 67,000,000 miles from the sun, while the earth is 92,000,000 and Mars is 141,000,000 miles away from that central luminary.

Dr. F. S. Archenhold, professor of astronomy at the University of Treptow-Sternwarte and author of numerous books about the planets, as well as builder of the largest telescope in the world, boldly announces his belief that Mars is inhabited. He is not the only one so believing and by the same token neither is Prof. Maunder alone in his opposition. No wonder the feathers fly.

Misnamed.

An old lady was going over the London zoo, and after some time she went up to a keeper and tapped him on the shoulder with her umbrella.

"Well, mum?" said the keeper.

"I want to ask you," explained the old lady, "which of the animals in the zoo you consider the most remarkable."

The keeper scratched his head for awhile:

"Well, mum," he replied, "arter careful consideration, as you might say, I've come to the conclusion as the biscuit goes to the laughing hyena!"

"Indeed!" said the old lady in surprise. "And why do you consider the laughing hyena so remarkable?"

"Well, mum," answered the zoological expert, "he only has a sleep once a week, he only has a meal once a month, and he only has a drink once a year. So what he's got to laugh about is a bloomin' mystery to me!"

How Javanese Settle Quarrels.

The Javanese manner of settling quarrels is quite original. When one man has offended another the injured party gives notice that he is angry by drawing in the sand before the door of the offender a circle with a straight line across it, indicating that his affection, which would have been eternal, has been cut in two. Friends of both parties then shut them up. They parley awhile, then pretend to be born again, prattle as little children and finally as men become reconciled and embrace. Should one be refractory and refuse to be conciliated he is ostracized by the community so effectually that he is soon brought to terms

When Royalty Travels.

Nearly every member of the royal family adopts a pseudonym when traveling otherwise than on state occasions. The Duke and Duchess of Connaught chose the incognito title of Earl and Countess of Sussex when they made their continental journeys, and Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll, and the Duke of Argyll travel as Lord and Lady Sundridge, this being one of the Argyll minor titles.

Before her marriage Queen Maud of Norway occasionally called herself by the unpretentious name of Miss Mills. Queen Victoria always traveled as Countess of Balmoral, though, curiously enough, her heavy luggage was generally labelled "The Queen."

Fire gutted the Orpheum moving picture theatre at Chatham.

ANNUAL DISTRICT E. L. CONVENTION

The annual convention of Peterborough District Epworth Leagues is to be held this year in Lakefield, on May 17th, afternoon and evening. An excellent program has been prepared, and delegates from all the Leagues in the district are expected to attend in as large numbers as possible.

Speakers of note have been secured in the person of Rev. Dr. Smith, Peterborough Methodist missionary in China, at present in Toronto; Rev. Mr. Farewell, Sunday school secretary, and Rev. Isaac Couch, of George street Methodist church.

The convention will be held in the Methodist church, Lakefield.

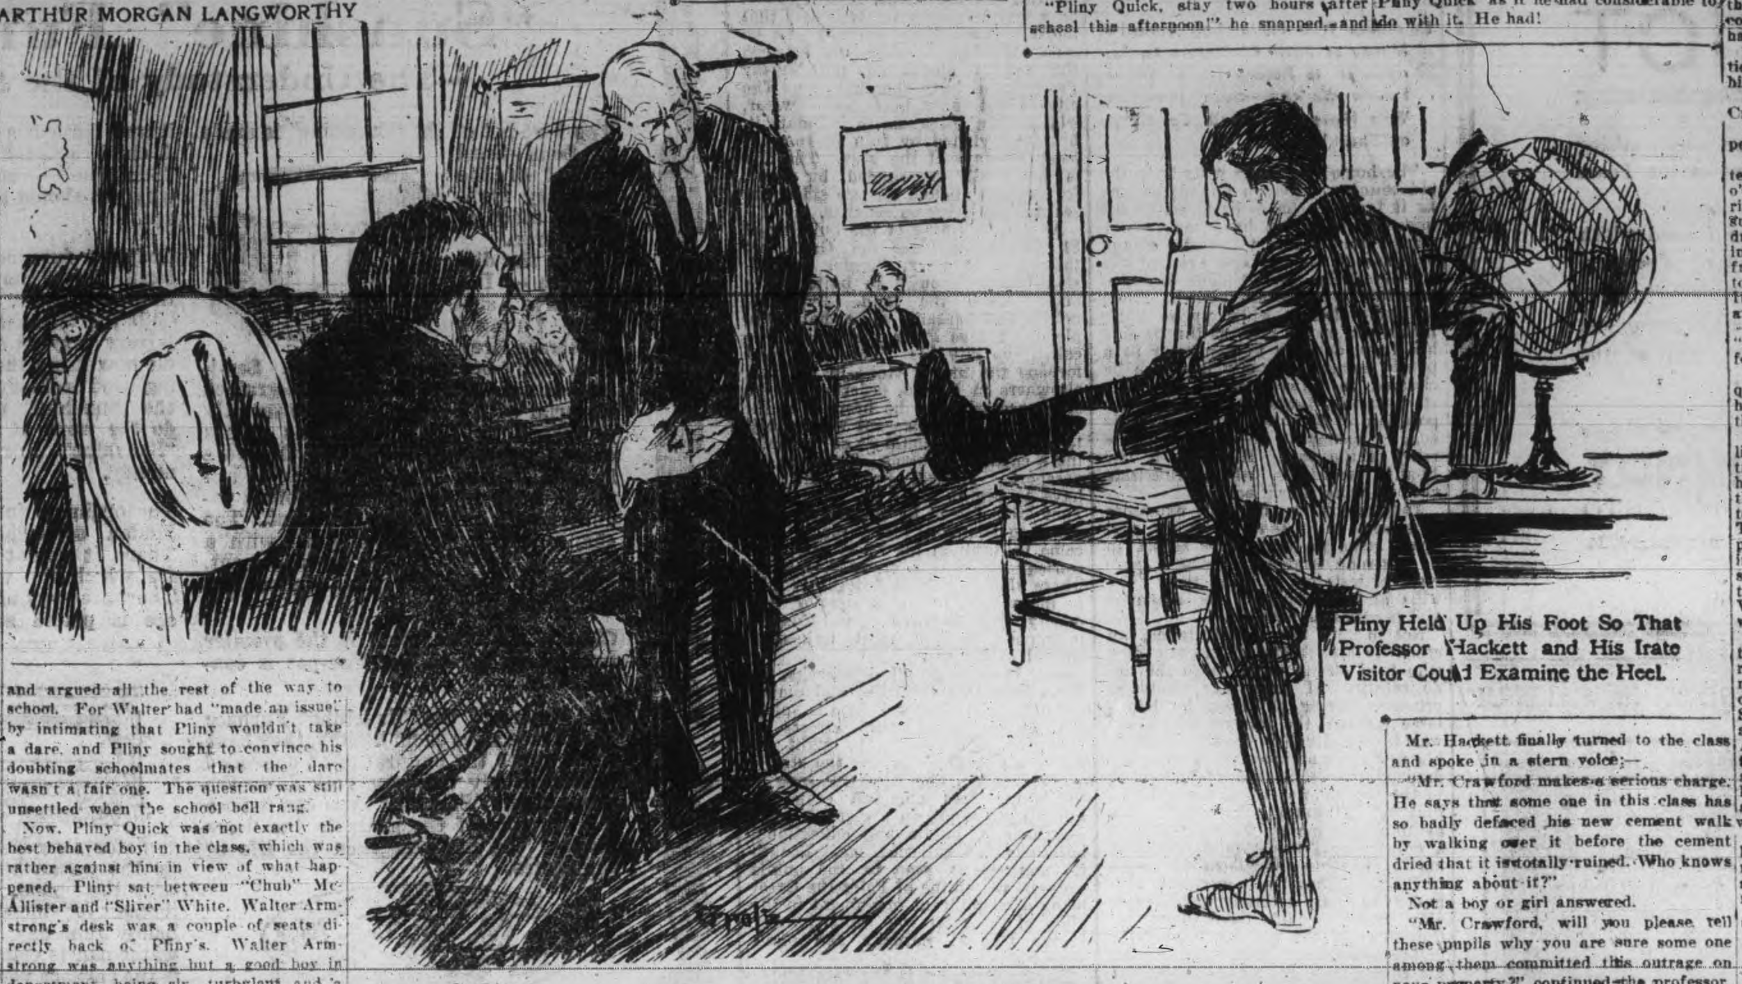
PLINY QUICK, "HIS MARK"

HE Introduces a New Fad to Oakdale with Disastrous Results

BY ARTHUR MORGAN LANGWORTHY



Pliny Held Up His Foot So That Professor Hackett and His Irate Visitor Could Examine the Heel.

IF Pliny Quick had not worn a pair of metal heel plates on his shoes to keep the heels from wearing down there would be no story to tell. For then he would not have visited Oakdale's five and ten cent store to get a new pair to replace a lost heel plate.

Pliny was always doing queer, original stunts, and as he bought the little heel plates his eye wandered over the contents of the nearby counters and the idea about "his mark" suddenly struck him. For his glance had rested on a tray of small cast metal letters such as are used for lettering doors, lockers or drawers. Pliny laughed as he purchased a couple of tiny metal Q's, and the young girl who sold them jokingly asked if he was going to turn Chinaman. He knew her, and when he explained why he wanted them she was very much amused.

Thus when Pliny appeared at school next day and proudly stuck his foot in some nice, soft, mouldable mud he created a new fad.

A plain, unmistakable imprint of a Q was stamped in every footprint. Everywhere he walked Pliny made "his mark" if the ground was at all soft or yielding. For he had fastened the small raised metal Q on each heel, and they were bound to make perfect imprints each time he pressed his weight upon them. There was a grand rush to buy monogram letters, which almost depleted the five and ten cent store's supply.

Probably no one will ever know how many hardwood floors were scratched up before this letter heel stamp craze was finally suppressed. One thing that is sure—Pliny Quick will hardly forget the awful scrape it landed him in. It really began in this way:—

A crowd of Pliny's schoolmates stopped to call for him on the way to school. At this time the Quicks were having the sidewalk in front of the house repaired. It was a cement walk. Several patches of concrete had just been laid and were still damp, therefore easily impressionable.

"Say, Pliny, why don't you leave your mark in the concrete?" suggested "Chub" McAllister.

"Good idea. I'll do it," And Pliny carefully planted his heel upon a spot near the gate. The heel mark and "Q" were reproduced perfectly. Pliny added a finishing touch by scratching "1911" beneath by means of a sharp wire nail. This operation successfully over, the crowd walked on and turned the corner into Main street. Here they found more concrete work being done. The workmen were busy making a stretch of sidewalk ready for reconcreting. Possibly it would not have roused a certain mischievous interest but for one fact—the sidewalk belonged to the boys' long detested enemy, John Crawford, the violet farmer. He had waged war for years on juvenile Oakdale, in vain attempts to stop its perpetual habit of "plugging" his tempting array of glass greenhouse roofs just outside of town. The sidewalk fronted his town floral shop.

"Say, wouldn't I like to walk into that concrete!" exclaimed Walter Armstrong maliciously. The crowd echoed his sentiments—except Pliny. There was never any love lost between Walter and the Quicks, as you have doubtless already learned in other stories about Oakdale.

"He'd find out who did it by the letter," objected Pliny.

"I bet you're afraid to do it," sneered Walter.

"I am not," retorted Pliny hotly.

"Well, they won't get ready before dark. I dare you to."

"I'm not afraid to, but I might just as well go in and tell old Crawford beforehand. Besides, it's a kind of cheap thing to do," angrily cried Pliny, nettled at Walter's trying to force him into doing what his common sense knew was wrong and foolish. And so they wrangled and argued all the rest of the way to school. For Walter had "made an issue" by intimating that Pliny wouldn't take a dare, and Pliny sought to convince his doubting schoolmates that the dare wasn't a fair one. The question was still unsettled when the school bell rang.

Now, Pliny Quick was not exactly the best behaved boy in the class, which was rather against him in view of what happened. Pliny sat between "Chub" McAllister and "Sliver" White. Walter Armstrong's desk was a couple of seats directly back of Pliny's. Walter Armstrong was anything but a good boy in deportment, being sly, turbulent and a great trial to Professor Hackett, who was principal as well as teacher of the upper classes in grammar.

So it was only natural that Walter started a little shooting contest with any one who happened to be within range as a target for his concealed pea shooter. "Chub" McAllister's fat neck got most of the benefit of Walter's shooting. "Chub" immediately signalled for reinforcements from his friend "Sliver" on the other side of Pliny. For "Sliver" was the only boy near by who owned a pea shooter. Naturally Pliny was chosen to convey the shooter from "Sliver" to "Chub" as he sat between them.

Just as he had his hands on the shooter one of Walter's shots missed "Chub," but sped on to find a mark about an inch from Mr. Hackett's face. It flattened out against the blackboard at which he was writing down a sentence. And that touched off the explosion! The professor whirled around, and it was just Pliny's hard luck to have his eagle eye catch sight of "Sliver's" pea shooter, which Pliny still held in his hand.

"Pliny Quick, stay two hours after school this afternoon!" he snapped, and refused to listen to Pliny's protest of innocence. Walter Armstrong, who should have come forward and owned up, only laughed at having unintentionally "put one over" on his old rival.

About half-past nine the next morning a very angry old man stalked into Pliny's classroom. He and "Old Hack" became involved in a low voiced discussion which the curious scholars could not catch, though they seemed able to guess something of it. Anyway they all looked at Pliny Quick as if he had considerable to do with it. He had!

Mr. Hackett finally turned to the class and spoke in a stern voice:—

"Mr. Crawford makes a serious charge. He says that some one in this class has so badly defaced his new cement walk by walking over it before the cement dried that it is totally ruined. Who knows anything about it?"

Not a boy or girl answered.

"Mr. Crawford, will you please tell these pupils why you are sure some one among them committed this outrage on your property?" continued the professor, his voice growing harsher.

"There was the imprint of a Q on every heel mark," snarled Crawford. "Now I know one of these boys' names"—

"Wait, Mr. Crawford. I'll do the prosecuting," interrupted "Old Hack." "Will those whose last names begin with Q stand up?"

Pliny rose tremblingly from his seat. He was the only one in the room, as his brothers were in other classes.

"Pliny Quick, did you do this?" demanded Mr. Hackett.

"No, sir."

"He must have done it," yelled Crawford.

"Pliny Quick, do you wear metal letters on your heels?" questioned the principal.

"Yes, sir."

"Come to the desk."

Pliny walked slowly to the desk. Things looked pretty black for him. He was positive none of his brothers was guilty, as he was the only one who wore the Q's on his heels. He looked back and eyed Walter Armstrong, who only grinned mockingly. Pliny clenched his fists as he realized what a scrape he was in. He felt sure Walter was implicated, but how could he prove it?

"Hold up your foot," commanded "Hack." Pliny stuck up his foot so that Professor Hackett and his irate visitor could examine the heel, while an audible snicker spread over the room at Pliny's comical appearance. "Old Hack" and Crawford peered at both heels, and then Crawford completed Pliny's condemnation by asserting that the Q on his heels and the imprint on the cement were exactly alike.

"Well, sir, have you anything to say for yourself? By the way, you have three brothers, and you four boys are the only pupils in the Oakdale Grammar School whose names begin with 'Q.' Shall I send for them?" asked the principal, who didn't want to condemn Pliny if there was the slightest doubt of his guilt.

"Don't send for them; they had nothing to do with it."

"Then why did you do it?"

"I didn't do it!" cried Pliny earnestly, almost in tears, for it takes a lot of nerve to bear up before the whole class on such a false accusation.

"Don't make the thing any worse by denying it! Your own heels convict you!" thundered "Old Hack," while Crawford could hardly restrain himself from laying hands on the supposed culprit.

"I'd like to ask Mr. Crawford one question," said Pliny, who had luckily not lost his head completely.

"Ask it, you young whelp!" shouted Crawford angrily.

"Have you any idea when this happened?" questioned Pliny.

"Yes, I worked late on my books yesterday. I was in the store until eight o'clock last night. The cement was all right then, but when I came back from supper at half-past eight a friend of mine dropped in and said he saw a boy tramping around in the cement. The store front was dark and the street light was too far off for the boy to be recognized. It must have happened between eight and half-past last night!"

The funniest look imaginable came over "Old Hack's" face. He turned to Crawford and actually grinned.

"Crawford, there's something mighty queer about this, but between eight and half-past Pliny Quick was right here in this room!"

What a sensation! What a flood of relief for poor Pliny, yet it was the exact truth. It happened that his father wanted him to go on an errand in town just at the time "Old Hack" had sentenced him to stay in for the pea shooting episode. The Professor had some examination papers to prepare at school in the evening, so he allowed Pliny to go, on his solemn promise that he would return that night and serve out his "sentence." What a lucky thing the boy kept his word!

A rigid investigation proved only one thing. The girl at the metal letter counter remembered selling Walter Armstrong a number of letters that same day, but couldn't positively say about the "Q's." She had sold other boys sets of letters also, which further complicated the case. As Walter angrily denied having anything to do with it and Pliny's brothers all proved they had not worn lettered heel plates, the mystery was never really settled, though Pliny was mighty sure who played the mean trick on him.

But it did "settle" the great lettered heel fad forever. And as for its creator, most people say if he survives his many scrapes he may "make his mark" yet, but not on any more cement sidewalks!

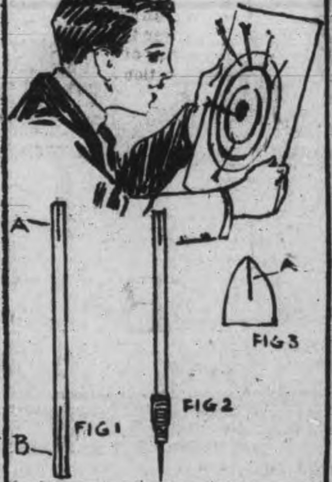
HOW TO MAKE SMALL DARTS

BY NORRIS SUTHERLAND



I HAVE had a good deal of fun with these darts, and I think any other boy can also.

First, you get a match or any other small piece of wood. Then you slit it at one end one inch and at the other end three-quarters of an inch. (See fig. 1, a, b). Next you get a needle or a pin with the head cut off and insert it in the longer slit. You may fasten it in with glue and thread or wire (thin iron or steel wire is best). Now the work is almost done. You should put a rubber band on over the thread or wire. (See fig. 2.) A piece of paper shaped like this is to be inserted in the shorter slit. (See fig. 3.) A cut should be made half way down the paper. (See fig. 3, article a.) The points should be bent to either side and the dart is ready for use.

CANDY MAKING FOR THE HOLIDAYS

Recipes from the New York Evening Telegram Cook Book.

BOYS and girls who wish to give something to their friends for Christmas presents that they have themselves made and that will not take too much time in the making will find that boxes of home made candy are most acceptable to a large number of their friends, even to their grown up acquaintances. If one can make attractive boxes also to put the candy in the present will seem all the more a personal one. Here are some simple recipes for various sorts of candies, and among these some one kind will certainly be found to please the taste of any one who likes candy at all. The making of an entire new box for the candy is difficult, but one can use an old box as a foundation and cover it with fresh paper lining the inside also with fresh white paper. White moire paper is attractive for the inside of the box and pink or yellow moire for the outside. If you do not care to make a box the boxes covered with Christmas paper can be bought for a few pennies. Boys and girls who want to entertain their young friends informally during the holidays will find it great fun to make their own candy for the occasion.

Chocolate Caramels.

Put into a granite saucepan one cup of finely broken or grated chocolate, one cup of molasses, the same amount of rich milk and sugar and two heaping tea-spoonfuls of butter. Stir over a slow fire until thoroughly mixed, then boil slowly until it cracks when dropped into ice water. Turn into greased tins and mark into squares before the mixture becomes cold.

Spiced Chocolate.

Put into a saucepan two cups of brown sugar, one-half cup of grated chocolate, a half cup of water, a teaspoonful of butter and cinnamon to taste. Cook until brittle when dropped into cold water; then pour into buttered pans.

Butterscotch.

One cup of New Orleans molasses one cup of butter, two cups of powdered sugar and a pinch of soda. Boil until it crisps when dropped in cold water, then pour in thin sheets to cool.

Chocolate Marshmallows.

To make chocolate marshmallows wipe ordinary marshmallows free from corn starch, cut in halves, dip each in the melted chocolate and set away to harden.

Peanut Candy.

Have ready one cupful of peanuts shelled and chopped. Be sure you are rid of all the brown skins. Put one cupful of white sugar into a hot frying pan and stir until it is dissolved. Add the peanuts and turn immediately on to a buttered tin. As it cools cut into squares.

Vanilla Fudge.

Put into a shallow porcelain lined pan a heaping tablespoonful of butter, a coffee cup of granulated sugar, a third of a large cup of condensed milk and water mixed in equal parts and a tiny pinch of salt. Set over the fire and stir constantly. Cook eight minutes from the time the mixture begins to boil, or until the mixture thickens so as scarcely to drop from a spoon. When it reaches this stage remove at once from the fire. Now add a scant teaspoonful of extract of vanilla and stir briskly until so thick that stirring becomes difficult. This will be in about ten minutes. Turn on a buttered pan and when nearly cool mark into squares. This is delicious either fresh or when several days old.

Butter Taffy.

Put into a granite saucepan a cup and a half of light brown sugar, three tablespoonfuls of molasses, a tablespoonful and a half each of hot water and vinegar and a pinch of salt. Cook until brittle when dropped into cold water. Add three teaspoonfuls of butter, cook a moment, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and pour into a shallow buttered pan. When cool mark into squares.

Walnut Fudge.

Mix together one-half cup of brown sugar, one and a half cup of granulated sugar, half a cup of milk (cream is better) and butter the size of a ping-pong ball or smaller. Cook over a medium fire until it will harden slightly in cold water. Add one cup of chopped nuts, take from the fire and stir vigorously until cold. Add one cup of chopped nuts, take from the fire and stir vigorously until cold. Pour into a buttered pan and let it harden.

Thanksgiving Menu Puzzle.

The Thanksgiving dinner menu published in last Sunday's page for boys and girls, was as follows:—

Little Necks.
Oxtail Soup.
Roast Turkey.
Tomatoes, Peas, Artichokes (R. T. Chokes)
Cold Slaw.
Pumpkin Pie. Ice Cream.
Tea.

PUZZLING TOWNS AND CITIES.

Each line of the following verses describes a city or town of the United States. How many of them can you guess? There will be more puzzling towns and cities in next week's page.

Guess the town that a sculptor oft carves from the stone,
The city that's shrewd and acute,
The town wild and fierce, that you'd best leave alone,
The one that's a tropical fruit.

The one that's to gather, assemble or flock,
The city designed for a pair,
The one that's a hard and durable rock,
The one that's polite for red hair.

Flags at Half Mast.

Perhaps you have noticed that whenever a prominent person dies, especially if he is connected with the government, the flags on public buildings are hoisted only part of the way up. This is called half mast. Did you ever stop to think what connection there could be between a flag that was not properly hoisted and the death of a great man?

Ever since flags were used in war it has been the custom to have the flag of the superior or conquering nation above that of the inferior or vanquished. When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the flag of the victors to be placed above it on the same pole. This was a token not only of submission, but of respect.

In those days when a famous soldier died flags were lowered out of respect to his memory. The custom long ago passed from purely military usage to public life of all kinds, the flag flying at half mast being a sign that the dead man was worthy of universal respect.

Rapid Painting.

In the realm of rapid painting no one has excelled the late Sir William Orchardson. He had only devised the mere outline of an elaborate picture when he learned that only two or three days remained if he wished to submit his work to the Scottish academy. Many artists would have required months to finish such a work, but Sir W. Orchardson painted right throughout two nights and two days, his sister sitting with him and supplying coffee to keep the artist awake.

Be Suspicious

BE suspicious of that of which nobody is proud. Be suspicious of the mere low-price argument offered in favor of an article with no reputation, no backer, no guarantor.

Better buy the thing you know and can trust, than an article unbranded and unvouched for.

The branded shoe, made by a maker with a reputation, is a safer shoe to buy than the one made in an unknown factory by an unknown maker.

The underwear made by a firm whose name is as familiar to you as your own, is worth more to you than underwear nameless or labelled by a maker of whom you have never heard.

Tea sealed in a packet bearing the name of a reputable firm is to be preferred to tea of which the packer is not sufficiently proud to advertise its quality.

That in which much money has been invested to make or keep it good is worth more than that on which nothing or but little has been spent.

Peace of mind is worth something, just as quality is. Buy peace of mind.

The Tolling Bell

It Was a Mystery, but It Was Explained

By ALBERT TUCKER KENYON

When I was master of the Helen MacAvoy, one of the old time brigs, I was on deck one night keeping a general lookout. The sky was overcast, rendering the night dark, but there was no wind. The sea was smooth only for a ground swell. According to an observation taken the previous noon, we were not near any land or sunken rocks—that is, nothing to warrant a warning to ships.

And yet there came across the surface of the water, "mellowed by distance," the sound of a buoy bell. I say a buoy bell because it tolled with that irregularity which sailors would recognize at once as belonging to these bell warnings against dangerous places at sea.

I at once ordered the lead heaved, but "no bottom" was reported. Nevertheless I confess I was very uneasy. Though we were in deep water, we might be near a ledge. However, we could do nothing but keep posted so far as possible as to the depth of water beneath us, and, though we kept lowering the lead, we did not reach bottom.

Meanwhile, though we were scarcely moving, we continued to approach the bell or it approached us, for the sound became gradually more and more distinct.

I would have cast anchor except for the fact that there was no bottom. I could only wait for developments. The watch heard the tolling and were on the qui vive for something to happen. Those below came up one by one and leaned against the rail, listening, or in knots discussed in low tones what the mysterious sound might be.

The strokes continued to approach us or we them till they seemed to be scarcely a cable's length distant. Then we began to make out something black dead ahead. I called out to the man at the wheel to port the helm. He did so, but there was so little headway that our course was but slightly deflected. A black hulk passed so near us that we could see it was there, but so far that we could not distinguish what it was.

Nevertheless we all agreed that it was afloat and drifting. Gradually the tolling of the bell became less and less distinct, but did not die out entirely for more than an hour. It was a grewsome sound and depressed the crew, causing forebodings among the superstitious.

The next morning a vessel appeared far astern of us. She had no sails set, and our glasses failed to reveal any one aboard. A fresh breeze blowing in her direction sprang up, and since on the course we were sailing it was dead ahead I concluded to turn about and investigate this strange ship. As we neared her we failed to see any one aboard of her, and her wheel was revolving as the rudder was swayed by the waves.

If any of the sails had been set they had been blown away. As soon as we came within hearing distance we knew that the tolling of the night before came from her, for we began to hear it again. It was evident that she was a derelict, and I inferred that the rope attached to the clapper of her bell had either rotted away or become loosened, so that as she rose and fell on the seas the bell was tolled.

As soon as we came within easy reach of her I ordered a boat lowered, and I was pulled to the derelict. A ladder was hanging to her side, so we had no difficulty in getting aboard of her.

We found the sails furled and a cable dangling from her bow with the starboard anchor gone, indicating that she had been lying at anchor and had been blown away. This theory was borne out by the fact that most of her boats were gone, no fragment of them being left, indicating that the crew had taken them. The ladder hanging over the side was further proof of this. The ship was not in bad condition. Indeed, had I seen any one aboard of her I should not have taken her for a derelict.

There were one thing that puzzled me. The bell rope had not been parted; it was hanging loose. Why it was so I could not divine. Such ropes are always fastened, and I saw no reason why it should have been left unfastened or have become so after the crew had left the ship.

There was nothing open that would jeopardize the ship in case of bad weather. The hatches were in place and the companionway closed. Why this was so I could not understand—that is, if the crew had gone ashore from the anchorage, leaving her alone, and she had been blown off.

Having noted these things, I went below by the forecastle companionway.

There was not a soul below forward. I did not expect to find any one there alive, but I fancied I might find find one or more dead bodies. I went aft to where the officers' quarters were and looked into every room. The last one I came to, evidently the captain's, gave me a surprise.

On the broad berth a little boy, not a year old, sat looking at me. His eye was bright and his cheeks ruddy. Indeed, he was the picture of health. Seeing me, he broke into a smile. Behind him, with her face to the wall, lay a woman. I touched her, but she did not move. Pulling her over so that I could see her face, I saw by a slight muscular movement that she was alive.

I had brought a flask of liquor with me in case of such an emergency and poured a little down her throat. She opened her eyes, but soon closed them again.

We had brought some broth in a bottle, which one of the men carried. I called for him to come down to me and fed the woman a little of the broth. She opened her eyes again and this time looked for the child. Seeing him, she looked again at us men and muttered what I took to be thanks that the boy would be saved. We fed her a teaspoonful of broth at a time till she was able to articulate. She was so low that I dared not move her, and yet I would not leave her. We remained near the vessel all day, and before dark I determined to take her and her boy on to our own ship. Wrapping her in blankets, we carried her on deck. The most difficult part of it was to get her into the boat, but we accomplished this by tying her in a hammock and with a rope at each end lowered her. The baby I carried down in my arms. In the same way we took her aboard the MacAvoy.

The derelict was in such good condition that I concluded to put a prize crew aboard of her and send her to Honolulu, not many days' sail to the north of us. There would be nothing to do but provision and water her, though it would be safer to do some pumping, so I sent half a dozen men aboard of her with what they would need and had the pleasure of seeing them hoist her sails and move away northward.

The woman we had rescued was ready the next morning to give the main points of her experience. The ship was commanded by her husband. They had sailed from San Francisco for the Hawaiian Islands. Blown off their course by bad weather, they had come upon an island. Their stores and water being pretty nearly exhausted from being out longer than they had expected, the captain had taken the main part of the crew ashore to see if he could replenish both, leaving only three men aboard. While they were gone a hurricane sprang up from off shore, parted the cable by which the ship was anchored, and she was blown out to sea. The captain's wife helped the men to get down the hatches. This was about all they could do to keep the vessel afloat. The men remained on deck trying to get her under control, but every one of them was washed overboard.

When the storm abated the captain's wife found herself at sea on a derelict. Most of the food left aboard had been damaged. The mother, fearing that before they would be rescued the supply of food necessary to keep them both alive would be exhausted, kept it for her child. She thought over possible ways to attract attention of other vessels, but could devise no way except to loosen the bell rope and let the clapper swing with the waves. This done, she remained in her cabin with her child awaiting such fate as Providence might have for them.

She had no idea how many days she had been afloat. Her little larder grew less and less every day, and, while at first she ate what was absolutely necessary to keep sufficient strength in her to take care of her child, at last, that the little one might live as long as possible to get the benefit of a rescue, she refrained from food entirely. It is probable that had our coming been delayed a few hours she would have died.

I got what information I could from her as to the island on which her husband and his crew had been marooned and judged that it was one of the Sporades on the Polynesian groups. I was bound for the Philippines, so that both these groups lay in my course. It behooved me to find them if possible, not only to reunite this family, but take off the marooned men. A few days' sail brought us to the first of the groups, but we heard nothing of the men we searched for. But when we struck the Polynesians we had better success. The rescued woman was on deck when we passed one of them and recognized it as the island from which she had been blown. We circled it and on a bit of high ground saw with a glass something white fluttering. We turned our course toward it and struck the marooned men.

As we approached we saw them standing on the shore watching us, and presently we heard the cheer, but when we came near enough to make them hear that we had the captain's wife and boy on board they went wild with delight, and I saw one of them drop on his knees. I was sure it was the captain himself.

I shall never forget the meeting between the captain and his wife, to say nothing at his having his boy restored to him. He was so relieved and delighted at their restoration that for some time he did not ask for the story of their rescue. When he had heard it and that his ship was also saved and gone to Honolulu he had nothing further to desire.

We took him and his crew aboard and transferred them to the first ship we met going westward.

From that day to this there are two things connected with the adventure that will never fade from my memory. I shall never cease to hear the melancholy irregular tolling of that ship's bell. But, more than this, the sudden coming upon that picture of innocent budding life, unconscious of the dreadful situation of which it was the center, is stamped indelibly on my mental vision. I had found in the midst of an ocean a ship, on that ship the only conscious thing was a child and on that child's face a smile.

DIABETES

Is one of the most cruel maladies of which mankind is subject, the many complications arising from time to time, making life seem almost unbearable. For many diseases, medical, scientific, and physiological knowledge and experience gained from years of deep research, has achieved remarkable results, but, up to now, little has been discovered of practical value in the treatment and cure of Diabetes. In fact, people have begun to look upon the disease as well-nigh incurable. Even in the medical profession can be found doctors who are of the same opinion, regarding sceptically any claim to ameliorate or improve the condition of a diabetic patient.

It can, however, be proved that SANSOL'S ANTIDIABETES lastingly cures all cases of Diabetes. Full particulars can be obtained from the Sansol Mfg. Co., Winnipeg, Man.

Prominent Ontario Man Recommends Gin Pills For The Kidneys

Found at last—a genuine cure for Kidney and Bladder Troubles. Mr. Bauer knows about it. Mr. Simpson knows about it. And they are telling all their friends and neighbors what Gin Pills did for them. Here is Mr. Bauer's letter. Study it.

DAVISVILLE, ONT.

"I had trouble with my Kidneys and Bladder so I got a sample of GIN PILLS and followed directions. I felt better after the first dose and I kept taking them for a month.

One day, Mr. Simpson of this town told me about the trouble he had with his kidneys, and I recommended him to try GIN PILLS, and gave him one to take. The next day, he bought some for himself, and both he and his wife have derived great benefit from them."

HERBERT H. BAUER.

Every man who has any Kidney Trouble or suffers with Rheumatism should do just as MR. BAUER did—take GIN PILLS—and cure himself, as MR. BAUER did.

You see, GIN PILLS do cure Kidney and Bladder Troubles. Gin Pills ease the pain in the back and stop those sharp, shooting pains. Gin Pills give strength to weak kidneys, soothe the irritated bladder and correct incontinence and suppression of urine. You don't have to take our word for all this, or even buy Gin Pills before trying them. Write for free sample—try them—see how good they are—and then buy the regular size boxes at your dealer's—50c, or six boxes for $2.50. Write for the free sample. Beresford Wasn't Lost.

Temagami is a delightful tourist region and, being in Canada, is patronized chiefly by Americans, while Canadians are in Europe, searching for a holiday spot. They tell a story in this charming lake district, and they tell it in whispers, of the time Lord Charles Beresford was there on a fishing trip. He was due in Toronto for a public event, but found the fishing and the sport generally so excellent that somehow or other a message got on the telegraph wire to the effect that Lord Charles was lost in the bush. His lordship, it is imagined, was not so much alarmed as were his Toronto friends. Big game is in Temagami, too, and the writer was an onlooker to the lassooing from a little steamer of a fine black bear, who grunted disapproval of a rope around his neck, and made for the shore as rapidly as possible on being released.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got THE NEW METHOD TREATMENT. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $12 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

SHE FAINTED WITH THE AGONY

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Her Kidneys

Miss MAGGIE JANNACK

MOUNTAIN, ONT., DEC. 14th. 1910

"I desire to let the world know the great debt I owe "Fruit-a-tives" which saved my life when I had given up hope of ever being well again.

For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen. The pain in my side and legs would be so bad that I would faint with the agony.

Five different doctors attended me and all said it was Kidney Disease and gave me no hope of getting well.

A kind neighbor visited me and mentioned the case of Mrs. Fenwick who had been cured of a sickness like mine. I took "Fruit-a-tives" and in a short time, I began to feel better—the swelling went down—the pains were easier—and soon I was well.

I have gained over 30 pounds since taking "Fruit-a-tives"—and my friends look upon my recovery as a miracle."

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c.—or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

The Fascinating Art of Molding In Putty.

ARTISTIC COOKING UTENSILS.

Novel Dainties to Serve With Afternoon Tea—The Girl at the Matinee. Spring Hats of Taffeta With Rolling Brims Are the Smartest Models.

My Dear Elsa—I have had so much pleasure doing putty work lately that I want to tell you all about how this fascinating handicraft is accomplished. First of all you get 10 cents' worth of putty and have ready the article you want to decorate. My maiden attempt was an earthenware jug, which I decorated with fancy bits of china which had been previously broken. Any other bright and pretty bits of material may be used. Even colored buttons may be utilized for this purpose.

Work the putty a little in your hands to make it soft, then press it upon the jug, covering it evenly, a little at a time, making the covering about half an inch thick. Into this you press while the putty is still soft the bits of glass, china or buttons which you have selected to ornament your masterpiece. Keep on in this manner until the entire jug is covered. A jug that I have just finished has beads pressed in thickly between the china and glass, and the effect is charming. But in doing putty work you must be sure that all the decorations are close together, so all possibility of a space between the ornaments is averted. The finished work must be set away for at least four weeks to get thoroughly dry. Now, when the surface is dry beyond a doubt you may if you wish gild the entire article. As the gilt will wear off after a few months a fresh application will be necessary from time to time.

In connection with bric-a-brac a girl I know who lives in a studio where there is no provision for housekeeping utensils has picked up the most artistic and at the same time useful cooking utensils that serve as ornaments on the shelves and rails of the room when they are not in use. There are the most attractive bowls of all sizes and descriptions covered and uncovered, jugs and mugs. When these really artistic potteries are matched up in odd china—cups, saucers and plates—they are very effective for the purpose of ornament as well as for actual use. When shopping recently with this artistic friend of mine she picked up a charming blue and green covered pottery bowl, and when I asked its use she smilingly assured me that it was in turn vegetable and flower dish. "Of course," she added, "you have closet room for your dishes, but mine have to stand in sight all the time." By the way, this girl serves at her studio teas a delicious Scotch shortbread. The recipe comes directly from the Land o' Cakes, and I am sure you would like to have it, so I am sending you the formula as it was given to me and hope that you will enjoy the bread as much as I do:

Scotch Shortbread.

Four ounces of butter, five ounces of flour, two ounces of ground rice, two ounces of powdered sugar and a pinch of salt. Put all the ingredients on a baking board in separate heaps, knead the butter and sugar together until all the sugar is used, then knead in the ground rice next, then the flour slowly. After all the flour has been kneaded in and the dough is quite smooth make it into one or two rounds, using the rolling pin a little. Make the edges high and pinch them. Prick all over with a fork through and through and bake on a floured baking tin in a moderate oven for twenty minutes or longer, according to thickness. A piece of paper should be placed under the shortbread when it is cooked in a gas oven. Cool the shortbread for a few minutes on the tin before lifting it. For afternoon tea shortbread roll out the dough a little thinner and cut with a fancy cutter.

You say, dear, that fancy cakes for afternoon tea can be bought so cheaply that it is hardly worth while to bother making them, but the baker does not exist this side of bonny Scotland who can turn out anything as toothsome as this shortbread. Very delectable little cakes, though, are made with plain white cake made by any preferred receipe and baked in shallow pans and cut while warm into squares, oblongs, triangles, etc. These shapes are dipped either in chocolate or maple fondant and are then heavily sprinkled with chopped nuts.

What are the salient features of spring millinery, you asked me, Elsa? Well, dear, you can put anything in the way of a hat on your pretty little head and be modish if it is small in size and flexible in composition and has taffeta silk somewhere in its cosmos. Yes, taffeta's going to be the fashionable slogan this season both for costumes and headgear, but it is not the taffeta of other days, that unyielding and stiff stuff that could never be induced to take graceful lines and curves. The characteristic of the new taffeta is that of a soft, pliable fabric that is a joy to make into bows and hat crowns.

Apropos of flexibility, at the matinee yesterday a young girl astonished her mother by disposing of her outdoor belongings in a most unusual fashion. Into her big muff were nonchalantly stowed her flexible little hat, fur neckpiece, pocketbook and, much against her mother's wishes, a pair of sandals. When the storage business was over the young hopeful smilingly looked at her parent with the remark, "Isn't it a dandy way to get rid of these togs?" All who saw the girl's place of storage were thrilled with the convenience of the idea, and all doubt as to the appearance of the "togs" when they emerged from their hiding place was set at rest when the girl, at the close of the performance, removed her hat from the muff none the worse, for its temporary imprisonment.

By the way, I do wish you had been with me and had seen the exquisitely satirical Barrie curtain raiser, a delicious skit on modern social conditions of ultra smart society. "A Slice of Life" is the very appropriate name Barrie has given his last little fling. There are only three characters—the lady butler, a clever hit at woman's invasion of man's domestic domain, and a very up to date young married couple who before their marriage had confessed to a "past." Through a ruse of the lady butler they were obliged to admit that there had been no past and that both had always been disgustingly "moral." The enormity of such righteousness could not be borne in their sphere of life, so there was nothing left for them to do but to separate. A penny was flipped to settle this weighty question and to determine which should remain at home. The husband, having lost in the wager, prepares to take his departure, but at the door he turns dramatically and asks, "What is to become of the child?" "My dear," sweetly replies his wife, "there is no child."

Could anything be more cleverly put than this covert allusion to the well known neglect of a certain class of society of their children.

But, to come back to millinery, your spring hat must have its brim rolled somewhere. Somehow it matters not just where so it rolls. And the trimming, if you want to be in the front rank of fashion, must be placed directly in front of the chapeau. This style, though undoubtedly dashing and becoming to certain women, has a hint of boldness that I am afraid you will not like, Elsa. It is a style, too, that will soon have had its little day, and "when it falls it falls, like Lucifer, never to rise again," at least not for several seasons. As a parting piece of admonition let me again remind you that if your milliner this spring insists upon selling you a hat that is stiff and unbending she has no business to ask a high price for it, since only cheaper and heavier straw braids are made up in this manner. Now, having worked off all my surplus information on you, I must trot away to a reception given for one of the season's "debs." Devotedly yours,

MABEL.

SHE WAS SURPRISED

When Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cured her Chronic Liver Complaint

Mrs. R. Smith, of Winnipeg, Man., tells an interesting story of relief from almost intolerable sufferings:

"I can hardly tell you how great my sufferings have been. Chronic liver complaint accompanied by biliousness were a daily source of trial to me. Every day I experienced the sickening effects of these ailments. I longed for some medicine that should permanently drive them away.

Hearing of Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, I thought they were worthy of a trial. My surprise was indeed great. From the very first I experienced relief. Continuing with them I found my troubles were slowly but surely leaving me, and before long I once more knew what it was to be free from the harassing effects of the ailments that had long sickened and weakened me. So great is my faith in Dr. Morse's Indian Pills that I shall never on any account be without them."

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure Bowel and Kidney as well as Liver troubles, and keep you healthy. 25c a box at your dealer's. 14

The Children's Blackboard.

Nearly all children like a blackboard in their playroom. If it is on an easel it is easily knocked down; if it is fastened on the wall it looks unsightly sometimes to the children's mothers. To overcome the untidiness and to please the children at the same time get a blackboard on a roller and spring. It works on the same principle as a window shade.

It can be rolled up when not in use. Use colored water crayons on the board instead of chalk and there will not be so much dust. Both can be bought at a kindergarten supply store.

"Was Fading Away"

A Young Woman—Scarcely Thirty—Seemed to Be Dying on Her Feet.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills Cured

"I think it should be the duty of the schools to teach children how to keep well," writes Miss Nannie E. Naydon, a well-known, and highly esteemed resident of Bristol. "Ignorance of the laws of health and the use of improper remedies destroyed my vigor, and led me to the verge of invalidism. I was as a girl ruddy and strong. Nothing seemed to affect me until I was about thirty. Then gas began to form in the stomach. I suffered with bloating and a general failure in strength set in. If I went upstairs my breath hurt. My system was very irregular, and until I grew pretty bad I didn't pay much heed to my condition. Then I got blue, worried all the time, wakened in the night, and couldn't get to sleep again. None of the medicine I took helped me. One day I was reading of a very interesting case like mine cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I took the same treatment. It was just right—didn't physic me to death, but took hold of the weak, sick parts of my system, and set things right. It seems as if Dr. Hamilton's Pills have made me young again, and all my color, spirits, vigor, and health of former days have returned to stay."

Every girl and woman should use Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly. They help a woman in many ways. Beware of the dealer who asks you to take an inferior pill on which his profit is larger than on Dr. Hamilton's. Sold in yellow boxes, 25c per box, all dealers, or The Catarrhozone, Co., Kingston, Ont.

Good form

Social Amenities of the Schoolgirl.

If there is one way more than another in which a young girl can show bad form it is in the way she treats the men acquaintances of an older sister. Sad to relate, the type of pert younger sister exists, even flourishes, unless there be a strong hand to put her down. And because older persons frequently laugh at her and the girl succeeds in "fussing" her older sister the younger one considers herself a huge success and continues in a manner or with lack of it calculated to create a prejudice against herself that only long years can wipe out.

If there is ever a time when a young girl will do well to keep herself out of the way it is when the friends of her older sister are present. Grownup persons, parents and their friends have a certain toleration of children, little or big, which girls and boys of nineteen and twenty cannot be expected to have. There really isn't any use in a little sister making herself unpopular, even if she does create a laugh while so doing, and there is no question that she will be heartily under the ban of an older sister whom the other makes a target for her sharp tongue or whose secrets she "gives away" because the child thinks they are funny.

To tell the truth, it is not only the grown girl who will appear better by the younger one's absence, but the "little sister" herself will gain greater popularity. Grown girls and men who go to see one of their own set do not care to have their time and attention monopolized by one who is too young for their notice or at least whom they consider to be such. Yet because they are well bred they must be polite to her, being annoyed proportionately.

One great objection to a young girl's being with her older sister's friends and probably the strongest reason why she should not be is the almost irresistible temptation to talk personalities, frankly to tell what she knows, not always stopping there, but unconsciously exaggerating. It is not at all improbable that the others may find this amusing, even instructive, in the side lights thrown on the characteristics of older sister and her friends, but that, as a rule, is far from desirable. If it is a joke the younger girl tells or a personal fact that would be unknown save for her it is remembered in the set of acquaintances and also that the younger one divulged.

The listeners may be highly interested at the time, unwittingly flattering the juvenile talker by their attention, but it counts against her later, just the same. Not only does she make herself vastly unpopular with her own family, but outsiders are prone to consider her a "terror," saying, "She ought to be suppressed," themselves developing a fear of her tongue that makes them prefer her absence to her presence.

The same is true if the younger sister refrains from personalities and merely occupies the attention of her sister's friends in other ways. She puts herself forward then undesirably. She gains the reputation of being pert, and instead of their regarding her as a sweet and attractive young girl they think of her as one to be avoided.

The surest way out of the temptation of being funny at the expense of an older sister and her friends is to keep away from where they are.

That does not preclude "having fun" with the older sister when there is no one else about.

Dress Etiquette.

"Last night," said the woman who notices things, "I was at a big affair and sat next the most disagreeable woman I have ever yet experienced. And it was all because she was wearing a hat."

"I know," murmured the aesthetic girl, "just how an ugly hat makes you feel about loving your neighbor."

"But this," went on the woman who notices things, "wasn't an ugly hat. It wasn't even a shabby one. On the contrary, it was an expensive and up to date affair, and when its wearer's features were in their everyday pattern I have no doubt that it was becoming. The trouble was that all the other women present were not wearing hats at all, but sat in all the formality of bare heads and shoulders. It was one of those affairs which are not easily classed, when you have to guess at the correct attire and every other woman has guessed differently from the one who had come in a hat.

"Instead of making the best of a blunder and taking her hat off, this woman seemed to be trying to convince herself that her guess had been right after all and that all the rest of us were foolish creatures who dressed beyond our incomes and our stations. The effort made her furious. I thought her a most pathetic and humiliating spectacle. I am sure that we exaggerated the importance of dress."

"So do I," said the woman who notices things. "Then we might have time to get something that really satisfied us, if only once in a lifetime."

"I think," the youngest woman put in as she crossed one slim ankle over the other, "I should choose a white wool sweater and a white skirt. As I wouldn't have any other outside garments, I could afford to have them washed as often as I liked."

"I would have a silk gown for summer and a soft woolen one for winter," said the woman who notices things. "They would both wash and both be embroidered."

ROUTED HIS CREDITOR.

Lespes, the French Writer, Adopted a Most Effective Method.

Lespes, the French journalist, known as Timothee Trimm, was once disagreeably intruded on by a creditor, who announced his intention of not departing until he was paid. The creditor planted himself on a chair, and Lespes beheld him, with consternation, draw bread and cheese from his pockets, as though to fortify himself against events.

Several hours glided by. Lespes had resumed his writing and finished an article. The creditor showed no signs of moving. Suddenly Lespes rose and with bits of newspaper began carefully blocking all the apertures through which air could come into the room. He then made preparations for lighting a charcoal fire, but before applying the match pasted on the wall just opposite the creditor's eyes a paper thus laconically worded:

"Take notice that we died of our own will."

"What are you doing?" exclaimed the creditor uneasily.

"Your society would render life intolerable, so we are going to commit suicide together," answered Timothee tranquilly.

It is needless to say that the creditor decamped without waiting for results and without his money.—Argonaut.

Took the Gift Without Thanks.

The name of W. H. Alexander is practically an unknown one in England, yet he it was who gave to the country the enormous sum of $400,000 for the purpose of building the National Portrait Gallery. The only recognition he asked for this munificent gift was that he might have an autograph letter from Queen Victoria giving expression to the nation's gratitude. It is more than remarkable that up to the time of his death this modest request had not been granted, and no recognition was made of his handsome gift. It is surmised that this simple wish was never laid before the Queen.—Pearson's.

AN EXCELLENT REMEDY

Baby's Own Tablets are an excellent remedy for little ones. They never fail to relieve baby of stomach and bowel complaints or the many other little ills that worry him. Besides this they are absolutely safe, being guaranteed by a government analyst to contain no opiates or other harmful drugs. Concerning them Mrs. Sam Legros, Ste. Cecile, Que., writes: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets an excellent remedy for my little one and would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price,

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

TWO KILLED WHEN WALLS OF FACTORY COLLAPSED; MAN JUMPED THREE STOREYS

As a Result It Is Declared by Building Inspector of Piling Too Great a Weight of Flooring In Upper Stories of Big Building, One Wall Collapses Bringing Death and Injury to Several Persons.

Toronto, May 6.—Two lives were instantly crushed out and fifteen people were more or less seriously injured on Saturday morning when the south wall of the Wm. Neilson Co.'s factory on Gladstone avenue, south of College street, collapsed, and carried timbers, lumber and human beings with it.

The casualty list is as follows:

Dead.

Mrs. Eva Anderson, aged 20, 1,206A Dufferin street.

Luege Scenna, aged 19, Italian, derrickman, 740 Brock avenue.

Injured.

(In Western Hospital.)

Mrs. Annie Thompson, aged 45, 607 Dufferin street, badly bruised head, body and limbs, suffering from shock.

Miss Emily Watson, aged 18, 106 Russet avenue, gashed scalp and nose, injuries to breast and back, suffering from shock.

Miss Lettie Carey, aged 27, 39 De-Grassi street, cuts about head and face.

Miss Susan Burns, 115 Summerhill avenue, aged 22, scalp wound and bruises about head and legs, semi-conscious until 4 p.m. yesterday.

Miss Mabel Bowman, aged 23, 771 Gladstone avenue, suffering from shock.

William Lammy, aged 38, carpenter, 12 Borden street, broken legs.

Michele (Joe) Tersigni, builders' laborer, 15 Arthur street, aged 51, slight bruises.

Charles Ferguson, aged 22, carpenter, 5 Kimberley avenue, eyes injured, cut and bruised about head and face.

(Taken Home.)

Miss Alma Ryan, 51 Bellevue avenue, aged 19, suffering from shock.

Miss Emily Woseley, 47 Wyndham street.

Miss Pearl Allen, 17 Beaconsfield avenue.

Mrs. Smale, of the paper box department, slightly injured by a falling beam while trying to aid in the rescue.

Miss Irene Lawson, 110 Bellewoods avenue.

The piling on Friday of what is estimated as ninety tons of hardwood flooring upon the top floors of the building is believed by the city's building inspector to have caused the collapse. Mr. Neilson, sr., would not make a statement.

The wall broke first at its eastern end and pitched down toward the west where it was met by the wreckage from that section. A score of employes were caught in the avalanche and carried into the basement, where the crumbled ruins closed over them.

Screams and groans followed the collapse. Great clouds of mortar-dust surrounded the place and shut off the view of the havoc wrought by the disaster.

P. C. Collins was standing at the corner of Brock and Dundas streets, when he heard a crash like thunder and turning saw the wall tumbling to the ground. He promptly turned in an alarm to the fire department and then rushed to a nearby house and called for the police ambulances.

Mrs. Eva Anderson, a newly-married young woman, was the first to be taken out. She was dead. Louis Shine, an Italian, was also dead when the men reached him, but fifteen others owe their lives to the valient efforts of firemen, police and workmen on the building.

William Lammy, a carpenter, who was working on the fifth storey, noticed the wall start to bulge and jumped three storeys at the back of the building to a two-storey annex. Both of his legs were broken, but if he had remained on the roof where he was he would have been quite safe.

Several of the workers fainted in the pit but were revived with water and whisky and went back to the task with renewed vigor. The men tore frantically at the wreckage as feeble groans issued from the bottom of the black hole. Chief Thompson encouraged the men to greater efforts and had great difficulty in preventing other willing people from throwing bricks on the workers. Motor and horse ambulances from every quarter of the city rushed the patients to the Western Hospital where H. C. Tomlin, superintendent, had a large staff of doctors and nurses waiting to treat them.

Last night the Western Hospital, where all the maimed victims of the disaster were taken, said all were doing as well as could be expected.

Dr. J. E. Elliott opened an inquest at the morgue at 10 a.m. this morning, but will adjourn for a week so that full evidence of all the circumstances surrounding the disaster may be secured.

A great many points will have to be gone into thoroughly and many varying theories fully considered before any conclusions as to the cause of the disaster can be made by the city authorities.

Convicted of Manslaughter.

Port Huron, Mich., May 6.—George Essen of Petrolea, Ont., convicted of manslaughter in connection with the death last winter of Thomas Major, a local yachtsman, was on Saturday sentenced to from four to fifteen years in the State Reformatory at Ionia, with a recommendation that the maximum period be five years.

B. C. Scared Stiff.

Nelson, B.C., May 6.—Considerable alarm has followed a statement by William Cockley of the Kootenay, an entomologist that wood ticks, which abound in British Columbia, carry germs which caused spinal meningitis and beri-berl, and that the bite of the insects is frequently fatal.

SUFFRAGETTES ON PARADE

New York, May 6.—With more than twenty thousand women and several thousand men in line the Woman Suffrage parade which started up Fifth avenue at a late hour Saturday afternoon was not finished when darkness fell. At the last moment the parade, which was expected to have about 15,000 marchers, was found to be growing rapidly all along the line.

Preparations had been made for the assignment of additional marchers, but not for the number who joined the movement in the last hour of the formations of the various divisions.

There were suffragettes — militant and non-militant—active workers in the campaign and those who were merely sympathetic who marched to combat the idea that "only a handful of women want the ballot."

The line of march from Washington square to Carnegie Hall was packed. From the windows of Fifth avenue there flew flags in honor of the occasion, and every window that gave a view of the avenue was a grandstand that applauded as the women passed in review.

The personnel of the parade, aside from the various shades of suffrage belief represented, presented a perfect democracy embracing women from almost every walk of life.

Women from the farming districts marched side by side with women whose names are widely known, are representative of great wealth and proud social distinction, under the banner of sympathetic interest of the New York State Suffrage Association, headed by Miss Harriet May Mills, president, and Miss May Morrison, acting as grand marshal.

Women who represent the riches and the old Knickerbocker aristocracy of New York City marched with the same degree of enthusiasm as the long line of working women and the hosts from the east side.

Delegations from the six suffrage states and good sized bodies from ten other states where women are asking for the vote, lent to the parade a national aspect.

From the time the big suffrage army moved from under the arch at Washington square at 5 o'clock until nearly 6.30, when the army reached Carnegie Hall, after its two and a half mile walk, Fifth avenue presented a moving picture of brilliant color.

LEFT OVER TEN MILLIONS

New York, May 6.—The will of Benjamin Guggenheim, who perished in the Titanic disaster, was filed yesterday in the Surrogate Court. The amount of property is not stated, except as being more than $10,000,000. After disposing of more than $10,000,000 to various charities, the will disposes of the residue—one-third to his widow, Mrs. Flora Guggenheim, and the other two-thirds equally divided among his children. His widow and two brothers, Simon and William, are named as executors. The will was executed Dec. 3, 1905.

Landed at Last.

Kingston, May 6.—Two years ago David Walker secured whisky for a man on the Indian list and escaped the law until Saturday, when he was arrested. Magistrate Farrell fined $25 and costs or one month. He went down.

SHOULD KEEP THE PICTURES AT HOME

London, May 6.—At the annual banquet of the Royal Academy last night, the president, Sir Edward J. Poynter, paid a warm tribute to the late Edwin A. Abbey. Referring to H. C. Frick's purchase of a Rembrandt from Lord Feversham for $250,000, Sir Edward recommended the passage of a law requiring owners to give the Government an option on valuable art works before selling to outsiders.

Premier Asquith and Winston Churchill also spoke, while the American ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, and John Hays Hammond were among the guests. Premier Asquith said that the country could not view with equanimity the sale of great paintings abroad, but at the same time could not expect the British taxpayer, on whose shoulders rested so many heavy burdens, to enter into competition with the millionaires of the world.

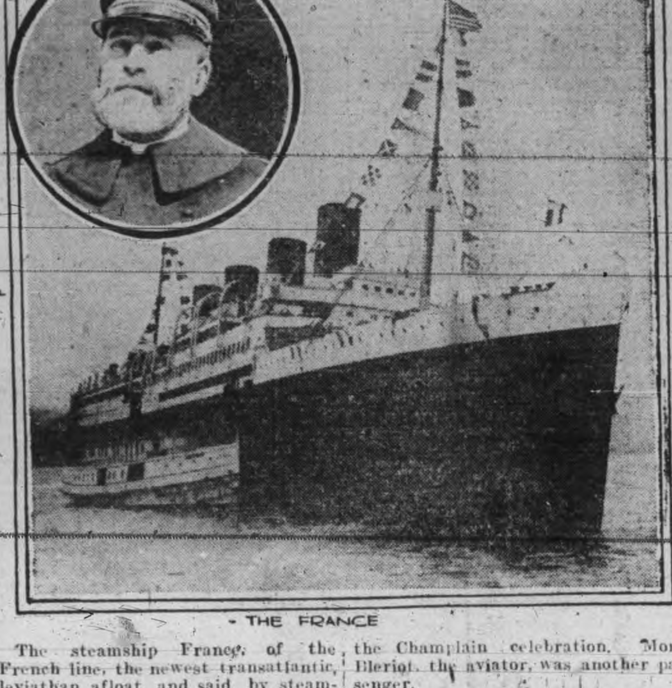
WALKED TO HER DEATH

Special to the Review.

Merriton, May 6.—Mrs. Margaret Burley, a widow who is known to have been a somnambulist, was found drowned in the old Welland canal this morning, clad only in a nightgown. It is believed she was walking in her sleep and fell into the water.

NEW FRENCH LINER HERE ON MAIDEN TRIP

CAPTAIN M PONCELET



THE FRANCE

The steamship France, of the French line, the newest transatlantic leviathan afloat, and said, by steamship experts to be one of the most artistically constructed vessels in the world, recently arrived on her maiden trip from Havre. She brought a passenger list of notable persons, which included Robert Bacon, the retiring American Ambassador, and the French delegation which is here to represent the French Government at the Champlain celebration. Mons. Bleriot, the aviator, was another passenger.

There are many striking features in the France. On her first trials, she developed a speed of twenty-seven knots an hour. On her maiden trip, she made an average speed of 22.25 knots. Captain Poncelet, commodore of the French line fleet and commander of the French navy, brought the France here.

ELLIS CONFIDENT HE WILL BE FREED

Is to be Arraigned at Lindsay on Thursday---He Denies That Shooting Was the Result of a Family Feud.

Minden, May 6.—Arthur Ellis is confident that his plea of self-defence will be accepted when he is arraigned before Magistrate Fielding at Lindsay on Thursday or Friday for the murder of Lewis Porter. The inquest will be concluded here on Monday night, and at its conclusion Ellis will be taken to Lindsay by Constable Welch. Provincial Detective Reburn will remain for the inquest and will be at the preiminary hearing before the magistrate.

Ellis stated in his cell at the lockup here yesterday that he had faith in his plea of self-defence. He denied that the shooting was a result of a family feud, and also denied that he had said to anyone that he expected to be hanged for the crime.

Five shots were fired, he says, of which he fired three after Porter had fired at him twice. He was sure that Porter had gone out on the day of the murder with the intention of getting a shot at himself. He said he did not know why he carried the body so far from the road after he had killed Porter, as he could have taken it and sunk it in Gull Lake, nearby. He admitted that he and Porter had had several arguments, but stated that he and his victim were on speaking terms till the last.

Several witnesses have been subpoenaed for the inquest to-night and Dr. T. A. White will give the result of the post mortem examination. Charles Wood also has been summoned to tell at what time he heard five shots fired.

STEAMER "MINIA" BRINGS HER DEAD TO HALIFAX

Special To The Review

Halifax, May 6—The cable steamer Minia, which relieved the "MacKay-Bennett in the work of searching for the Titanic's dead, returned here this morning with flags at half mast. The same method of landing bodies was pursued as in the caser of the MacKay Bennett, and orders as to admission to the dock yard were just as strict as those of last week.

Chas. M. Hays' body was turned over to a Grand Trunk official and was taken to Montreal on a special train.

The Mina had 17 bodies aboard. So far as could be judged by the ship's doctor only one of the seventeen picked up had died by drowning. The other sixteen had perished of exposure and death did not ensue until some four hours after the Titanic sank.

MERGER OF SOAP COMPANIES

St. Stephen, N.B., May 6.—A big commercial deal was completed here last week when the St. Croix Soap Manufacturing Co. at St. Stephen amalgamated with John Taylor & Co. of Toronto. The new corporation will be known as the Canadian Soaps, Limited, and is capitalized at $2,000,000, a majority of the stock being held in St. Stephen. None of the stock will be placed on the market.

J. E. Ganong of St. Stephen is president, and the directors are: C. W. Young and G. W. Ganong, St. Stephen; Henry Wright, A. F. Taylor, M. J. Taylor and A. C. Taylor of Toronto. Each establishment will be run under its present management. The Ontario and western business will be handled from Toronto and the Quebec, Maritime Provinces and West India trade from St. Stephen.

Will Examine Ports.

Ottawa, May 6.—In the course of a month the Government steamer Minto will go on a trip to Hudson Bay and Straits, taking along an expedition to investigate as to the relative merits of Port Nelson and Fort Churchill as the terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway. Captains Anderson and Bartlett will be in command.

Italians Seize Rhodes.

Rome, May 6.—Premier Giolitti announced in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday afternoon that the Italian squadron had seized and occupied the Island of Rhodes without opposition. A large body of troops disembarked from the transports.

SEAMEN ARE DISCHARGED

Portsmouth, Eng., May 6.—The seamen of the White Star liner Olympic who quit that vessel after the strike of the firemen, were allowed to go on Saturday by the magistrates sitting in the police court here, where the men were tried on a charge of mutiny. The magistrates decided that the charges were proved against the 54 mutineers, but expressed the opinion that it would be inexpedient to imprison or fine the defendants under the circumstances which had arisen prior to their refusal to obey orders.

The magistrates discharged the defendants and said they hoped the men would return to duty.

Would Make Hole In Court.

Wytheville, Va., May 6.—The alleged conspiracy feature of the case against the Allens of Hillsville was again taken up at the trial here on Saturday of Floyd Allen, charged specifically with the murder of Prosecuting Attorney Foster of Carrell County.

Newton J. Bevil, the first witness of the day, told of threats he had made to Floyd Allen during the progress of his trial at Hillsville. "I'll stand for anything," Bevil said Allen declared, "but before they try to send me to the 'pen' I'll make the biggest hole in that court any man ever did."

The witness asserted that he also heard Floyd Allen threaten to kill his own counsel, Judge Bolen, if he was not ably defended.

BOTH ARE TO BE REPLACED

Provincial Secretary Hanna Makes the Statement That the Resignation of Head of Huron License Commission Is Now In His Hands and Term of Inspector Is at an End—No Other Course Open.

Toronto, May 6.—William Patterson, chairman of the Centre Huron Board of License Commissioners, and Albert Asquith, the license inspector, are to be removed from office as a result of the investigation into the charges before Commissioner Eudo Saunders, of the License Department. This was made known by Hon. W. J. Hanna on Saturday.

"While not handing out a copy of Mr. Saunders' report," said the Minister, "I may say that the report of the evidence leaves me no alternative but to change the chairman of the commission as well as the inspector. Apart entirely from the inspector's instructions in the matter, facts brought out, make it clear that his usefulness as an inspector is gone."

Patterson's resignation is already in the hands of the Minister, and will therefore be accepted. The dismissal of Asquith, the inspector, is a result of his own evidence before Mr. Saunders, in which he admitted that he had been offered a bribe by the hotelkeeper, yet had not reported the fact to the board, and had later recommended that the hotelkeeper, who offered the bribe, be given a license. For this he was sharply criticized by Mr. Saunders, and the commissioner followed it up by advising his dismissal.

ROOSEVELT'S DECLARATION

Cumberland, May 6.—"Bosses" in the Democratic party and in the Republican party, Col Roosevelt charged on Saturday, have combined to defeat him. He asserted that Democratic "bosses" saw their own downfall if he should win. It was the last day of his Maryland campaign, the final shot of which was fired here Saturday night. The colonel made a number of speeches as he traveled across the state and in Cumberland he spoke his last appeal for support in the primaries on Monday. From Cumberland he started back for Oyster Bay for a week's rest.

"The Democrats are almost as much concerned in the outcome as we are," he said in his speech at Hagerstown. "If we overthrow our own bosses, the example will be catching. That's why the Democratic bosses are furtively aiding the bosses in our own party to defeat us. When one boss is thrown down the other bosses shake on their feet. If we shake down our own bosses, the others are not going to stand very long.

"In Baltimore our political opponents, the Democrats, are aiding the federal officeholders because they think that if they beat the plain people in the Republican party, the party will be easier to defeat," he said.

The colonel made speeches at Westminster, Frederick, Hagerstown, Hancock and Cumberland. The people of Frederick and Cumberland took a holiday and made a great event of it. In both cities there was parades through crowded streets, with bands and escorts of mounted men and men afoot.

GOMEZ IS THE REBEL PRESIDENT

El Paso, Texas, May 6.—Emilio Vasquez Gomez was declared Provisional President of Mexico shortly after noon Saturday, and established his provisional capital in the customs house in Juarez, where Francisco Madero established his provisional capital May 10 last year.

He appointed Col. Pasqual Orozco, father of the generalissimo of the rebels, Minister of War, and Lic Moreno, Canton of Yucatan, Minister of Foreign Relations.

The rest of the Cabinet will be named to-day.

Gomez came here Friday night from San Antonio, in response to a telegram dated May 4 from Pasqual Orozco. He went to Juarez shortly before noon Saturday. A telegram from Gen. Orozco congratulating him on assuming his duties was received by Gomez shortly after reaching Juarez.

The Man With the Silver Arm.

Don Melchor de la Vega, the Count of Monclova, was Spanish viceroy of Mexico in the latter part of the seventeenth century. He was sent out to take charge of New Castile in 1686. He was called "the man with the silver arm" for the simple and literal reason that, having lost his right arm in battle, he supplied its place with an arm of silver. He founded the town of Monclova and began the construction at his own expense of the aqueduct which brings the water from Chapultepec to Solto del Agna along the ancient route. In 1689 the Spanish Government transferred him to the control of the Peruvian provinces.

Probably It Would.

In a Sunday school the class was under a question on the sacraments. The sacrament of matrimony was taken up, and a seven-year-old startled her teacher when replying to a question as to the necessity for this sacrament by answering: "No. Matrimony is not necessary to salvation, but should a favorable opportunity afford it would be sinful to neglect it."

TO SEARCH FOR MORE BODIES OF TITANIC VICTIMS

KING EDWARD VII.
Born Nov. 9, 1841; died May 6, 1910.

The Steamship Montmagny Has Been Ordered by the Dominion Government To Go to the Place and Relieve the Minia, Which Is Returning With Twenty Bodies—Will Follow Gulf Stream.

Halifax, May 6.—The search for Titanic bodies is to be continued and the Government steamship Montmagny will sail to-day, relieving the Minia, which is expected to arrive with less than twenty bodies to-day. The White Star officials tried to get another steamship, but failed. The two cable ships are required for their regular work, the French cable requiring the Mackay-Bennett, while the Minia is also needed elsewhere.

Efforts were made to obtain the steamship Seal, which has wireless equipment, but these proved futile. As a last recourse an application was made to the Dominion Government for the Montmagny, which has been lying here for some time undergoing repairs. This work was about concluded. At first the officials refused to allow the Montmagny, but a request was made direct to Hon. R. L. Borden and through him to the Minister of Marine, and the steamship was ordered to get ready. Barges have been alongside all day at the dockyard coaling the Montmagny and she will be ready to sail this afternoon.

The Montmagny is about four knots faster than either of the cable ships and is well adapted for the job she will have in hand. Ten days' supply of provisions will be taken along. The Government steamer in prosecuting her search will cruise along the edge of the gulf stream, and it is expected that the bodies will be found in cold water as far north perhaps as 100 miles from the place where the Titanic went down.

The Mackay-Bennett reported them drifting northeasterly and the Montmagny's cruise will be in that direction. A conference was held yesterday with the captain of the Mackay-Bennett so that the commander of the Montmagny will be possessed of all the information at that officer's disposal. Captain Peter Johnson, in charge of the lighthouse service on this coast, an experienced navigator, will be on board the Montmagny.

Rabbi Got Wrong Bodies.

Halifax, May 6.—A new development has transpired regarding the bodies taken from the Fairview Cemetery by Hebrews while the bodies were there awaiting interment.

The Hebrews were required by the authorities to return them to the morgue. This was done. It now appears that the bodies taken were not all Hebrews. Since the order for interment some of them have been identified and it is held that they are not those of Hebrews.

The Attorney-General, it is understood, will take steps to secure payment for damages to the coffins in the changes to which they have been subjected. The matter will come up again to-day.

CHEESE FACTORY IS DESTROYED

Brockville, May 6.—Willow Cheese Factory, at South Augusta, one of the oldest and best equipped in the Brockville section, caught fire Saturday by a spark from the chimney and was totally destroyed, entailing a loss of $7,000, with an insurance of $4,000. The maker, James Richardson, who lived in the building, in attempting to save his effects and the stock of cheese, was severely burned about the face and hands. Farmers of the locality saved St. George's Anglican Church, close by, which caught fire several times. The factory was owned by James Bissell & Sons of Brockville.

Run Over by Wagon.

Brampton, May 6.—Edward Groves, a driver for the Bell Telephone Co., was injured rather severely at Meadowvale Saturday afternoon. Mr. Groves' team started and he made a jump to catch them, but in some way slipped and the wagon, with a load of poles, ran over his hip. He was brought to Brampton and his injuries attended to by Dr. Heggie.

COBOURG MAN IS DROWNED

Cobourg, May 6.—That [illegible] was accidentally drowned was the verdict returned by a coroner's jury empanelled by Dr. Elliot to enquire into the cause of his death.

Mills' body was accidentally discovered in the water near the west pier Friday.

Mills, who was employed at the woollen mills, disappeared about five weeks ago. It is believed he leaves a wife and family in England.

Lesson of the Titanic.

The Hague, May 6.—The Government bill providing for an increase of life-saving appliances on vessels, which the Minister of Commerce will shortly introduce, will apply, not only to Dutch ships, but to all foreign vessels embarking passengers at Dutch ports.

TO LOOK INTO BANK MERGER

Ottawa, May 6.—The Minister of Finance has not been officially notified of the proposed merger of the Royal Bank of Canada and of the Traders' Bank of Canada, which has been decided upon by the directors of both institutions.

While the proposal will have to be finally passed upon by the Minister of Finance and the Treasury Board, it is not likely to come before the Government for a month or more. At least 30 days must elapse before the shareholders of the two institutions will have ratified the merger, and the formal application to the Minister for approval can only be made after the shareholders' meeting.

Hon. W. T. White will, it is understood, insist upon a very thorough explanation of all the circumstances and investigation of the condition of the two banks before he issues his certificate to allow the absorption of the Traders' Bank by the Royal.

Judge Mabee's Condition.

Toronto, May 6.—At midnight Dr. Bruce and Dr. Elliott made the following statement:

"At midnight Judge Mabee's condition is somewhat improved, and the outlook is slightly more hopeful."

Dr. W. P. Caven, with Dr. J. E. Elliott and Dr. Herbert Brue, issued the following bulletin at 4 o'clock yesterday:

"Judge Mabee has held his own for the last 24 hours. His condition is still critical."

Launching at Kingston.

Kingston, May 6.—The new Government tug Bellechasse, now being built at the Kingston ship building yards, will be launched on Saturday.

TELEGRAPHIC PARAGRAPHS

A large wooden trestle bridge between Dane and Kruegersdorf on the T. & N. O. Railway, 250 miles north of North Bay, caught fire Saturday and was damaged to such an extent as to be unfit for traffic.

Blood poisoning, caused by the nick of a barber's razor while he was being shaved early last week, caused the death last night at Annapolis, U. S. naval academy, of Midshipman Julian Bishop of New York City.

A Berlin druggist named Scharmach, who secured and prepared the deadly spirits which killed 89 slum dwellers some time ago, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment Saturday. Two salesmen named Zastrow and Meyen were each sentenced to two months in jail.

Cannington paid $175.65 for public lighting during the first three months of the year.

Meaford Town Council has granted $200 towards the expense of a monthly horse fair.

SCIATICA

EXPECTED DEATH ANY DAY

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by "Nerviline."

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell to the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration: "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service, and in all kinds of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold, and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job. I was in despair, completely cast down because the money I spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended "Nerviline." I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day, and got relief. In order to build up my general health and improve my blood I used Ferrozone, one tablet with each meal. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating, and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism, or sciatica to use Nerviline. I know it will cure them."

CURED SIX YEARS

There isn't a more highly-esteemed citizen in Westchester than Mr. Hires. What he says can be relied upon. For six years since being cured he hasn't had a single relapse. Don't accept anything from your dealer but "Nerviline," 50 cents per bottle, trial size, 25c; sold everywhere, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

CORNS CURED IN 24 HOURS

UNION LABEL

THE NATIONS MOVING

An announcement has been made from Berlin that a majority of the maritime nations have accepted Germany's proposal for a conference to discuss the question of life-saving. The nations are slow to move as a rule, but when they do move they are pretty sure to accomplish something. It will be hoped that all the nations with maritime interests will unite in the conference, and that the result of the deliberations will be effective measures for protecting life at sea. The wreck of the Titanic, and the investigations and discussions of the causes of the wreck and of the appalling loss of life that followed, should not only bring about an international conference, but be of service in framing regulations to govern the construction, equipment and management of ocean vessels. Small things as well as large ones are often important. The lack of glasses in the look-out of the Titanic may have been one cause of the disaster, or of it being as disastrous as it was. The knowledge and wisdom of the nations when applied to the subject should bring good results.

A PRELIMINARY CAMPAIGN

In the United States a vote is taken to elect delegates to the convention which will nominate the party candidates. This course was adopted in an effort to dethrone the political bosses who by manipulating the selection of delegates influenced or controlled the convention. One result is seen in the preconvention campaigns of President Taft and Mr. Roosevelt, for as the voters will select the delegates appeals are made in public speeches for support at these preliminary elections. These men belong to the same party and consequently the question to be decided is a personal one and it is not surprising that the speeches contain personal attacks and even abuse.

It is recalled that Mr. Roosevelt once wrote upon American ideals, in which the following appeared:

"The worst offences that can be committed against the republic is the offence of the public man who betrays his trust, but second only to it comes the offence of the man who tries to persuade others that an honest and efficient public man is dishonest or unworthy. This is a wrong that can be committed in a great many different ways. Downright foul abuse may be, after all, less dangerous than incessant misstatements, sneers, and those half-truths that are the meanest lies."

Downright abuse is a term that would seem to be a fitting one to describe some of the ex-President's references to Mr. Taft in which he uses such words as "foul," "indecent" and "slanderous," and he has intimated that the President is less than a gentleman.

If the preliminary campaign in which two public men of the same party are the contestants has become so acrimonious and abusive, what may be expected when the candidates of the different parties begin the final contest for the people's favor?

WHAT DID HE SAY?

Sir Louis Davies, a Justice of the Supreme Court, addressed the Intercolonial Club at Boston, and was reported to have said: — "These two countries, the United States and Canada, are growing side by side, and yet there is a barrier, almost heaven-high, which stands between us. Shall it continue? Why, it is almost ridiculous." Sir Louis was an advocate of reciprocity when he was in politics, and once accompanied Sir Richard Cartwright to Washington on a mission to secure a trade arrangement. But it is not expected that a Judge will continue to discuss political questions, at any rate questions upon which the parties are divided, after they have ascended the bench, and the report of Sir Louis Davies' speech caused some indignation as well as surprise. He, however, seems to lay the blame on the reporter, and has given out that what he did say was substantially as follows:—"In my pre-regenerate days I was an earnest advocate of reciprocity. That subject is now within the orbit of political controversy, and because of my position as a member of the Supreme Court of Canada it would be highly improper for me to discuss the question. I may say further that the people of Canada have spoken and have settled the matter for the time." The people have settled the matter for the time, and for a long time.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Kingston passed a bylaw to reduce the number of hotel licenses in that city, and the number was reduced—ten barrooms in a night.

The Dominion Government steamer, Earl Grey, which grounded on the coast of Nova Scotia, was another victom of speed. It was driven at full speed through a fog, without soundings being taken and without a lookout, and came to grief and was seriously damaged.

In Europe, when a street car is filled with passengers a sign indicating this is placed on the outside of the car and the vehicle does not stop again for passengers until some of those inside have alighted. When manager Munro reads this he will at once order a supply of such signs.

The Titanic enquiry in England, will be conducted by Lord Mersey, an experienced Admiralty Court judge assisted by five experts, called assessors. These investigators will not have to be spending their time learning something of maritime matters, but will at once begin the work of finding out the cause of the wreck of the giant steamer, and the loss of life.

Someone wrote a paragraph stating that every fly left alive in the spring would have a large number of descendants before fall. It has been reprinted a number of times and with every repetition a number of naughts seems to have been added to the number of descendants until the figures stretch nearly across a column. All the same, the fly is a pestiferous animal, and fewer flies will mean less disease.

The Globe says—"If it is treason to desire larger markets for Canada's products, this country will be full of traitors within five years." Bless your heart, it is not treason to desire larger markets; more is it not treason ever to secure them—unless the bargain by which they are secured is of such a nature as to make it a treasonable act. The present government has taken steps towards trade arrangements with more than one country too, but it will not do anything that would make Canada only an adjunct of any foreign country."

A peculiar mistake elected eight delegates at large in Massachusetts to support Mr. Roosevelt's nomination at the Republican convention. Eight were to be chosen. Over 11,000 voters spoiled their ballots by voting for nine Taft candidates, and of these 11,000 had been counted for the supporters of the President they would have been chosen. Mr. Roosevelt has said he does not want to profit by the mistake, and has asked the delegates to vote for Mr. Taft. The delegates, however, were instructed to vote for the ex-President, and they decline to receive different instructions, even from Mr. Roosevelt.

DO YOU USE PILLS?

If In Doubt About the Right Pills to Use Read the Following Letter Carefully:

"I am one of those persons whose system requires aid," writes Mr. Young Gledhill, from Picton, "but it is so easily affected by reason of the great sensitiveness of the bowels that ordinary drastic pills inflict great injury to the delicate coating, and excite such persistent activity as to be with difficulty checked.

"I wish in the highest terms to express the great value of Dr. Hamilton's Pills in cases like mine, and I am sure also for elderly people and the very weak there is no pill like them.

"Speaking of my own experience with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I can say they have proved the most stimulating pills for the liver I have found. I have proved their tonic action upon digestion, and the same results have been secured by friends upon whom I have urged their use. The manufacturers are to be congratulated upon possessing so valuable a prescription, and the public should know that so valuable a remedy has been placed at their command."

No other pill for constipation, for liver, kidney, or stomach trouble, compares with Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are mild and sure always to restore health. Refuse substitutes. Sold by all dealers, 25c per box, or The Catarrhozone Co., Kingston Ont.

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 4.—Statements from experts that crops had deteriorated rapidly in Northwestern Kansas led wheat traders to-day into a lively movement to buy. There was also fear that the government report next Tuesday would count hard against the bears. The market closed steady at a net advance of 1⅜c to 1⅝c. All other leading staples, too, scored a gain—corn ⅜c to ⅞c; oats ½c to ⅝c, and provisions 2½c to 12½c.

The Liverpool wheat market closed ¼d to ⅝d higher than on Friday; corn unchanged to ¼d lower. Antwerp wheat closed ⅝c higher, Berlin ½c higher, and Budapest ½c lower.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

"This seems to be the only place in the town where luncheon is provided You had better leave the car in charge of a stableman, and join us, Fitzroy," she said graciously.

"Thank you, madam," said Medenham, rousing himself from a reverie "I prefer to remain here. The hotel people will look after my slight wants, as I dislike the notion of anyone tampering with the engine while I am absent."

"Is it so delicate, then?" asked Cynthia, with a smile that he hardly understood, since he could not know how thoroughly he had routed Mrs. Devar's theories of the previous night.

"No, far from it. But its very simplicity challenges examination, and an inquisitive clodhopper can effect more damage in a minute than I can repair in an hour."

His gruff tone was music in Mrs. Devar's ears. She actually sighed her relief, but explained the lapse instantly.

"I do hope there is something nice to eat," she said. "This wonderful air makes one dreadfully hungry. When our tour is ended, Cynthia, I shall have to Brant for months."

The fare was excellent. Under its stimulating influence Miss Vanrenen forgot her vapors and elected for the front seat during the run to Glastonbury. Medenham thawed, too. By chance their talk turned to wayside flowers ,and he let the Mercury creep through a high-banked lane, all ablaze with wild roses and honeysuckle, while he pointed out the blue field scabious, the pink and cream meadow-sweet, the samphire, the milk-wort and the columbine, the campions in the cornland, and the yellow vetchling that ran up the hillside towards one of the wooded "islands" peculiar to the center of Somerset.

Cynthia listened, and, if she marveled, betrayed no hint of surprise that a chauffeur should have such a store of woodman's craft. Medenham, aware only of a rapt audience of one, threw disguise to the breeze created by the car when the pace quickened. He told of the Glastonbury Thorn, and how it was brought to the west country by no less a gardener than Joseph of Arimathea, and how St. Patrick was born in the Isle of Avallon, so called because its apple-orchards bore golden fruit, and how the very name of Glastonbury is derived from the crystal water that hemmed the isle——

"Please let me intrude one little question," mumured the girl. "I am very ignorant of some things. What has 'Avallon' got to do with 'apples'?"

"Ha!" cried Medenham, warming to his subject and retarding speed again, "that opens up a wide field. In Celtic mythology Avallon is Ynys yr Afallon, the Island of Apples. It is the Land of the Blessed, where Morgana holds her court. Great heroes like King Arthur and Ogier le Dane were carried there after death, and, as apples were the only first-rate fruit known to the northern nations, a place where they grew in luscious abundance came to be regarded as the soul-kingdom. Merlin says that fairyland is full of apple trees——"

"I believe it is," cried Cynthia, nudging his arm and pointing to an orchard in full bloom.

Mrs. Devar could hear little and understand less of what they were saying; but the nudge was eloquent; her steel-blue eyes narrowed, and she thrust her face between them.

"We mustn't dawdle on the road, Fitzroy. Bristol is still a long way off, and we have so much to see—Glastonbury, Wells, Cheddar."

Though Cynthia was vexed by the interruption she did not show it. Indeed, she was aware of her companion's strange reiteration of the towns to be visited, since Mrs. Devar had already admitted a special weakness in geography, and during the trip from Brighton to Bournemouth was quite unable to name a town, a county, or a landmark. But the queer thought of a moment was dispelled by sight of the ruins of St. Dunstan's monastery appearing above a low wall. In front of the broken arches and tottering walls grew some apple trees so old and worn that no blossoms decked their gnarled branches. Unbidden tears glistened in the girl's eyes.

"If I lived here I would plant a new orchard," she said tremulously. "I think Guinevere would like it, and you say she is buried with her king in St. Joseph's Chapel."

Medenham had suddenly grown stern again. He glanced at her, and then made great business with brakes and levers, for Mrs. Devar was still inquisitive.

"That is a fine old Pilgrims' Inn, the George, in the main street," he said jerkily. "I propose to stop there; the entrance to the Abbey is exactly opposite. In the George they will show you a room in which Henry the Eighth slept, and I would recommend you to get a guide for half an hour at least."

"Must we walk?" demanded Mrs. Devar plaintively.

"Yes, if you wish to see anything. But one could throw a stone over the chief show places, they are so close togther."

So Cynthia was shown the Alfred Jewel, and Celtic dice-boxes carefully loaded for the despoiling of Roman legionarie or an unwary Phœnician and heard the story of the Holy Grail from the lip of an ancient who lent credence to the legend by his venerable appearance. Mixed up with the imposing ruins and the glory of St. Joseph's Chapel was a visit to the butcher's at the corner of the street, where the veteran proudly exhibited a duck with four feet. He then called Cynthia's attention to the carved gables of the George Hotel, and pointed out a fine window, bayed on each successive story. She had almost forgotten the wrteched duck when he mentioned a two-headed calf which was on view at a neighboring dairy.

Mrs. Devar showed signs of interest, so Cynthia tipped the old man hurriedly, and ran to the car.

"I shall come here—some other time," she gasped, and it thrilled her to believe that Fitzroy understood, though he had heard no word of quadruped fowl or bicipital monster.

At Wells Medenham pitied her. He bribed a policeman to guard the Mercury, and when Mrs. Devar saw that more walking was expected of her she elected to sit in the tonneau and admire the west front of the cathedral.

"Lady Porthcawl tells me it is a masterpiece," she chirped shrilly, "so I want to take it in at my leisure."

Once more, therefore, did Medenham allow himself a half hour of real abandonment. He warned Cynthia that she must not endeavor to appreciate the architecture; with the hauteur of conscious genius, Wells refuses to allow anyone to absorb its true grandeur until it has been seen many times and in all lights.

So he hied her to the exquisite Lady Chapel, and to the Chapter-House Stairs, and to Peter Lightfoot's quaint old clock in the transept. Then, by some alchemy worked on a lodge-keeper, he led her to the gardens of the Bishop's palace, and showed her the real Glastonbury Thorn, and even persuaded one of the swans in the moat to ring the bell attached to the wall whereby each morning for many a year the royal birds have obtained their breakfast.

There is no lovelier garden in England than that of Wells Palace, and Cynthia was so rapt in it that even Medenham had to pull out his watch and remind her of dusty roads leading to far-off Bristol.

Mrs. Devar looked so sour when they came from an inspection of one of the seven wells to which the town owes it name that Cynthia weakened and sat by her side. Thereupon Medenham made amends for lost time by exceeding the speed limit along every inch of the run to cheddar.

Of course he had to crawl through the narrow streets of the little town, above which the bare crests of the Mendips give such slight promise of the glorious gorge that cuts through their massiveness from south to north. Even at the very lip of the magnificent canyon the outlook is deceptive. Perhaps it is that the eye is caught by the flaring advertisements of the stalactite caves, or that baser emotions are awakened by the sight of cozy teagardens—of one in particular where a cascade tumbles headlong from the black rocks, and a tree-shaded lawn offers rest and coolness after hours passed in the hot sun.

Be that as it may, "tea" had a welcome sound, and Medenham, who had lunched on read and beer and pickles, was glad to halt at the entrance of the inn that boasted a waterfall in its grounds.

The road was narrow, and packed with chars-a-bancs awaiting their hordes of noisy trippers. Some of the men were tipsy, and Medenham feared for the Mercury's paint. To the left of the hotel lay a spacious yard that looked inviting. He backed in there when the ladies had alighted and ran alongside an automobile on which "Paris" and "speed" were written in characters legible to the motorist.

A chauffeur was lounging against the stable wall and smoking.

"Hello," said Medenham affably. "what sort of car is that?"

"A 59 Du Vallon," was the answer. Then the man's face lit up with curiosity.

"Yours is a New Mercury, isn't it?" he cried. "Was that car at Brighton on Wednesday night?"

"Yes," growled Medenham; he knew what to expect, and his face was grim beneath the tan.

"But you were not driving it," said the other.

"A chap named Dale was in charge then."

"Oh, is that it? You've brought two ladies here just now?"

"Yes."

"Good! My guv'nor's on the lookout for 'em. He didn't tell me so, but he made sure they hadn't passed this way when he turned up."

"And when was that?" asked Medenham, feeling unaccountably sick at heart.

"Soon after lunch. Ran here from Bristol. There's a bad bit of road over the Mendips, but the rest is fine. I s'pose we'll all be hiking back there to-night?"

"Most probably," agreed Medenham, who said least when he was most disturbed; at that moment he could cheerfully have wrung Count Edouard Marigny's neck.

CHAPTER. V.

A Flurry on the Mendips.

It is a contrariety of human nature that men devoted to venturesome forms of sport should often be tender hearted as children. Lord Medenham who had done some slaying in his time, once risked his life to save a favorite horse from a Ganges quicksand, and his right arm still bore the furrows plowed in it by claws that would have torn his spaniel to pieces in a Kashmir gully had he not thrust the empty barrels of a .450 Express rifle down the throat of an enraged bear. In each case, a moment's delay to secure his own safety meant the sacrifice of a friend, but safety won at such a price would have galled him worse than the spinning of a coin with death.

Wholly apart from considerations that he was strangely unwilling to acknowledge, even to his own heart he now resented Marigny's cold-blooded pursuit of an unsuspecting girl mainly because of its unfairness. Were Cynthia Vanrenen no more to him than the hundreds of pretty women he would meet during a brief London season he would still have wished to rescue her from the money-hunting gang which had marked her down as an easy prey. But he had been vouchsafed glimpses into her white soul That night at Brighton, and again to day in the cloistered depths of the cathedral at Wells, she had admitted him to the rare intimacy of those who commune deeply in silence.

It was not that he dared yet to think of a love confessed and reciprocated. The prince in disguise is all very well in a fairy tale; in England of the twentieth century he is an anachronism; and Medenham would as soon think of shearing a lamb as of profiting by the chance that threw Cynthia in his way. Of course, a less scrupulous wooer might have devised a hundred plausible methods of revealing his identity—was not Mrs. Devar marriage-broker and adroit sycophant ready to hand and purchasable?—and there was small room for doubt that a girl's natural vanity would be fluttered into a blaze of romance by learning that her chauffeur was heir to an old and well-endowed peerage. But honor forbade, nor might he dream of winning her affections while flying false colors. True, it would not be his fault if they did not come together again in the near future. He meant to forestall any breach of con dence on the part of Simmonds by writing a full explanation of events to Cynthia herself. If his harmless escapade were presented in its proper light, their next meeting should be fraught with laughter rather than reproaches; and then—well, then, he might urge a timid plea that his repute as a careful pilot during those three memorable days was no bad recommendation for permanency!

TWO CLANEY YARNS.

Strangers In Commons Always Took Him For a Lawyer.

Parliament enjoyed a fleeting visit the other day from one of its former giants of debate, Mr. James Clancy, now provincial auditor for the Government of Ontario. In the old days Mr. Clancy, who was a practical farmer residing near the town of Wallaceburg, in Kent County, Ontario, was the federal representative of the old constituency of Bothwell, succeeding Hon. David Mills. He was then, as now, a remarkable student of municipal law, and was so successful in its interpretation that not infrequently he was credited by other members who had not his personal acquaintance with being a legal man. Two good stories are told by the veterans in this respect. On one occasion it is told how Mr. Clancy was ruthlessly dissecting the provisions of a bill of unusual interest to the municipalities and attacking the then Liberal Government on the ground that it was not in accord with the agricultural interests of Ontario. Whereupon the Liberal member for Prescott rose and, thinking to annihilate the critic, began: "It is all very well for these lawyers to pretend that they represent the interests of the farmers," when he was interrupted by a roar of laughter, which no one enjoyed more than Mr. Clancy himself. A few sessions later another similar incident occurred, in which Mr. George W. Fowler, still a member of the Commons, was made a victim of the brilliant repartee of the member for Bothwell. The House was considering Hon. Sydney Fisher's first seed bill, and, although they sat upon the same side of the House, Farmer Clancy and Lawyer Fowler found themselves at issue on the measure.

Mr. Clancy, in his customary finished style, was analysing the provisions of the proposed legislation, and suggesting amendments which he deemed to be in the interests of the agriculturists.

Mr. Fowler rose in protest. "It is all very well," said he, with withering satire, "for my honorable friend and others of his legal calling, to pose as farmers."

Mr. Clancy could not resist a return thrust. "If," he observed in his quiet way, "I did not have better success than has my honorable friend in posing as a lawyer——"

The rest was drowned in laughter.

Transparent.

"I want your advice," said the soft spoken man.

"No, you don't," replied Mr. Growcher. "You want me to think you want my advice, so I'll think you are a fine, sensible man and feel like doing you favors. That's what you want."—Washington Star.

When the People Refuse to Pay

EVER since King John signed the Magna Charta the people have been discovering new rights and asserting them.

Long ago the people learned how to get what they wanted—by the simple expedient of "refusing to pay."

In the days when kings played "war" with one another the people could always put a sudden end to the fun by "refusing to pay."

To-day, when men play the great game of business, they have to depend on the people, even as did those kings of long ago. When the people stop payment, the game ends.

Of high importance is "the right to know" as applied to modern commerce. The people have found they want a "reason why" before they buy.

We awoke to this fact but a short while ago, when a few manufacturers began to tell us some of the things they thought we should know about their goods. They were the pioneer advertisers.

Soon the world discovered that it had an appetite for facts. And in the re-adjustment of things for the proper satisfaction of this appetite, we have developed a new science—its name is "Advertising."

Now that we have learned there is a way of telling us we demand to know. By the exercise of a power that has never failed—the refusal to pay unless satisfied—the people have set up a new order of things. The manufacturers and merchants are telling us everything we want to know—through Advertising.

When we buy soap, we must know "Whose soap?" "How is it made?" "What are its properties?" "What are its uses?" "Wherein does it excel?" The Advertising tells us.

It's the same with well-nigh everything we buy—food, clothes, furniture, pianos, automobiles. We will have the facts about these things—or we will refuse to pay.

We, the public, have created a new world force. We call it "Advertising."

Advice regarding your advertising problems is available through any recognized Canadian advertising agency, or through the Secretary of the Canadian Press Association, Room 503 Lumsden Bldg., Toronto. Enquiry involves no obligation on your part—so write, if interested.

WILL BE NO INVESTIGATION

Into the Death by Drowning of James Peters

It was reported from several sources to-day that there was the likelihood of an investigation into the circumstances connected with the drowning fatality in which James Peters, assistant fishery overseer lost his life at Baxter's creek on the Otonabee last week, but this is not confirmed by Dr. Greer. Persistent rumors, have gained strength and circulation, to the effect that the alleged accidental capsizing of the craft in which the two men, Thornbeck and Peters were out rowing, was not accidental.

People in the neighborhood of where the fatality occurred, consider it rather unusual for the two men to have been out at that time together, stating that they were not on friendly terms. It is said, his companion wanted the position, held by Mr. Peters. Whether such was the case will probably never be known, the knowledge of such, if it were known to Mr. Peters, being locked with him, as he went to his death. The lack of other eye witnesses of the affair save Mr. Thornbeck himself, adds to the weight of uncertainty and the scarcity of accurate and thoroughly reliable information. It will also be noted that the report of the survivor's plight, by Mr. O Stewart, who furnished the report to the Review, described him as minus coat hat and boots, and also mentions that the water, where the body of the victim was discovered floated in only three feet of water. Mr. Peters, the drowned man, is also said to have been a skilled swimmer, and it would have been easily possible for him to have navigated the distance, which separated him from the shore, under ordinary circumstances.

Dr. Greer, the coroner, who was notified by Mr. Stewart of the affair, and who saw the body at the late residence, was asked by The Review, to-day if the circumstances in his opinion, warranted an investigation. He replied that there would be no inquiry, on the grounds that there was insufficient matter to justify such a course.

The funeral of the victim of the sad and rather unusual affair, was held on Saturday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery.

AN ACCOUNT OF $60.88 DISPUTED; DIVISION COURT

Before Judge Huycke this afternoon, in Division Court, the Peterborough Light and Power Company sued F. L. Snelgrove, the George street tobacconist, for the sum of $60.88 for power supplied to the latter's illuminating sign in front of the tobacco store.

Mr. F. D. Kerr appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. G. N. Gordon for Mr. Snelgrove. Quite a number of witnesses were heard, mainly for the Power Company.

Mr. Kerr outlined the case, and Mr. Munro was the first witness. Mr. Munro, under Mr. Kerr's examination, explained that the defendant had contracted for the illuminated sign until 1916. On a couple of occasions the motor operating the sign had failed to work, and Mr. Snelgrove had complained to him.

Questioned by G. N. Gordon, defendant's counsel, Mr. Munro admitted that Snelgrove had complained at the time the sign was put in that it was not what he had wanted. On one particular occasion the motor operating the sign refused to work, but had been repaired the next morning.

Mr. Snelgrove had refused to pay, and the company had accordingly sued him for what was due up to date, namely, $60.88.

Mr. Gordon, however, discovered a flaw in the account, which failed to credit the defendant with $21.68.

The case was still being argued at the time of going to press.

NINE MONTHS IN CENTRAL FOR NEGLECTING TO BURY HIS CHILD

Port Hope Guide.

John Sisson, who at the request of Chief Bond, was arrested in Lindsay appeared before Magistrate White this morning. He was charged that without lawful excuse he did neglect to perform the duty undertaken by him to bury the dead human body of an infant child.

Sisson elected to be tried by the Magistrate and pleaded guilty.

It will be remembered that on Saturday last the remains of an infant were found in a house on Monkey Mountain by the present occupant, Mr. Lawrence. Mr. and Mrs. John Sisson had vacated this house a few weeks previous. Upon investigation it was learned that Mrs. Sisson gave birth to a child while residing in this house and as no burial permit had been issued to the Sissons, suspicion naturally rested upon them. At the inquest Mrs Sission admitted that the child belonged to her but she thought her husband had buried it in the garden.

This morning Sission told the magistrate that he intended to bury the remains in the garden but the ground was frozen too hard. He buried the child in the snow intending to remove it in the spring.

The Magistrate stated that it was the most disgraceful case he ever had to deal with. He left this body lying in a rear kitchen of the house after he had vacated the place not caring what trouble it brought upon other people or where the suspicion might rest. Had he given the child a burial in the garden the case would not have been so bad.

Here Sisson remarked that he had intended to bury the child in the spring but after leaving the house he forgot all about it.

Here the Magistrate stopped the prisoner up short with the remark that any man who could forget his own child lying in a back kitchen was beneath contempt and not human.

SSisson was sentenced to nine months in the Central Prison at hard labor. He wept like a child when sentence was passed.

The Deer Killing Brutes Get No Mercy From the Natives.

The Swedish Lapps are said to live entirely with, by and upon their reindeer. A Lapp who owns a thousand deer is a rich man, but as taxes are assessed upon the number of deer, he is inclined to underestimate his herd. The most dangerous enemy to the herd is the wolf, which can kill many deer in a night. A band of wolves can make a rich Lapp poor.

When the snow is deep and soft and it is announced that wolf tracks have been seen in the neighborhood of the deer, the swiftest runners on snowshoes prepare for an exciting chase.

The wolf may have a start of a mile or two, but the track it leaves in the deep, soft snow is so conspicuous that the hunters can follow it at their best speed. The wolf, though he may run swiftly, has but a slight chance of escaping his pursuers on their snowshoes.

Each hunter does his best to outrun the others, for the wolf belongs to the Lapp who strikes the first blow. As soon as the leading hunter is close enough to the wolf he gives it a heavy blow across the loins with his strong, spiked snowshoe staff. If there are other wolves to be pursued he kills it outright; if not he disables it and waits till all the hunters have arrived before giving the death stroke.

Single Tax In Kelowna.

Vancouver has abolished the tax on improvements and personal property and taxes nothing but the land. But it is in the little municipalities of Chilliwack, Summerland, Penticton, and Kelowna that this system has worked with most satisfaction. Indeed, so great is its success that a Royal Tax Commission will report in favor of its universal adoption in the Pacific Province.

Kelowna has assessable land to the extent of about twelve square miles. Every street, roadway, town house and farm house has electric light. Even the farmers have sidewalks running past their wonderfully productive fruit farms. And the schools are central and graded. No little one-roomed, cheerless, badly-taught school for these progressive people. They have consolidated schools, with carriages to carry the children in the summer and sleighs to transport them in winter.

Single tax hasn't done it all, of course. Single tax is but one feature of their progressive system of local government. Indeed, they might have had all these glorious local services if they had never heard of Henry George's pet theory. Nevertheless it is interesting to notice that in the west progressiveness and the land tax go hand in hand in many municipalities.—Canadian Courier.

A Voracious Fish.

An angler, fishing at Aldeburgh the other day, landed a cod which had stowed away sufficient to stock a small fish shop. Among other things found in its stomach were six sprats, a teacupful of clams, a sea-anemone, several small crabs, and a score of shrimps.

When Does a Man Need Life Insurance?

When he comes to die! Nine men out of ten, no matter how prosperous thay may have been during some period in the past, will leave no other estate, or at least not enough of other assets to save their families from pinching poverty.

He needs life insurance before he dies, as, for example, when he finds himself no longer insurable. He knows he needs it when he cannot get it. He always intended to take insurance, or to add to the amount he already carries, but he deferred too long. Procrastination is the robber of widows and orphans.

He needs life insurance now—all he can possibly carry. He needs it now because to-morrow, or next month, or next month, or next year, by reason of accident or disease, he may be unable to get it.

He needs it because he is poor; or because, if fairly well to-do, he would yet not leave such a provision for his family as he would like to leave, if he were suddenly taken away.

He needs it because, though he may be rich, he knows that riches often "take themselves wings." He needs it because, being rich he is able to pay for it, while a little later he may be unable to pay, or unable to get it even if he can pay.

He needs it because he can buy it cheaper to-day than ever he can in the future. He must have it sometime, and every year adds to the price that he will have to pay.

You will find the most up-to-date policy of to-day issued by THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

BALL PRACTICE HELPED RECEIPTS OF HORSE SHOW

The stallion show at the Exhibition Grounds on Saturday afternoon was not the success that was anticipated. However, the Fair Directors and those in charge need not censure themselves for the slim attendance. The farmers, owing to the lateness of the season, are extremely busy seeding and could not spare the necessary time to exhibit or be present and make the affair a success.

However, there were nine entries, the prizes being awarded as follows:

Imported Clydes—1, W. H. Staples, Cavan; 2, Wm. Kearns, Frankhill; 3, Jas. Collins, Peterborough.

Three year old Clydes—1, W. J. Grant, Peterborough.

Standard Bred—1, Henry Elmhurst, Villiers; 2, A. E. Juby, Peterborough.

Hackneys—1, J. T. Staples, Ida.

The receipts at the show were augmented by those who wanted to see the baseball team have a work-out at the grounds, the show and the games being both witnessed for fifteen cents.

LAWN BOWLERS ARE WAITING FOR THE OPENING

There is joy among the members of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club at the continuance of the fine weather and each is counting the days which remain between them and the opening of Brookside. It is felt that this season greater interest than ever will be shown in this popular pastime. Their brother bowlers of Culverwellville organized recently amidst great enthusiasm, and the following officers were elected:

Hon. President—Dr. L. B. Powers.
President—Dr. Aldrich.
Vice-President—F. L. Curtis.
Sec.-Treas.—L. Boney.
Managing Committee—H. Walker, J. McMullen, and the officers.
Membership Committee—H. B. Rosevear, H. Jordan, A. Fulford and R. B. Thompson.

DIAMOND DUST

Bill Schaeffers' basketball team, had a good workout this morning, at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium. Bill is confident that his team will win. He places great confidence in Hartman who has a record standing now in the Eastern B.B.L. of having landed twenty, out of twenty-one foul shots.

Abbie Johnstone, with his Strathroy stars, caused London fans to weep on Saturday, when Manager Bowerman's braves, while dividing sixteen hits, were two runs behind at the finish, four errors being their lot. Dubbie Shea caught for the Stars. What the Flint team did to Berlin caused Rube Dereau to do other things but smile. It was 11—1 against the champions.

A TRIP TO BERMUDA

Mr. Gates' Son

Mr. James Gates, denies a report which appeared in another local evening paper, that his son intended coming to Canada on the ill-fated steamer "Titanic" his son did intend to sail per steamer "Megantic" but the steamship company overlooked his passage tickets, and the next boat upon which he will sail for Canada is the steamer "Canada" leaving Liverpool May 18th.

Sunday School Teachers

A meeting of the Junior and Primary Sunday school teachers of the city, will be held in St Paul's Sunday school hall, Tuesday evening at eight o'clock, to talk over the preparations of the graded lesson and discuss the best methods of teaching. Mrs. Wray, secretary.

SMALL FIRE AT HOME OF FIREMEN

The fire brigade had a run to-day to the residence of Mr. Frank Degen one of the city firemen, 691 Stewart street. The cause was spontaneous combustion in a pile of rags. It did not take the firemen long to handle the flames, and little damage was done.

Relief For German Actors.

As in other countries, the lot of the members of the lower grades of the theatrical profession in Germany is often very hard, and an imperial commission has been appointed to investigate into their position, find out what reforms are advisable and enforce them in the form of a bill which will be submitted to the reichstag to become law all over Germany. The commission will begin its work in a few weeks, and it will investigate the wages, hours, contracts and fines of the lower rate actor and music hall artist, ascertain under what terms agents find them engagements and frame a bill which will improve all these conditions.—London Globe.

American Students of Singing.

Signor Randegger, the famous singing master, whose death has just been announced, had a great partiality for American pupils. "Not," he once said, "that I think that their voices are better in themselves, but Americans have so much more 'go.' As pupils they are so much more enthusiastic. They understand and act upon everything one tells them with greater eagerness and intelligence. There are plenty of good voices among the English people, but as pupils I find them, with a few exceptions, more or less cold and self conscious."—Westminster Gazette.

Saving One's Bacon.

The old Dutch for "bacon" is "bas," and the Anglo-Saxon for "back" is also "baec." To save one's bacon seems, therefore, equivalent to saving one's back—from a beating. Moreover, it is the back of the pig that was and still is chiefly made into bacon—the legs are hams.

Juries.

The legal existence of juries was perhaps first recorded in Plantagenet times. At one time a jury that could not agree was placed in durance vile, and during Queen Elizabeth's reign a banquet was usually given to the jury by the successful litigant.

Arrows and Modern Guns.

In the old days armies were safe at a distance of 400 yards, as arrows were not effective at that distance. Modern guns shoot projectiles that travel fifteen miles.

One Thing They Won't Stand For.

Speaking to a Chinese gentleman the other day an Englishman asked him if the Chinese ladies will emulate the men and go in for western headgear. In reply he beamed a smile most child-like and bland.

Pressed for something more definite, he remarked: "Did you not know that it is a well-known fact among the Chinese that the reason so many European husbands look harassed and care-ridden and the further reason why so many of your young men refrain from marriage is this very question of millinery? Ladies' hats cost so much that they spell ruin and so we Chinese have told our women folk that we absolutely forbid them to follow western fashions in this regard, whatever they may do in other directions."

COMING FROM THEIR TOMB.

The Official Standards of Weights and Measures In England.

In April of this year a ceremony is due to be performed in London which occurs only at intervals of twenty years. This is the comparison of the standards of weights and measures.

The official standards in use at the office of weights and measures are compared with the original standard yard measure and pound weight, which repose in the wall of one of the inner staircases of the house of commons.

The hole in the wall where the two standards are kept is rather like a small tomb, and it can only be opened by actually tearing down the wall.

The yard measure is a bronze bar thirty-eight inches long, on which thirty-six divisions of one inch—i. e., a yard—have been marked off. The standard pound is of platinum, and, despite its weight and the fact that the metal of which it consists is worth $200, in size it is no more than a cubic inch.

No variations were detected when the standards were last compared in April, 1892, and the precious standards were then walled up once more in their dark little tomb, where for twenty years they have been undisturbed.—Pearson's Weekly.

Baltimore and Conventions.

Down to the period of the war between the states Baltimore was a favorite place for national conventions. Candidates for president nominated there by all parties, beginning with 1832, include Andrew Jackson, Henry Clay, Martin Van Buren, James K. Polk, John Tyler, Zachary Taylor, Lewis Cass, Franklin Pierce, General Scott, Stephen A. Douglas, John C. Breckinridge, John Bell and Abraham Lincoln (in 1864).

New York's Wealth.

According to the tabulation figures in the tax books for 1912 real estate in New York is assessed at $7,525,474,063. Estimating the realty which is exempt from taxation at $2,500,000,000, the value of all real estate in the five boroughs approximates $10,000,000,000. The assessed valuation of taxable property in New York has been raised in the last fourteen years, or since consolidation, from $2,463,135,687.—New York American.

Moving Picture Lion Hunting.

The inhabitants of Fontainebleau are protesting against some of the uses to which the picturesque forest, with its huge volcanic bowlders, is being put by some of the cinematographic companies. There was a lion hunt with a real lion in the forest of Fontainebleau a few days ago, and the people who live in the neighborhood think that freedom in trade matters is being pushed somewhat too far.—Paris Letter.

Attacking the Gulf Stream.

The idol shatterers have now assailed the gulf stream and say that the talk about it carrying warm winds to temper the stolid cold of the British islands is all bosh. In the name of science they say that the stream has no influence whatever on the climate of Great Britain.

Our New Wheat.

It is not generally known says a Dominion report, that the thousand dollar prize awarded in New York City recently for the best wheat grown on the North American Continent, which was secured by a Saskatchewan farmer, was won by Marquis wheat. Marquis wheat is one of a number of varieties which has been produced at the Government experimental farm at Ottawa by a crossing of Red Fife with various imported wheats of early ripening habit. The early maturing parent of Marquis was Hard Red Calcutta, obtained from India. It was isolated by Dr. Saunders, the Dominion cerealist, by selection, in 1903. After being grown for three years at Ottawa, baking tests were made from the crop of 1906, which showed that Marquis stands in the first rank for baking strength. This wheat was then transferred to the experimental farm at Indian Head for test under prairie conditions, where from larger tests in the field Marquis gave 42 bushels per acre, while in 1909 and 1910 five-acre lots at Indian Head yielded more than 53 bushels an acre.

TENDERS FOR DREDGING

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dredging Ontario," will be received until 4 P.M., on Monday, May 13, 1912, for dredging required at the following places in the Province of Ontario:—

Goderich, Napanee, Picton, Telegraph and Nigger Islands.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on the forms supplied, and signed with the actual signatures of tenderers.

Combined specification and form of tender can be obtained on application to the Secretary, Department of Public Works, Ottawa. Tenders must include the towing of the plant to and from the work. Dredges and tugs not owned and registered in Canada shall not be employed in the performance of the work contracted for. Contractors must be ready to begin work within thirty days after the date they have been notified of the acceptance of their tender.

A separate cheque for each place for which a tender is submitted must accompany the tender. This cheque must be equal to five per cent. (5 per cent.) of the amount of the tender, based on the approximate quantities set opposite the name of a place, but in no case must the cheque be for a less sum than $1,500. The cheque must be accepted, on a chartered bank, and payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.
Department of Public Works.
Ottawa, April 27, 1912.

Newspapers will not be paid for this advertisement if they insert it without authority from the Department.—21842.

BIG OPENING DAY FOR WHITE CAPS AND KOLTS AT HAMILTON

Hamilton, May 6.—There will be a large delegation of Toronto people in Hamilton for the opening game on May 14th, with Peterborough, headed by President James P. Fitzgerald, of the Canadian League, and President James J McCaffery, of the Toronto ball club. James J. has undertaken to round up a large party of Toronto fans, even though the Toronto team is playing at home that day, and a big afternoon is promised. President Dynham, of the Peterborough club, will be among the invited guests, the official invitations having been prepared, ready to send out early next week. The opening ceremonies here will be on a grand scale, with the usual parade, etc., and every effort will be made to give the league a brilliant start, that is, as far as Hamilton is concerned at any rate.

LAJOIE OUT OF GAME AGAIN

Went up After High Ball and Strained Himself

Cleveland May 6.—Napoleon Lajoie, star second baseman of the American League, received injuries while in Chicago with the Naps which may keep him out of the game all season, and if they are as serious as reports say, may put an end to his baseball career.

During batting practice at the White Sox park yesterday morning Lajoie sustained a repetition of his injury of last year which kept him out of the game nearly all season. He reached for a high liner and strained his groin. Players carried him off the field, an ambulance was called, and he was taken to a hospital, so serious was his injury.

Dr. Castle, the club physician here, says that if the injury proves as severe as it did last year Lajoie's playing days may be ended, as the exertion of playing ball would bring on another attack.

The Meaford Old Boys intend holding a Re-union this coming summer and have chosen August 5th, 6th and 7th as the days.

The Bradford Fish Co. has secured a license from the Ontario Government to net carp, suckers and catfish in Lake Couchiching.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

All aboard for Riverside is the slogan of Manager Templin to-day, and he, at the head of the White Cap brigade, took a trip across the pond, to get busy on the diamond—not to play—but rather to work.

Postponed on account of too much Jupiter Pluvius, was the unwelcome news to the ball players this morning when practice was discussed. After the workout of Saturday and the Sunday rest—when some of the boys introduced themselves to the city churches—everyone was ready for more work, but it was not to be.

Over at the grounds this afternoon, the ball tossers stooped over a shovel and other agricultural implements, not because they were used to them, but because they were willing to do anything to hasten the time when practices could commence at the local yard.

Dicipline is one of the big words of Templin's vocabulary and when Benzie, the Hamilton aspirant, received his discharge ticket this morning, he knew why. Money talks and so do baseball players, but it is for the managerial end of the club, who gives orders and endeavors to promote the interests of the team, to do the conversation number.

Manager Templin hopes to pick two teams for a real live practice on Saturday, either at the Oval or on the exhibition grounds. The 14th of May, when the Petes open at Hamilton is all too close.

A meeting of the directors is to be held to-night, when the contract for the addition to the grandstand will in all probability be let. This additional structure will be erected to the rear of the counting station. May the fans witness the homecoming of many White Caps.

"It will keep us hustling to pick a team if we hope to capture this basketball game," said Mr. J. J. Thompson this morning. He has seen Bill Schaeffer's team in action and knows just what the local quintet will be up against. The game is billed for Wednesday night in the Y. M.C.A. gymnasium.

Joe Ulmer and Percy Davis were endeavoring to separate from their avoirdupois some fair grounds real estate, at the Y.M.C.A. the other day, when suddenly Joseph was stricken with the corundum bug. "Guess this one," quoth he: "If Lydia Pinkham found her way down here by mistake, would the bath plunge?"

Rube Waddell pulled off one of his stunts in Toledo the other day. He sold newspapers telling about the wreck of the Titanic and was having a great time until Joe Cantillon got him and put him to bed.

WEST'S COAL WEALTH.

Alberta Has Vast Areas That Will Be Valuable Some Day.

Canadians barely realize the extent of the great natural resources with which our country is blessed. We all realize that the Dominion has a considerable number of coal areas all being worked to the apparent great profit to their owners. Those of us, however, possessing homes and consequently furnaces regard coal somewhat after the manner of black diamonds, owing to the high prices which we are accustomed to pay for it. This is by no means the case in many parts of Alberta, where it is possible to get coal for the mere picking and carting of it. The value of this is brought still more forcibly before us on account of the dire trouble the coal strike is causing in Great Britain.

In many parts of our country coal is always dear, owing to the long distances it has to be brought by rail, but at the two ends of the Dominion it exists in enormous deposits. The mines of the Cape Breton shore, in fact, stretch their tunnels out under the Atlantic, and pay such high wages that the young Gaelic-speaking Highlanders of that region desert their paternal farms to make big money underground.

At the other end of Canada, on the Pacific coast, the Indians seventy-five years ago were vastly amused to find a blacksmith of the Hudson Bay Co., on Vancouver Island, burning a "black stone" which had been brought a six months' journey from England round Cape Horn. They delighted the blacksmith by telling him that there was any amount of the same "stone" on that very island. For many years now Vancouver Island has supplied not only British Columbia, but California and other regions further south.

A few hundred miles inland in the Rocky Mountains, dividing British Columbia from Alberta, there is another huge deposit which supplies a high quality of coal to the Canadian Pacific Railway and to thousands of private consumers all over the Prairie Provinces.

Western Canada has just had a big coal strike. The mountain miners "went out," and could not be persuaded to go in again. They were quite independent; farm labor is always scarce and highly paid in the Prairie Provinces, and the miners turned farm laborers as easily as the farmers of Cape Breton had turned miners.

Unfortunately, the prairie folk, though glad of this extra help, found that it involved a serious loss as well as gain. The price of coal doubled. The steam engines which do a large part of the plowing had to pay $10 a ton instead of $5; and so much of the railway rolling stock had to be used in bringing up coal from the United States that there were not cars enough to carry the farmers' wheat to market.

There is one very large western region, however, where coal is so easily got that a strike at the regular mines cannot cut off the supply. Over a vast area of Alberta the fertile soil is simply a skin covering a body of coal.

Paul Kane, the artist who crossed the prairie by canoe sixty years ago, and wrote a book in which he tells of "beds of hard coal" which he saw protruding along the bank of Saskatchewan River, near Edmonton about 20 feet below the upper surface. It could not be used, he says, except in the blacksmith's forge, owing to "the want of proper grates or furnaces in those distant regions, where iron is at present so scarce."

When the settlers began to arrive in quite recent years, they were astonished to find this fuel lying ready to hand. A sturdy old Englishman with an Alberta farm, about forty miles east of Edmonton, on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, said: "When we dug our well we threw out two wagon loads of coal. We didn't want it, because our stoves were made to burn logs, and there was plenty of wood all round us." Sometimes the coal comes right up to the surface. "One time," the old man said, "we made a little camp fire at night, and were surprised to find it still burning in the morning. We had lighted it on a bed of coal."

Much of this Alberta coal is only lignite, and the poorer sorts soon lose their combustible quality when exposed to the air; but the better sorts of lignite keep quite long enough to make them commercially valuable, and great "fields" are being opened in various directions, especially west of the railway which lies north and south between Edmonton and Calgary. Of course, the coal of the mountain mines is far superior to this lignite of the plains.

A Curious Mishap.

Not long since two Edmonton Boy Scouts had quite an adventure on a homestead about a hundred miles from Edmonton, one of the boys being Lawrence Vance and the other Cecil Wall.

Vance and Wall had left their tent on a trip to the nearest centre to obtain further supplies, and on their return found that the tent had been broken into, and by no less a marauder than a big black bear, which was later seen by some other homesteaders prowling about the neighborhood.

The canvas was torn in several places by the huge claws of this animal, but that was not such a loss to these boys as the entire disappearance of a large sack of home-made doughnuts.

The funny part of the selection of eatables on the part of Bruin was that his lordship sniffed at the bakers' bread, six loaves of which were reposing peacefully in the immediate vicinity of the doughnuts, and after taking a bite carefully out of each loaf, with equal precision spat it out again upon the floor of the tent.

Bakers' bread was not "in it" for a minute with mother's doughnuts, said Mr. Bear.

The four-footed visitor helped himself also to bacon and sugar, and while he made away with all the sugar he could find, did not seem to think very highly of the bacon.

The funniest thing of all, thought the boys on their return, was the discovery that Bruin had evidently stood before the looking-glass for some time trying to make friends with the "other bear"—as he thought—who peered at him from the frame, and the way they came to this conclusion was from the numerous signs of "licks" on the glass.

Another instance of close observation on the part of Boy Scouts, or any other boys, being a very valuable thing.

The Nervous Patient.

"You should take an ice cold plunge every morning," said the physician.

"But, doctor, I have insomnia."

"The ice cold plunge will help to cure it."

"No, it won't. I'll lie awake all night dreading it."—Washington Star.

Gave a Respite.

The Doctor—How is the patient this morning? The Patient's Wife—I think he's better, but he seems to be worrying about something. The Physician—Hum! Yes. Just tell him I won't send it for a month. That ought to freshen him up some.—Chicago News.

Victoria, B.C,

McLAUGHLIN MOTOR CAR CO, Oshawa, Ont.

Dear Sirs,—The McLaughlin-Buick, 40 h.p., chief's automobile, which was built for the department and delivered last May, has now been in our possession long enough for us to realize its good points. It has given perfect satisfaction in every respect. I have responded to 187 alarms with it to the present time, and over very rough roads. Its hill climbing capabilities are excellent, the cost of maintenance in comparison with the horse drawn vehicle used for the same purpose is trivial.

I shall be pleased to recommend this type of a machine to any Chief of Fire Dept. requiring same; you are at liberty to refer them to me.

Yours respectfully,

(Signed) THOMAS DAVIS, Chief of Fire Dept.

$1,000 FOR A COAT OF PAINT

It seems hard to believe, yet that is the sum of money that a coat of Martin-Senour Paint 100% Pure added to the selling price of a certain house.

For several seasons, a shabby weather-beaten house had been offered for sale. There where no buyers until a shrewd real estate broker purchased the property and, with a single coat of paint, magically changed it from a shabby house to that of a home of dignity—a home of comfort and elegance; furthermore, he sold it within a very short time clearing $1000

The coat of Paint made the sale. Don't let your property depreciate in value for the need of paint.

Cookery Notes

Lenten Dishes.

Fish Croquettes.—The remains of any fish, one large onion, a sprig of thyme, three sprigs of parsley, a clove of garlic if you like it. Mince all fine and mix. Season to taste, adding a tablespoonful of butter. Add breadcrumbs in proportion to one-third the quantity. When thoroughly mixed make into balls and flatten like cakes; then dip into beaten egg and cover with breadcrumbs. Fry a delicate brown and serve with cream horseradish or tomato sauce.

Potato Salad of Cold Potatoes.—Cold boiled potatoes can be utilized in a salad, although they do not make as appetizing a salad as one made of the fresh boiled potato marinated with oil and vinegar while hot. For the cold potato salad take three cold boiled potatoes, one large white onion, two hard boiled eggs, nine tablespoonfuls olive oil, three tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one teaspoonful of salt and four sprigs of nice fresh parsley. A dash of mustard may be added if desired.

Cheese Fondu.—Put two tablespoonfuls of butter into a saucepan and melt without allowing it to brown at all. Then stir in two tablespoonfuls of sifted flour and as soon as smooth pour in half a cupful of fresh milk or cream and let boil about two minutes. Remove from the fire and stir in the yolks of three eggs well beaten; salt and pepper to taste; a grating of nutmeg and a cup of grated Parmesan or Gruyere cheese. Mix all together well and have ready a small pudding dish or individual souffle dishes well buttered. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth and beat into the mixture and then fill the buttered dishes about two-thirds full. Bake in a moderate oven about twenty-five minutes. Serve immediately, or the mixture, which has risen to the top of the dishes, will shrink or fall.

Stuffed Dried Herring.—Smoked dried herring are popular with a family where they appear stuffed with savory dressing and baked. The bones of the fish are taken out and the place from which they came is filled with a mixture of fine buttered breadcrumbs, finely minced chives and a little parsley. Then the fish are brushed with butter. A very little water is put in the pan and they are baked about fifteen minutes. Serve them with lemon slices.

Orange Salad.—There cannot be a more delicious dinner salad, and certainly hardly a simpler one, than lettuce leaves that are torn, not cut; bits of orange pulp without a trace of white fiber or seeds and a dressing of oil and vinegar, with a scanty sprinkling of sugar.

Baked Halibut.—Any dry white meat fish, such as halibut, is delicious baked in a thick slice that has been dipped in flour, covered with a layer of tomato pulp or with slices of tomato, sprinkled with a little minced green pepper, seasoned with salt and pepper and baked about twenty minutes.

French Fried Stuffed Eggs.—Take four hard boiled eggs, remove the shells, cut a small bit of the end of each and carefully take out the yolk. Mash this yolk with a silver fork until it is perfectly smooth and add to it some salt, pepper, a small piece of butter and some chopped parsley. Replace all in the whites and cover up end. Beat up the white of one raw egg and in this dip the cooked eggs, and afterward roll them in breadcrumbs. Place all in a wire basket and let them cook for two minutes in boiling lard. Serve with tomato or cream sauce.

Clams a la Newburg.—For clams a la Newburg, as a girl makes it in her chafing dish, cut the soft part from each clam and chop the tough part very fine. Melt a tablespoonful of butter in the blazer with a little salt and paprika and add the chopped clams. Simmer them for about ten minutes. Then add two tablespoonfuls of sherry and the soft clams. At the last stir in quickly the yolks of two eggs beaten into half a cupful of cream and let come near a boil, but not quite to the point. Serve at once.

One Egg Cake.

Cream a half cupful of butter, work in one cupful of sugar, then one egg yolk. When smooth stir in one cupful of milk and gradually two cupfuls of sifted flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Flavor with vanilla, bake and ice with the following: Beat one cupful of confectioner's sugar slowly into the white of one egg and flavor with a half teaspoonful of vanilla. Stir over the fire a half cupful of grated chocolate, two tablespoonfuls of confectioner's sugar and one tablespoonful of hot water until smooth, then add one more tablespoonful of hot water and stir into the sugar and beaten egg. Nuts may be added, whole or chopped.

Doughnuts.

Beat three eggs till light, add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar. Beat again. Sift one level teaspoonful of soda into a cupful of sour cream, add to the sugar and eggs, then add one small teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and half a grated nutmeg. Mix with sufficient flour to make a soft dough. Roll about half an inch thick, cut out and fry in hot lard. It is a good plan to have the dough cut out all ready to fry before heating the lard.

Orillia, with eight teachers, had a salary total of $9,500, and an average attendance of 399, during 1911.

PASSING OF JULES MOTOR CO. PETERBORO DIDN'T LOSE MUCH BAILIFF MADE SEIZURE

The following from the Guelph Herald will be interesting to citizens of Peterborough, the Jules Motor Co. having had some experience here last summer. The promoters wanted a big stock subscription but the canvass proved unsuccessful. Guelph took kindly to the proposition but apparently the expected plum did not mature as altogether desired:

W. P. Gillespie & Co., McKinnon Building, Toronto, Successors to The Jules Motor Co., Limited.

This is the notice which was placed upon the door of the automobile factory on Suffolk street yesterday afternoon, immediately after Bailiff William Young had concluded his sale of goods and chattels, seized under [illegible] Court executions against the Jules Motor Company, Limited. Just what the full meaning of the notice is, has not yet been announced, but it is understood the Jules Motor Company, Limited, no longer exists, it having been purchased in toto by W. P. Gillespie & Co., who, it is said, will now proceed with the sale of stock, and very shortly start operations in the building on Suffolk St., which was purchased from the city by the Jules Motor Company, Limited. It is said that the prospects are bright for the successful issue of sufficient stock to finance the business.

The bailiff's sale, which took place yesterday, will not interfere with the business in any way, as nothing else was sold but one automobile and one delivery car, more than the sum required being realized from them.

ANNIVERSARY

St. Andrew's Congregation Heard Rev. Dr. Ross of London While Rev. Dr. Barclay of Montreal Occupied the Pulpit at St. Pauls.

The seventy-ninth anniversary of the founding and birth of Presbyterianism in Peterborough, was fittingly remembered yesterday at St. Paul's and St. Andrew's Presbyterian churches, large congregations and special preachers being present at both places.

St. Andrew's congregation had the pleasure of hearing the Rev. James Ross, D.D. of London, Ont., deliver two splendid addresses, full of helpfulness and inspiration. His evening message was based upon the words found in Galatians 2; 20th verse, "I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me."

From the above text the reverend speaker, drew some powerful illustrations of the majesty magnitude, and depth of divine love. The greatest idea of very age, was the idea concerning the love of Jesus Christ. There were many aspects by which this wonderful and unceasing love might be viewed.

"The love of God" said the speaker "works in a mysterious way."

He related an instance of earthly love, that furnished an illustration of how the love of God, could be made to work in the life of man also. A young man of his acquaintance, of a previous good for nothing character had been transformed through a marriage with a noble Christian young lady, who had passed over several much more superior and wealthy suitors, for his sake. The union was the means of changing the young man's entire life. He worshipped the woman's beautiful life, and sought, under her guidance and help, to emulate the spirit of her Master.

Eventually, he became one of the great men of the church, brought about through the great love he bore for his wife.

The same love is extended by the Master to every individual. If it is accepted, its wonderful and far reaching effects would revolutionize the world.

The anthems and other musical numbers, supplied by the choir, during the service were particularly bright and well rendered.

DR. BARCLAY AT ST. PAUL'S

The 77th anniversary of St. Paul's Presbyterian church was celebrated yesterday, the Rev. Dr. Barclay, D.D., L.L.D., of Montreal, occupying the pulpit at both the morning and evening services. The congregations at both services were large.

In the morning the Rev. Mr. Barclay preached on the value of being taken aside from the world, and the good resulting from such periods of retrospect. The sermon dealt lucidly with the trivialness of the temptations, which we are sometimes weak enough to yield to, and with the refining and strengthening influence of suffering. It was not given to every man to discover the highest joy or deepest suffering. There were times when faith failed to penetrate the gloomy veil of bitter despair, and when times of trial and days of darkness fell, we would find ourselves looking above for help and not trusting to the power of the world.

Mr Barclay went on to describe how essential it was for the spiritual life that we be taken aside from the multitude, to look in upon ourselves and ask the question— what we were, where we were, whence we had come and where we were going.

We must realize how high and holy were the trusts that had been committed to us, and how trifling were the temptations which we have allowed to disturb us. Like the prodigal, we would come to ourselves, our eyes would be opened and we would learn that the unseen things were the eternal ones.

The church, said the speaker, was rooted in human nature and human needs. Were it not for that sacred place and sacred day to cause an interruption of the daily routine, life would become one monotonous round.

We must get away from the multitude and not relinquish ourselves wholly to the claims of business, nor the charms of pleasure, if we are to hear God's guiding voice.

LINDSAY PEOPLE CAUGHT BY WORTHLESS CHEQUES

Chas. McKinnon is Being Sought by the Police — He Had a Winning Way.

WANTED.

Chas. McKinnon, height 5 ft., 11 inches, weight 180 lbs., clean shaven, complexion medium, prominent nose, slightly stooped when walking; Virginian cigarette smoker and beer drinker; wore grey check tweed suit, when worn when he left Lindsay; also wore soft shirt and hat; has been employed in railway survey work.

The above is a description of a "slick" young man, who is now being sought by the police of Lindsay. McKinnon being wanted in Lindsay on the charge of passing worthless cheques on a number of citizens.

During the past winter there have been a number of good fellows in town belonging to the Toronto Construction Company, and to the engineering staff of the C.P.R. They gave the word they were gentlemen, and they gained many warm friends. However, as in a number of other large families there had to be one black sheep, and in the above case he proved to be one Charles McKinnon.

McKinnon, with his courteous manners, pleasing disposition, and his fluency of tongue, dropped into Lindsay about two or three weeks ago, he having been sent here by the C.P.R. as one of their engineers, with a gang of men underneath him. He finished up a 30 mile stretch of work on the new Georgian Bay and Seaboard line, his chief engineer being Engineer Wellwood, of Coldwater. While in town a number of men applied to him (McKinnon) for work. He was a recognized trusted employe of the C.P.R., and was well liked by his fellow employes, but on Saturday last for some reason or other, he received his dismissal papers from the Company and was out of a job, and it was while out of a position with money going out and nothing coming in that he concocted a shady scheme to raise money by means of worthless cheques.

McKinnon framed up plausible stories to his friends and borrowed money, giving cheques in return. The cheques were drawn on the College and Yonge street branch of the Imperial Bank of Toronto, Toronto, and in all it is stated that he secured $236.75, made up of the following amounts:

A. G. Simpson, check and draft for $35.30, and cash 4; J. J. Walsh, pair of shoes and cheque for $25.15; M. J. Carter, two shirts, and cheque for $20.15; Allan Gillies, cheque for $10.15; George McGee, a cheque and draft for $45.40; O. Kellett, cheque, $11.45; C.P.R. relieving agent Walsh, cheque for $25.15; H. S. Strathy, Toronto, a cheque, $60.

Since leaving town, Mr. A. G. Simpson has received the following letter from McKinnon:

Dear Cap,—I found out yesterday that it would be necessary for me to raise some money some way, so I cashed about $100 worth of cheques that will be returned. Am on my way to Louisville, where I have a position waiting for me on the L. & N. Railway, and will return every cent I owe in Lindsay within a month. If anyone asks you about me show them this.

Yours, etc.,
CHAS. McKINNON.

REPORT OF MISS WEIR ON THE EDUCATIONAL WORK

The educational work of the Y.W.C.A. for the year 1911-12 was opened on the 29th of September, 1912, at the annual Educational Rally by an address by Miss Knox, of Havergal College, Toronto. Mrs. Rollins presented the work which the committee had planned for the various classes for the year.

Early in October these classes were begun, and for the most part they continued until Easter. The Literary Class was conducted until Christmas by Mrs. Rollins. A most able study was made of the development of the novel and keen interest was taken in the subject by a class, whose average attendance was about 15. After Christmas a new feature was introduced into the literary work, the Tuesday evening class being addressed by a different person each evening. The Educational Committee is deeply indebted to the following ladies and gentlemen who so kindly delivered Tuesday evening addresses: Mrs. Kendry, Mrs. Rollins, Miss MacRae, Judge Huycke, Mr. S. J. Stubbs, Rev. Mr. Couch, Rev. Dr. Marsh, Rev. Mr. Rollins and Rev. Mr. Sawers.

On the 2nd of February Professor Morrison, of Queen's University, delivered an illustrated lecture on "The Highlands of Scotland."

The "Home Hygiene" class was conducted by Dr. Malcolm McCullough from October until Christmas. There were 7 lectures, an enrollment of 20, and an average attendance of 14. An examination was held in the second week in December, and 7 received the St. John's Ambulance Association diplomas.

Miss Steinhof conducted a cooking class from October until the 29th of January. The average attendance was 12.

A shirt-waist class was conducted by Miss Ivy from October until December. There were 10 in this class.

Miss Nicholls' class in public school subjects, which closed in March, had an average attendance of 5 until Christmas, when several of the members removed from town.

For several weeks in February a class in dressmaking and practical tailoring was taught by Miss Rosenberg. There were 10 in this class.

ANNIE WEIR,
Convener Educational Committee.

A TITANIC THAT WILL NOT SINK

"Come thou, and all thy house into the ark." Genesis 7; 1.

Using the above text, Rev. W. C. Riddiford preached a strong sermon at Park street Baptist church last night. His subject was "God's unsinkable Titanic; are you on board?" The preacher referred to the Titanic of olden times, the ark, which had God for its designer and Noah as its captain. The Ark was absolutely unsinkable. It was typical of God's ark of redeeming grace which for repentent man had been a refuge of safety since man by disobedience was driven from Eden. To-day the invitation given to Noah awaited each one of us.

God's unsinkable Titanic was big enough and powerful enough to carry all the world over life's treacherous seas, and land them in safety in the fair haven of glory. She pushed the ice-bergs of sin aside like so much floating straws, and no power of hell could stop the onward sweep of this invincible and unsinkable Titanic of God's grace.

Christ was the pilot, The Holy Ghost was the guide, God Almighty walked the bridge and His omnipresent eye was ever on the watch.

The preacher made a strong appeal for all to accept the invitation and accept Christ, and in closing recited "Crossing the Bar."

NEWCOMERS FOR PETERBORO ON THE "ULTONIA"

The Cunard liner, Ultonia, which was making her first trip from Southampton to a Canadian port this summer lost one of her propellers on the trip and limped into Halifax on Saturday night under her own steam. She was bound for Quebec but with only one of her twin propellers in use, the captain decided not to risk the ice in the gulff and not to risk the ice in the gulf and

She reports that there is an unusually large quantity of ice in the path of the transatlantic liners.

The ship's experience is of local interest because among the twelve hundred passengers on board are six men from the Old Country who intend to make their homes in this city.

They are expected to arrive in Peterborough to-morrow, as they will be transferred to trains at Halifax and forwarded to their destination.

The trip took eighteen days.

CHOPPING HIM DOWN.

A Practical Joke That Was a Boomerang to the Woodsmen.

There is nothing that so cheers the heart of the lumberman as to play a practical joke on one whom he calls a "greenhorn," or, in other words, any one unused to the ways of a lumber camp. One of the harshest and most dangerous, although it is the most admired, writes Charles G. D. Roberts, the Canadian author, in "Around the Campfire," is that known as "chopping him down."

This means, in a word, that the stranger in camp is invited to climb a tall tree to take observations or enjoy a remarkable view. No sooner has he reached the top than two or three vigorous axemen attack the tree at its base. Long before he can reach the ground the tree begins to topple. As a general rule the heavy branches so break the fall of the tree that the victim finds himself uninjured. There are cases, however, where men have been crippled for life.

Mr. Roberts gives an experience of his own which did not come out exactly as the lumbermen expected. He had climbed into a magnificent pine tree one day. No sooner was he two-thirds up the tree than the lumbermen set to work to "chop him down."

"I thanked them for their attention," he writes, "and climbed a few feet farther up to secure a position which I saw would be a safe one for me when the tree should fall. As I did so I perceived, with a gasp and a tremor, that I was not alone in the tree.

"There, not ten feet above me, stretched at full length along a branch, was a huge panther. From the men below his form was quite concealed.

"I laughed to myself as I thought how my tormentors would be taken aback when that panther should come down among them. I decided that there would be no more danger to them than that to which they were exposing me in their reckless fooling.

"The great mass of foliage made the fall a compartively slow one. Then came the final thunderous crash, and in an instant I found myself standing in my place, jarred, but unhurt.

"The next instant there was another roar, overwhelming the laughter of the woodsmen, and out of the pine boughs shot the panther in a whirlwind of fury. He turned half round and greeted his enemies with one terrific snarl and then bounded off into the forest at a pace which made it idle to pursue him.

"The men seemed almost to think that I had conjured up the panther for the occasion. I thanked them most fervently for coming to my rescue with such whole-hearted good will and promised them that if ever again I got into a tree with a panther I would send for them at once."

New Animals Found.

A further study of the mammals collected by the scientists that accompanied the expedition of the Alpine Club of Canada in the Jasper Park and Mount Robson region of the Canadian Rockies last summer has resulted in the discovery of several previously unrecognized forms.

The hoary marmot and the caribou from the vicinity of Moose Pass prove to be new species. In connection with the identification of the caribou a thorough study of the specimens in the museum collections showed the necessity of recognizing additional forms of this interesting game mammal. A new species from the barren grounds of the Arctic coast of Alaska and one from Kamchatka are named.

The type specimen of the Rocky Mountain caribou came from the head of Moose Pass branch of Smoky River, Alberta, and, although its horns are not especially large, the measurements of the animal itself excel all authentic measurements of caribou on record.

Among the natural history collections made by Messrs. N. Hollister and J. H. Riley in the Canadian Rockies of eastern British Columbia and western Alberta were representatives of about 200 plants. Coming from a territory where little or no botanical collecting had been done previously, these have proved to be of interest. In the course of identifying the plants secured by the two collectors four were found which seemed to be unnamed.

Woman's World

Mrs. Agnes L. Riddle, "the Woman Who Does Things."

MRS. AGNES L. RIDDLE.

Mrs. Agnes L. Riddle of Denver has the honor of being the first woman elected to the state legislature from the rural districts of Colorado. Indeed, her constituents regard her as a modern Joan of Arc leading them to victory in their fight for justice and recognition due the farmers of the state.

Mrs. Riddle is the wife of a dairy farmer, and that she is a practical helpmeet is evidenced by the fact that she rises at 3 o'clock in the morning to prepare breakfast for the men on her big dairy farm near Denver, who start at 4 to deliver milk in the city. At 7 she has planned her farm work for the day, and at 8 her horse is harnessed to a light buggy and she is on her way to Denver to attend to the legislative duties of the day when that august body is in session.

Her duties there keep her at the capitol until 5 o'clock, and 6, her dinner hour, usually finds her at home again. Her evenings are devoted to the affairs of the farm. Mrs. Riddle has been for a number of years secretary of the Colorado State Grange association and during that time has done much to ameliorate the farmers' condition. In the twenty-five years since Mrs. Riddle has been mistress of the Glen Riddle dairy farm she has improved the entire farm system of the west by her efforts in the legislature and her earnest work in the grange.

It is easy to guess why this untiring worker in civic affairs is known in her native state of Colorado as "the woman who does things."

Notes About Women.

Miss Grace Sherwood of Ashtabula, the only woman member of a chamber of commerce in Ohio, is an officer in the woman suffrage party of her city.

The Tennessee Equal Suffrage association in convention at Nashville recently elected Sarah Barnwell Elliott as state president. Miss Elliott is one of the most prominent women in Tennessee and a writer and lecturer of national reputation.

The nine-year-old daughter of the governor of Tennessee is said to be a militant suffragette," while neither of her parents claims to be in favor of equal suffrage; a twelve-year-old schoolgirl in Kansas is reported as addressing large school meetings in behalf of votes for women, a ten-year-old girl in Los Angeles did good work for the cause during the California campaign, and a little twelve-year-old actress in New York holds suffrage meetings between acts at the theater.

A large deputation from the Council of Women of Toronto, Canada, recently waited upon the legislation and reception committee of the city council to urge that municipal voting rights be given to women possessing the same property qualifications as those required by male voters.

Votes for women are provided in a constitutional amendment introduced in the house of representatives at Washington a few days ago by Congressman Berger of Wisconsin. The resolution adds to the fifteenth amendment a clause that the right to vote shall not be denied on account of sex.

She Didn't Get It.

"There is a certain book in the library that I want," said Mrs. Sillyone to the librarian of 40,000 volumes. "I can't remember the title or the name of the author, but it is a book of probably 300 or 400 pages, and it is bound in dark green and the title is in gold letters on it.

"It is a story of a nobleman who discovers, after he has married a lady of wealth and title, that he is a changeling and that a certain blacksmith in the town is the real nobleman. A friend of mine has read it, and she is very anxious to have me read it.

"As I say, I can't remember the title of the book or the name of the author, but it is a book of about average size, and I wish that you would get it for me as quick as you can, for my husband is waiting for me in our car out in front of the library, and it always irritates him to be kept waiting. I'd like the book right away, please."—Judge.

DUTY TO THE FORESTS

CANADA IS FACED BY A GREAT RESPONSIBILITY.

Recent Report of Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior Shows That of Country's Total Annual Cut Only a Half Is Ever Used —A National Calamity Can Only Be Averted by Great Care.

In the Canadian West, where the public domain is still an asset of the Federal Government, an effort on a large scale is being made to conserve the timber resources of the country, says a writer in The Montreal Standard. This work of conservation is entrusted to the Forestry Branch of the Department of the Interior. The report of the branch for the latest fiscal year gives a detailed account of the work. Much of this is of interest only to those engaged in the work, but mingled with these reports of a technical or departmental nature, is much valuable information of interest to everyone interested in our timber resources — and this includes about everybody who takes thought for the morrow of the people of Canada. There must be conservation of our forest resources or the time will come when Canada will be a timberless country, and it is the duty of the Government to make a stand for economic use, and become the great teacher of conservation. The forest reserves of the Federal Government both teach and practice conservation.

The forest reserves of the Dominion now contain somewhat more than sixteen million acres. The recent forest reserves legislation was so framed as to include all lands reserved for parks as well as for forest reserves proper, and authority is given to the Governor in Council to set apart as parks such lands within reserves as are suitable for that purpose. Consequently the parks previously set apart have been included. These are Yoho and Glacier parks in British Columbia; Rocky Mountains Park and Jasper Park in Alberta, which are now included in the Rocky Mountain forest reserve, and Buffalo Park, also in the Province of Alberta.

In connection with those reserves the officers of the Forestry Branch have three principal duties to perform —to preserve the forests from destruction by fire; to supervise the cutting of timber where cutting is permitted; and to establish reforestation over depleted areas wherever such work of restoration is possible. Incidentally the officers of the branch perform other important duties. They are always collecting information respecting the geography of the reserves, the extent and nature of their timber resources, the animal life found there, and they also do much to protect that life, and so assist in preserving the big game of the country. The rangers of the forest reserves are the most active workers for the cause of conservation to be found in the country.

One of the best known of these officers is Mr. H. R. MacMillan whose duties and work have made him an authority upon Canadian forestry.

In his report to the Superintendent of Forestry, Mr. MacMillan goes beyond an account of the work that fell immediately under his hand, and presents some general information respecting the timber resources of all Canada, the rate at which consumption is going on, and what will be the end if the existing system is persisted in.

According to Mr. MacMillan's computation, Canada is consuming forest material at the rate of 2,896,000,000 cubic feet a year, possessing a value of $166,000,000. The quantity is that of timber cut in the woods to furnish the material necessary for each class of products. Owing to the very great waste in the utilization of wood in Canada only about one-half of this wood cut is ever actually put into use. That cut lumber, lath and shingles possessed the greatest value—eighty-seven and a half million dollars, while firewood comes second with a little more than one-half that amount.

The total value of $166,000,000 is the value at the point of production. "This," writes Mr. MacMillan, "is $22.44 for every person in Canada. In 1909, there were cut from Canadian forests about 400 cubic feet of timber for every inhabitant of the continent.

Two-fifths of the lumber of Canada is produced in Ontario, one-fifth in Quebec; New Brunswick and Nova Scotia together make up the greater part of the remaining fifth, and but proportionately small quantities are manufactured in Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Alberta and Prince Edward Island.

The decrease of the forests of Canada, and the consequent decrease in available forest products is nothing short of a national calamity.

The forests of Canada stand chiefly upon lands unfit for agriculture even in its most intensive form. They produce a crop valued at $166,000,000 per year. The harvesting and first manufacture of this crop employs labor to the extent of $100,000,000 yearly, and probably almost as much more is spent in turning out the more highly manufactured forms of wood products.

In addition to supplying a large proportion of the population of Canada with their means of livelihood, the products of the forest are for the whole population the chief source of heat and shelter, are the most important raw materials for the factories, enter largely into the construction of nearly all articles of human use, and furnish one-sixth of the total export of Canada.

Unless the principles of forestry are adopted by those who are responsible for the administration of the forest lands of Canada there is nothing surer than that within a comparatively short period of years the forests of Canada will be so destroyed by fire and exploitation, heedless of the future, that there will be an insufficiency of any grade of timber for the carrying on of the works of the population in this country.

REFORMS NEEDED AT MIMICO SCHOOL

Special Commission Appointed to Investigate Charges of Cruelty to Boy, Finds That Cottages Are Unclean and Whole Institution Is Overcrowded—Only One-Third Mentally Bright—Parole Needed.

Toronto, May 7.—The report of Dr. R. W. Bruce Smith and R. C. Harris, the commissioners appointed by the Ontario Government to investigate conditions at the Victoria Industrial School at Mimico, was made public yesterday.

The inquiry arose out of the charges of Wilbert Spain, a boy who declared that he had been handcuffed, starved and cruelly beaten by the superintendent.

The commissioners recommend:

That the action already taken by the board of management of the Victoria Industrial School to abolish mechanical restraint, such as handcuffs, be commended.

That as large a number as possible of the inmates, probably 100, should be discharged on probation as soon as homes can be provided for them.

That commitment of boys to the industrial school should be regulated in such a manner as to prevent overcrowding and to permit classification, with a view to as early parole as is practicable.

"The evidence shows that for many years handcuffs have been used as a punishment for boys running away from this school, and the evidence given on the last day of the investigation makes it clear that the class of boys for whose custodial care the institution is responsible, is one which often requires the strictest attention. As soon as the evidence was taken the board of management directed that the use of handcuffs be at once abolished.

"The institution has, in spite of many disadvantages, done an excellent work, and cruel treatment of the boys has been the exception and not the rule."

"There are about fifteen building, of which five are cottages, containing the dormitories, school and recreation rooms for the boys. These are not in a good state of repair and are in the main unclean and show evidence of lack of care and management.

"The grounds are greatly in need of new sidewalks and drainage. The dormitories are altogether too crowded, and the beds so close together that the air cannot be kept pure. One basement dormitory had 35 beds, which in such a room only 16 beds should be allowed. The dining-room was found quite unsuitable and unclean. The congregate system which permits 300 inmates to partake of their meals together in one room cannot be regarded as satisfactory.

"The original intention of the school, to deal with truant boys and prevent them becoming criminals, the commissioners point out, has somewhat been lost sight of and "boys with vicious propensities are now brought into contact with others whose worst faults had been largely on account of improper home training, but who have never been charged with a criminal offence.

"Everything was left to the superintendent, and the school, which should never have had more than 200 boys, at times had as many as 325 in residence.

"One-third of the boys are declared to be bright mentally. These should be discharged on probation as soon as there is promise of reformation, the commissioners say. Nearly one-third are of vicious instincts. The grading of these and their ultimate discharge on parole are recommended.

"In future," the report continues, "there should be more discrimination in sending boys to an industrial school. The last resort of the juvenile court should be the industrial school. Efficient, faithful probation or parole officers can do more for these boys than any other agency; they would find homes and work for them, and regularly visit them, not to spy upon them, but to help them."

LET CANADA BE FREE TO ACT

London, May 7.—The Westminster Gazette, one of the ablest Liberal journals, again devotes its principal editorial to a reciprocity discussion. "We say frankly that if Canadian people believed reciprocity would undermine their allegiance to the British Empire, that we are glad they rejected it, but we look beyond these immediate controversies to the powerful motive which must operate as the Northwest fills up." It believes as strongly as ever that it would be folly for us to regard Canadian loyalty as dependent on the shutting off of the north and south trade route between Canada and the United States, or to seek to base it on food taxes in this country, as an alternative policy. "If we do that we may, ten or twenty years hence, find Imperial connection tie up with a policy which is contrary to the major interest in both countries. Our proper course is to leave Canadians free to work out their own salvation. Make it clear to them, meanwhile, that in our opinion, either policy, is compatible with Imperial unity."

At Least Ten Killed.

Salisbury, Miss., May 7.—Six or more passengers and four trainmen were killed, and at least twenty-five passengers were hurt, when the first section of the Texas Confederate Reunion special train en route to Macon, Ga., was wrecked six miles north of Hattiesburg, yesterday.

Unrest In Ireland.

London, May 7.—In a House very sparsely filled, which is typical of the waning of public interest, in speeches lacking any pretense of novelty, the home rule debate was resumed yesterday afternoon by the House of Commons.

James H. M. Campbell, former Attorney-General for Ireland, under the Unionist administration, declared that the Government might entrap the King and mutilate the constitution, and might sell Ulster into bondage, but it would never be able to compel the Ulsterites to wear the fetters.

Sir Rufus Isaacs, the Attorney-General, twitted the Ulsterites with their "constitutional loyalty." He continued: "They will be loyal so long as they can coerce the majority in Ireland."

Sir Rufus Isaacs argued that the Unionist allegations of outrages and unrest in Ireland were the most damaging testimony of the failure of English rule, and therefore were the strongest argument in support of the home rule bill.

FELL TO DEATH

Special To The Review.

Montreal, May 7—A swinging scaffold attached to the new Ritzer Carlton Hotel Sherbrooke street, slipped from its moorings to-day, precipitating eleven brick layers to the ground. Christian Moteau was instantly killed, Harry Baker, James Murray and Philip Tremblay were severely injured. The others were practically unhurt.

LONG WAR IN MOROCCO

Paris, May 7.—The disturbed situation in Morocco is causing fears here that that country will not be made a French protectorate without a long campaign and much shedding of blood.

Reports from Southern Morocco show that the tribes there are openly hostile to the French. It is now officially known that during the recent fighting at El Maaziz, where a French detachment engaged in reconnoitering was attacked by Moors, the French troops lost 17 killed and 27 wounded, many of them dangerously.

Considerable anxiety is shown as to the attitude of the Sultan himself. One minute he declares that it is his intention to abdicate, and the next he says he wants to go to Rabat and then to France.

A prominent French general is quoted as expressing the belief that twelve years will be required to subdue Morocco.

TO CREMATE OBORNE'S BODY

Montreal, May 7.—The special car containing the remains of the late James M. Oborne, general superintendent of the British Columbia division of the Canadian Pacific Railway, arrived here yesterday morning on the Winnipeg train.

Mr. Oborne's remains will be cremated. They were taken from the station to Mount Royal Cemetery yesterday afternoon. Rev. Mr. Clark of Westmount performed the burial service at the cemetery.

Mrs. Oborne and the other members of the family, as well as Dr. Elliott, accompanied the remains across the continent.

Canadian Pacific Railway officials from as far east as St. John, and as far west as Lake Superior, were in the city to attend the funeral.

Women Will Rule?

The Earl of Meath in an address before a girls' club said that "there were 1,500,000 more women than men and the future of the British empire not many years hence was going to be decided not by men, but by women."

THE CARTIER MONUMENT

A communication in the shape of a circular letter was on the Council file last night asking the financial co-operation of the city in the erection of a monument in honor of the late Sir George Etienne Cartier, to be ready on his centenary celebration. The monument is to erected on the slope of Mount Royal, the estimated cost being $100,000.

The matter rests with the Finance committee.

Coming Concert

St. George's Society intend holding a grand concert in the Sons of England hall on Wednesday, May 15th, proceeds to be in aid of the "Titanic" relief fund.

MEMORIAL TO QUEEN VICTORIA UNVEILED.

The address of Mons. Poincaré, the French Premier, at the unveiling of the Queen Victoria Memorial at Nice on April 12 has created a most happy impression throughout France and England.

Referring to the late King Edward, the Premier said:—"It was Edward VII. who initiated and pursued this friendly co-operation between France and the United Kingdom. At the outset of his too short reign this great King said to his Privy Council that while he breathed he would work for the good of his people. By working for the good of his people he worked for the peace of the world, for civilization and for the progress of mankind; and when at the point of death he whispered that he had tried to do his duty. He was wrong to be overmodest and not sure enough of himself, and to imply that while he knew he had striven he did not know that he had attained. He tried to do his duty and he did his duty. Gentlemen, happy the kings or the subjects whose panegyric is contained in those simple words."

CHIEF OF RAILWAY BOARD PASSED AWAY AFTER SUFFERING RELAPSE

Toronto, May 7.—One of the big men in Canadian public life passed away at 3.15 yesterday afternoon, when Judge Mabee, chairman of the Board of Railway Commissioners of Canada, died of collapse, due to heart failure.

Just a week ago Judge Mabee was taken ill while the Railway Board was in session at the City Hall, and he was removed to St. Michael's Hospital, where an operation for appendicitis was performed by Dr. Bruce and Dr. Elliott. Gangrene, however, had set in, causing paralysis of the bowels, which was relieved by a second operation, performed on Friday. At that time little hope was held out for his recovery, but at midnight Sunday the doctors reported his condition somewhat improved, and the outlook was declared to be slightly more hopeful. As late as yesterday morning at 10.30 the doctors issued a bulletin declaring that, though still critically ill, they now felt hopeful of his recovery.

THE LATE JUDGE MABEE.

Then at 1 p.m. he suffered a severe collapse due to heart failure, and all hope was given up.

Arrangements have been made for the funeral, which will be held at Port Rowan on Wednesday.

Sir James Whitney, when informed of the death of Judge Mabee, said:

"His death will come as a shock to the whole province. During the short time that he occupied the position of chairman of the Dominion Railway Board he proved clearly that the idea behind such a tribunal, which was quite a new one, could be worked out successfully in the interests of the people. He was an ideal man for the position, and the people of the province will undoubtedly mourn his loss."

Hon. James Pitt Mabee, K.C., late chief commissioner of the Board of Railway Commissioners for Canada, came of U. E. Loyalist stock. He was born nearly 53 years ago, on November 5, 1859, in the town of Port Rowan, in Norfolk County, Ont. He was the eldest son of Col. Simon Pitt Mabee and Fannie Leaton.

His early education was gained at the St. Thomas high school, from which he matriculated to the University of Toronto at the age of 18. He studied law and was called to the Bar at the early age of 21.

After five years law practice in Listowel he removed to Stratford, where he put in eighteen years in the practice of his profession. He was made a Q.C. in October, 1889, and a bencher of the Law Society in 1904.

After leaving Stratford he came to Toronto where he became a member of the law firm of Beatty, Blackstock & Co., practicing for ten months in this city.

Before his elevation to the bench in 1905, Mr. Mabee had been an ardent Liberal and a vigorous campaigner, and in 1904 contested, unsuccessfully, the constituency of North Perth for the House of Commons in the Liberal interest.

On November 21, 1905, he was appointed one of the judges of the High Court Bench for Ontario, King's Bench division, and immediately began to attract attention for his brusque and straightforward way of getting to the root of things.

In 1905 he was appointed a member of the International Inland Waterways Commission, and in 1906 and 1907 he labored as one of the commissioners for the consolidation of the statutes of Ontario.

When Judge Killam, then chief commissioner of the Dominion Railway Board, died early in 1908, everyone who had followed the workings of that commission declared that it would be next to impossible to replace him. But the man was found, and it was Judge Mabee, who was appointed to the office, which Judge Killam held till the date of his death, March 28, 1908.

In religion the late Judge Mabee was an Anglican. He was married in October, 1884, to Marie S. Thorold of Mount Williams, Ont. He had one son, Lionel, and one daughter, Mabel, who, with the widow, survive him. He was a member of the Rideau Club, Ottawa, and the Toronto and York Clubs, Toronto.

Railway Magnates Sorry.

Montreal, March 7.—The news of the death of Judge Mabee was received with dismay in railway circles in Montreal. It is no exaggeration to say that, by all the head officials of the big railways in the city, he was held in the very highest esteem, despite his oftentimes severe handling of the companies. Sir Thomas Shaughnessy has on more than one occasion spoke highly in praise of the work of the Railway Commission and of Mabee, and at the time of Judge Mabee's appointment, he expressed great satisfaction in the choice of the Government, saying that he was a man of high legal ability, and one to whom the railways could submit their side of any case with absolute confidence in the fairness of the judgment rendered by him.

Ottawa Mourns Loss.

Ottawa, May 7.—News of the death of Chairman Mabee of the Railway Board was received in Ottawa with the greatest regret. He was exceedingly popular personally, and a member of the Government voiced what is a general opinion when he stated that the judge was probably the best man in the country for the position which he had filled. It is recognized that great difficulty will be experienced in finding a successor possessing, in anything like the same degree, his peculiar qualifications. His rulings have been courteous but firm, his method of dealing with the cases, expeditious, and the soundness of his judgments is indicated in the fact that they were rarely appealed from, and even more rarely varied.

Governor-General at Montreal.

Montreal, May 7.—The Duke and Duchess of Connaught reached Montreal yesterday and will be the guests at Lord Strathcona's house during their stay. The duke will open the 13th annual Montreal Horse Show at the arena to-day.

ENQUIRY A FIZZLE

Guelph, May 7.—The fire department investigation, which began on Tuesday last and ended abruptly on Saturday night, when Chief Finch and his counsel withdrew, has proven to be the biggest kind of a fizzle.

The fire and light committee, under whose jurisdiction the fire hall is, took the matter up yesterday afternoon and at the regular meeting of the city council, held last night, they brought in a report stating that as the chief had refused to testify or produce witnesses, the committee were not in a position to report, and suggesting that as reorganization was needed, tht chief and members of the brigade be asked to resign, taking effect on July 1, 1912; that applicants be advertised for, and the chief and members of the department be permitted to apply for reappointment.

CROSS IS DENOUNCED

Calgary, Alta., May 7.—A bombshell was thrown into the Liberal camp on the eve of the provincial elections, by an editorial article of The Albertan, the leading Liberal organ of the Sifton Government yesterday.

The Albertan does not hesitate to say that it disapproves of the addition to the Cabinet of Hon. C. W. Cross. Legislation inaugurated by him, it says, led to the downfall of the Rutherford Government, and alleges that despite the fact that he took a leading part in inviting Mr. Sifton to assume the duties of Premier, he was disloyal to him from the beginning and doubtless will be to the end.

"It is true," says the article, "that he enters the new Cabinet under different circumstances and he is now a supporter of the Sifton railway policy, and is not the dictator in the new Government that he was in the old. But the Government would be much stronger without him. He is the weakest of the present administration. Electors who otherwise would have confidence in it may hesitate as long as Mr. Cross is in his old position."

HE SHOT EIGHT TIMES AT GIRL

St. Johns, Que., May 7.—Having crossed to Champlain, N.Y., where he purchased a revolver and cartridges, Cleophas Duquette, of Lacolle, Que., returned yesterday morning and shot and slightly wounded his sweetheart, Miss Rainville.

Duquette fired at the girl eight times and afterwards committed suicide.

TELEGRAPHIC PARAGRAPHS

The steamer Oravia, from Liverpool, while entering Valparaiso (Chile) bay yesterday in thick weather, went ashore eight miles west of Valparaiso.

Over 5,000 passengers arrived at Quebec yesterday when four steamers got in from the other side. Three of the vessels belonged to the Allan Line and the other a Dominion liner.

As he is now nearly seventy years of age, and in ill-health, a monster petition will seek the release of ex-Reeve McCrea, Cornwall, Ont., sentenced to life imprisonment for shooting J. McGee.

Homer Turner, at one time caretaker of the Maple Leaf Cemetery of Chatham, but of late employed by the Lake Erie Coal Co., was fatally injured on the Pere Marquette Railway at Erisseau yesterday.

Hindus of Vancouver have gone over the head of the Dominion Government and have petitioned the Secretary of State for India to set aside the order recently passed by Ottawa for the deportation of two Hindu women.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, the Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, was in Washington yesterday and had a preliminary talk with Chandler Anderson, counsellor of the U. S. Department of State, regarding the fisheries treaty.

WILL OCCUPY ALL ISLANDS

Rome, May 7.—Advices received here from the island of Rhodes state that 3,000 Turkish troops fought under the walls of the city of Rhodes, but were dispersed by the Italian troops and retired into the interior of the island.

Gen. Ameglio has been appointed governor of Rhodes, Stampalia and other islands of the Archipelago, which may subsequently be occupied by the Italians.

It is believed that a month will be necessary for the Italian forces to occupy the islands of Chio, Ecaria, Mytilene and Lemnos.

Reinforcements of troops are being prepared to leave Italy for the new scene of operations.

An Italian column, totalling 1,500 men, yesterday engaged a force of Turks and Arabs near Bou Kemesch, on the Tripolitan coast near the Tunisian frontier. The Italians were repulsed leaving five men dead on the field. The losses of the Tripolitans were 25 men killed and 45 wounded.

JURY ACCEPTS SELF-DEFENSE VERSION OF LEVI PORTER'S SLAYER

Shriners In California.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 7.—The last of the Shriner special trains, carrying the delegates and visitors to the 38th annual convention, arrived here yesterday.

Pasadena was the first to extend a formal welcome to the visitors and thousands went there to help celebrate Pasadena Day. The program included a Spanish barbecue, a polo game, chariot races and drills by Arab patrols including Khartoum, Winnipeg, Man.

1,600 Sailed for Canada.

London, May 7.—The Donaldson liner Letitia, carried 800 from Glasgow, for Montreal on Saturday. The Allan liner Scandinavian had 800 for Quebec and Montreal, chiefly agriculturists.

The Jury Accepts Ellis' Self-Defence Version.

Minden, May 7.—Relying upon the confession of Arthur A. Ellis, made at a previous sitting of the inquest, Coroner Pogue's jury found at the close of the sitting here last night that Lew Porter came to his death on Thursday, April 25, from a gunshot fired from a rifle in the hands of Ellis, and that Ellis shot him in self-defence. This verdict was found after a little more than an hour spent in considering the evidence. Charles Wood, the Gull Lake farmer, told of hearing five shots on the night of the shooting. His evidence materially differed from that in Ellis' confession.

He said that just as dusk was falling on that night, he heard the reports of five shots. Two of these were heard close together, and then after an interval of about three minutes, the three followed in rapid succession. All five were heard while the witness was walking a distance of 500 yards. Ellis' story was that Porter had fired upon him and had gone away and then he had walked to a meadow to look for his cattle, and on his way back to his house had met Porter, who again opened fire upon him, and that he had then fired the three shots which killed him. This, however, would go to show that Porter had engaged in a shooting duel with Ellis, as Porter is known to have been alive while all three shots were fired into his body, and is also known to have had two cartridges. Had Ellis discharged Porter's gun after he had killed him, the three last shots would not have been close together.

Dr. E. A. White of Kinmount, who performed the autopsy, told of the three wounds, as they have been previously described. He said that Porter died from shock and internal hemorrhage. Other witnesses told of the finding of the body and described Porter as a quick and good shot with his rifle. Ellis was present at the enquiry, but did not again take the stand.

Mrs. Porter, widow of the dead man, said that when she was first told that her husband had been shot, she thought it had been an accident. She had never heard him make any threat against Ellis, although he had complained of the way Ellis had treated his wife, who was Porter's sister, at the time of her death, four years ago.

William Porter, the dead man's brother, said that he had been a good shot. He said that he had never heard either his brother nor Ellis make any threats against the other.

SHIP MAY BE LOST

Special To The Review

New York, May 7—The German steamer "Augsburg" which left here Feb. 2, for Australia, with a million dollars cargo and a crew of thirty six is believed to be lost with all on board. She was last seen on April eleventh and the German cruiser, which put out from Bermuda in search of the vessel, failed to find her.

BELLEVILLE K.C. PASSED AWAY

Belleville, May 7.—In the death of J. P. Thomas, K.C., Belleville's oldest lawyer has passed away. He had practiced in this city since 1864. Mr. Thomas was hon. president of the Hastings Law Society and was secretary-treasurer of the Belleville Cemetery Co. For many years he was secretary of the Board of Trade. Mr. Thomas was a prominent Mason and a member of the I.O.F. Society. Surviving is an aged widow and one daughter, Mrs. Dr. McColl of this city.

FINED FOR ILLEGAL FISHING

Belleville, May 7.—Lorenzo McDonald was yesterday before Capt. Hunter, game and fishery inspector for Ontario, and fined $25 for illegal fishing in Mosquito Bay. His nets, valued at $100, were confiscated. On Saturday, before the inspector at Picton, Kenneth and Clayton McIntosh, two brothers, were fined $10 each and costs for destroying muskrat houses.

Cable Ship Minia Arrives In Halifax With Seventeen Bodies and Reports Burying Two at Sea — Seventy Thousand Dollars Have Been Found on Bodies — Wainwright Takes Charge of Documents.

Halifax, May 7.—The Minia's toll of dead when the cable ship came in yesterday showed seventeen bodies found and two buried at sea.

The first body picked up was that of C. M. Hays, and the last that of Thomas A. Mullins, one of the stewards. On Mr. Hays' body were found estimates for future construction on the Grand Trunk Pacific. Vice-President Kelly received these.

Two bodies were buried at sea—one unidentified and the other a fireman.

The body of Mr. Hays was found several miles from any other.

Burial permits were issued yesterday for C. M. Hays' interment at Montreal, and that of Sigward H. Moen, in Norway.

The Mackay-Bennett brought a hundred and ninety bodies, and the Minia fifteen, a total of two hundred and five. Of these 137 have been shipped abroad or buried in Halifax, leaving 68 still at the morgue. Relatives are in communication in regard to most of these, and while the White Star people are not absolutely sure in regard to all of them they are as respects by far the greater number.

The body with the largest amount of funds was that of Col. Emil Brandeis of Omaha, Neb., who had $16,600. This included letters of credit for $10,000, checks for $6,000, bank notes for $400, and a 1,000 franc note.

The funds in the hands of the Provincial Government taken from the bodies of victims is $70,000.

The Montmagny sailed at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The White Star officials and shipping men here believe that the Government steamer will likely succeed in recovering a large number of bodies.

Not One Hebrew Body.

Halifax, May 7.—The remarkable fact developed at the Titanic morgue last night that the ten bodies taken by Hebrews from the Fairview Cemetery and removed to the Hebrew burying-ground were all Christians, either Roman Catholics or Protestants. The White Star Line had telegrams from friends regarding all of them, and the fact that they were Christians was established to the satisfaction of the local Hebrew Association. The bodies will now be sent back to the Fairview Cemetery.

OUR NEIGHBORS

The Belleville Intelligencer has evidently taken some jokes that have sometimes appeared in the Peterborough papers seriously. It says: "It has been the habit of the Peterborough papers to sneer at and falsely decry Belleville as a 'dead city,' but time has brought a change. The Review not admits that the 'City of the Bay has a beautiful situation, and has been picking up lately.' True, Bro. Review, you have been long in learning that Belleville has been growing steadily for the past seven years, the increase in the population during the period having been 2,471." Peterborough's population increased 2,400 last year, but the growth the Intelligencer quotes is not bad at all. Most of the towns in this district have been forging ahead during the last few years, and the returns of the assessors being published this spring show further increases in population in most of them. This is satisfactory. Peterborough desires to advance, and has made remarkable progress, although it has some croakers in its population. The increase in population in this city during the Dominion census decade showed a larger percentage than that of any other Ontario city, except the capitals, and one other in Northern Ontario, exceptionally situated, a much larger percentage than in a majority of the other cities. At the same time we are pleased to see that our neighbors are not standing still, as some of them did when Peterborough was advancing, and that, generally speaking, the whole district gives evidences of prosperity.

ECHOES OF THOSE LETTERS

A report that Mr. Bryce, British Ambassador at Washington, would be recalled on account of his connection with the reciprocity negotiations is denied. It was a most unlikely rumour. The then Canadian Government wished to enter into negotiations with the authorities at Washington; they sent representatives there for that purpose, and the reciprocity arrangement was the outcome. It may be taken for granted that the British Ambassador aided the Canadian representatives. They were the official representatives of the Dominion, and the Ambassador would having been lacking in duty, to say nothing of courtesy, if he had not used the influence of his position to facilitate the work they had gone to do, for he had a right to assume that they represented Canadian desires. The responsibility for the negotiations and their result rested with the Laurier Government. They should have known not to enter into an agreement that would have been detrimental to Canada economically and politically, and they were emphatically shown that they misrepresented the wishes of the Canadian people. The responsibility was theirs, and they received the proper reward. Mr. Bryce's part in the matter is being discussed in the British House of Commons, but the talk will not result in any action.

In Washington there is some feeling on account of the action of the President in publishing his letter to Mr. Roosevelt and the latter's reply. The correspondent in the United States Capital of the New York Times, says:—

"Government officials here are very uneasy over the outbursts of anger in Great Britain concerning President Taft's publication of his letter to ex-President Roosevelt about Canadian reciprocity. None of them, of course, will speak for publication, but they all deeply regret that the exigencies of the President's campaign in Massachusetts should have compelled him to make public a letter likely to have such a far-reaching effect on our foreign relations.

"Mr. Taft's frank statement to Mr. Roosevelt that he regarded the argument of the Borden people as 'a good one' is regarded by these uneasy officials and Congressmen as being hardly less injudicious to print than his talk about making Canada 'an adjunct to the United States.'"

The United States officials do not seem to be any more pleased with the publication of the letters than are the Liberals in Canada. They may not object to the President holding the views he did or of making them known to a friend in a confidential way, but to publish them so that they would reach the people of Canada and of England was another matter. It let too much light into the inner workings of the politicians at Washington.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Scientists state that the human body contains about two pounds of phosphorus. And yet some never make a match.

Judging by the pictures in the papers, the most attractive features of Toronto's horse show were ladies who have just stepped out of automobiles.

At the police station in Montreal 113 children were sheltered on May 1. They had been lost in the hurly-burly of moving day. This gives an indication of the confusion the annual flitting of so many people causes in a large city.

There was a time, the London Chronicle says, when fashionable folk held it discourteous to communicate with a friend through the post, when it was possible to do it by messenger. In time it will not be unfashionable to use the typewriter for all forms of correspondence.

An influential southern paper, the Louisville Courier Journal, says that ex-President Roosevelt is insane, and compares him to Hamlet and to Nero. These comparisons are vastly different from Mr. Roosevelt's own comparison of himself to Lincoln, and are probably as correct.

The wages of the charwomen employed in the government offices at Ottawa, were recently raised from 75 cents to one dollar a day. It is hard to understand why their wages remained so long at the lower figure, even under Liberal rule. Was it—could it have been—because they had not votes?

A medical journal, after investigation, points out that poets die young. If a large number of persons, who think they can write poetry will only be frightened by this statement, sufficiently to keep them from cultivating their very small gift, the investigation will not have been in vain.

Sir James Whitney having received a number of questions for a labor, organization, referred them to an official for information. This official's notes for Sir James were by mistake sent to the labor people and published as the Premier's reply and a number of newspaper articles have been rendered useless by the publication of the facts.

Gems o' Irish Oratory.

In "Wits and Their Humors," the Rev. J. O. Bevan relates the following Irishisms which have been perpetrated in Parliament and elsewhere:

"Mr. Speaker, before I begin to spake, I should like to say," etc.

"The voice of Oireland is now making itself felt. So long as she was silent, England was deaf to her cries."

"The cup of Ireland's miseries has been running over for centuries, and now—it is almost full."

"The right hon. gintleman is attempting to ram his bill down our throats — behind our backs; but we have many friends, though they may be backward in coming forward. The preamble of the bill has a feature in it which is objectionable, and on this feature the whole question hinges."

"The Government is taking credit for what it has not done; like the cuckoo, which, as you honorable gentlemen are aware, is the only bird which does not lay its own eggs."

Catarrhozone

Cures Permanently BRONCHITIS, COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, CATARRH

Throw medicine to the dogs. At best they are unpleasant, often useless. You are suffering from some disease of the throat, nose, or lungs, doctors call it Bronchitis, Asthma, or Catarrh, or it is a slight or severe cold. Germs cause these diseases—they have a common root.

Catarrhozone destroys disease germs, but it does more, it heals disease tissue.

CATARRHOZONE is little drops of healing carried by air to the exact place where Catarrh exists. Observe, Catarrhozone not only destroys the cause, but immediately repairs the result of diseased condition.

Catarrhozone means little drops of healing carried by air and placed over the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by doctors, druggists, and by thousands of Canadian people who have used it.

Catarrhozone

Yes, Sir, it is taken in air.

"Little drops of healing" carried by air to weak places in the lungs, throat, and nasal passages.

Three sizes: 25c, 50c, and $1.00, at druggists, or by mail postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Ont.

Latest Quotations in Grain Dairy Products, Live Stock Etc.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, May 6.—An upheaval in wheat prices to-day resulted from the bullish showing in Ohio and Missouri state crop reports and from equally alarming figures collected by the grain dealers of Illinois. The market touched new high levels for the season, $1.18 and $1.15 respectively for May and July, and closed with a gain of 1c to 1 3-4c net. Corn finished 1-8c to 5-8c down, oats varying from 3-4c off to 1-8c advance and provisions strung out 7 1-2c each way from the prices current 48 hours ago.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat ⅝d to ⅞d higher than yesterday, and on corn ¼d higher. Berlin wheat closed ¾c higher, Budapest 1½c higher and Antwerp unchanged.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, May 6.—Business in oats and wheat over the cable continues very quiet, there being little demand from foreign buyers. Butter is firmer, and prices have advanced 1c per pound, owing to the high prices paid in the country and the increased demand from the west. Cheese is also very firm, with a fair demand from English buyers. Eggs active and steady. Dressed hogs declined 25c per 100 pounds on increased supplies.

Corn—American, No. 2 yellow, 90c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 54½c; do., No. 3, 50½c; extra No. 1 feed, 51½c; No. 2 local white, 50½c; No. 3 local white, 49½c; No. 4 local white, 48½c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, May 6.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 121 carloads, comprising 2415 cattle, 887 hogs, 30 sheep and 23 calves.

Exporters.

Alexander McIntosh bought 203 export steers of choice quality for J. Shamberg & Son, at $7.25 to $7.60.

Butchers

A few fancy, heavyweight steers, export weights, sold from $7 to $7.25, and one lot of 16 good export quality steers were bought by B. Slattery of Ottawa at $7.50; butchers, 1000 to 1100 lbs. each, at $6.75 to $7; medium, $6.30 to $6.75; choice butchers' heifers, $6.50 to $7.15; common steers and heifers, $6 to $6.25; cows, $3.75 to $6.25, with a few choice at $6.50; bulls, $4.75 to $5.75.

Stockers and Feeders

Mr. C. Zeagman & Sons will have 100 stockers and light feeders on sale at the City Market on Tuesday, amongst which is one load of good yearlings, 450 to 500 lbs. each, also another good load of one to two-year-old heifers and steers, 650 to 800 lbs. each.; also another load of one and two-year-old steers, 500 to 650 lbs. each.

Milkers and Springers

The market for milkers and springers was as strong as at any time last week. Prices ranged from $45 to $70, with one choice at $85, and another extra choice at $100. McDonald & Halligan topped the market for milkers, as well as exporters. They sold seven milkers and springers at $50 to $100 each.

Veal Calves.

Not many on sale; prices firm, at $4 to $7.75 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, were sold at $6 to $7.25; yearlings, from $8 to $9.75 per cwt., and spring lambs at $4 to $7 each.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $7.75, and $7.40 was the price reported for f.o.b. cars, but we know of $7.40 being paid to farmers.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, May 6.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending May 4 were 1175 cattle, 220 sheep and lambs, 3175 hogs and 2000 calves. The offerings for sale on the market this morning amounted to 800 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 1780 hogs and 375 calves.

The market for cattle was without any special feature to-day, prices for all grades being firmly maintained. The supply was not as large as a week ago, but a fairly active trade was done and a good clearance was made. The quality of the stock was generally good, but drovers state that the barns in some sections of the country are now pretty well cleaned up of cattle, and that the run from now on until grass cattle are in fit condition will be only fair, and that present prices will likely be sustained for the balance of this month. The offering of really choice steers was rather limited, and sales of full loads were made at $7.50, while good stock changed hands at $7, and steers weighing from 1000 to 1050 lbs. each brought $6.75 per 100 lbs.

The milch cow trade has improved considerably of late, and, as supplies have been none too large to fill the requirements, a stronger feeling has prevailed in the market, and prices have advanced $5 to $10 per head.

Prices for hogs declined 10c to 20c per 100 lbs., which was due principally to the increased supplies offered. At this reduction there was an active demand from packers, as they were mostly all short of stock, consequently a brisk trade was done, and sales of selected lots were made freely at $9.40 to $9.65 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

The trade in small meats was quiet, on account of the limited supplies offered, which is usually the case in the beginning of the week, and in consequence the tone of the market was steady, with no change in prices to note. Spring lambs are selling all the way from $4 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $7.75; do., medium, $5.25 to $6.75; do., common, $4.50 to $5; do., choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; do., medium, $5.75 to $6; do., bulls, $5.85 to $6.75; milkers, choice, each, $80 to $90; do., common and medium, each, $65 to $75; springers, $50 to $60.

Sheep, ewes, $6 to $6.50; bucks and culls, $5 to $5.50. Lambs, $7.25 to $7.50.

Hogs, f.o.b., $9.40 to $9.65.

Calves, $1.50 to $10.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Cynthia's Chauffeur

By LOUIS TRACY

Copyright by McLeod & Allen, Toronto

But now, in a flash, the entire perspective had changed. The Frenchman and Mrs. Devar, between them, threatened to upset his best-laid plans. It was one thing to guess the nature of the sordid compact revealed at Brighton; it was quite another to be brought face to face with its active development at Cheddar. The intervening hours had disintegrated all his pet theories. In a word, the difference lay in himself—before and after close companionship with Cynthia.

It must not be imagined that Medenham indulged in this series of self-analysis while fetching a pail of water to replace the wastage from the condenser. He was merely in a very bad temper, and could not trust himself to speak until he had tended to his beloved engine.

He determined to set doubt at rest forthwith by the simple expedient of finding Miss Vanrenen, and seeing whether or not Marigny had waylaid her already.

"Keep and eye on my machine for a minute," he said to the guardian of the Du Vallon. "By the way, is Captain Devar here?" he added, since Devar's presence might affect his own actions.

"Oh, you know him, do you?" cried the other. "No, he didn't come with us. We left him at Bristol. He's a bird, the captain. Played some johnny at billiards last night for a quid, and won. He told the guv'nor this morning that there is another game fixed for to-day, and you ought to have seen him wink. It's long odds again' the Bristol gent, or I'm very much mistaken. Yes, I'll keep any amatoor paws off your car, and off my own as well, you bet."

To pass from the stable yard to the garden it was not necessary to enter the hotel. A short path, shaded by trelis-laden creepers and climbing roses, led to a rustic bridge over the stream. When Medenham had gone halfway he saw the two women sitting with Marigny at a table placed well apart from other groups of tea-drinkers. They were talking animatedly, the Count smiling and profuse of gesture, while Cynthia listened with interest to what was seemingly a convincing statement of the fortunate hazard that led to his appearance at Cheddar. The Frenchman was too skilled a stalker of shy game to pretend a second time that the meeting was accidental.

Mrs. Devar's shrill accepts traveled clearly across the lawn.

"Just fancy that . . . finding James at Bath, and persuading him to come to Bristol on the chance that we might all dine together to-night! Naughty boy he is—why didn't he run out here in your car?"

Count Edouard said something.

"Business!" she cackled. "I am glad to hear of it. James is too much of a gad-about to earn money, but people are always asking him to their houses, He is a dear fellow. I am sure you will like him, Cynthia."

Medenham had heard enough. He noted that the table was gay with cut flowers, and a neat waitress had evidently been detailed by the management to look after these dis-tinguished guests; Marigny's stage setting for his decisive move was undoubtedly well contrived. It was delightfully pastoral—a charming bit of rural England—and, as such, eminently calculated to impress an American visitor.

Cynthia poured out a cup of tea, heaped a plate with cakes and bread and butter, and gave some instructions to the waitress. Medenham knew what that meant. He hurried back by the way he had come, and found that Marigny's chauffeur had lifted the bonnet off the Mercury.

"More I see of this engine the more I like it—What's your h.p.?" asked the man, who clearly reguarded the Mercury's driver as a brother in the craft.

"38."

"Looks a sixty, every inch. I wonder if you could hold my car at Brooklands?"

"Perhaps not, but I may give you some dust to swallow over the mendips."

The chauffeur grinned.

"Of course you'd say that, but it all depends on what the guvnor means to do. He's a dare-devil at the wheel, I can tell you, an' never says a word to me to let things rip. But he's up to some game to-day. He's fair crazy about that girl you have in tow—what's her name? Vanrenen, isn't it?"

"Yes," said Medenham, replacing the hood after a critical glance at the wires, though he hardly thought this sturdy mechanic would play any tricks on him.

"Which of you men is called Fitzroy?" demanded a serving-maid, carrying a tray.

"I," said Medenham.

"Here, Miss," broke in the other, "my name's Smith, plain Smith, but I can do with a sup o' tea as well as anybody."

"Ask Miss Venrenen to give you another cup for Count Marigny's chauffeur," said Medenham to the girl.

"Oh, he's a count, is he?" said the waitress saucily. "My, isn't he mashed on the young one?"

"Who wouldn't be?" declared Smith. "She's the sort of girl a fellow 'ud leave home for."

"Fine feathers go a long way. There's as good as her in the world," came the retort, not without a favorable glance at Medenham.

"Meanwhile the tea is getting cold," said he.

"Dear me, you needn't hurry. Her ma is goin' to write half-a-dozen picture postcards. But what a voice! The old girl drowns the waterfall."

The waitress flounced off. She was pretty, and no wandering chauffeur had ever before turned aside the arrows of her bright eyes so heedlessly.

"Then you have seen Miss Vanrenen?" inquired Medenham, sipping his tea.

"Ra-ther!" said Smith. "Saw her in Paris, at the Ritz, when my people sent me over there to learn the mechanism of this car. The Count was always hanging about, and I thought he wanted the old man to buy a Du Vallon, but it's all Lombard Street to a china orange that he was after the daughter the whole time. But you ought to know best. How do you get on with her?"

"Capitally.'

"Why did Dale and you swop jobs?"

"Oh, a mere matter of arrangement," said Medenham, who realized that Smith would blurt out every item of information that he possessed if allowed to talk.

"He's a corker, is Dale," mused the other. "I can do with a pint or two myself when the day's work is finished an' the car safely locked up for the night. But that Dale, he's a walkin' beer-barrel. Lord love a duck! what a soakin' he giv' me in Brighton. Some lah-di-dah toff swaggered into the garage that evenin,' and handed Dale a fiver—five golden quidlets, if you please—which my nibs had won on a horse at Epsom. I must say, though, Dale did the thing handsome—quart bottles o' Bass opened every ten minutes. Thank you, my dear"—this to the waitress, "next to beer give me tea. Now, my boss, bein' a Frenchy, won't touch eether—wine an' corfee are his specials."

"He seemed to be enjoying his tea when I caught sight of him in the garden a little while ago," said Medenham.

"That's his artfulness, my boy. You wait a bit. You'll see something before you reach Bristol to-night; anyway, you'll hear something, which amounts to pretty much the same in the end."

"They're just off to the caves," put in the girl.

"While Mrs. Devar writes her postcards, I suppose?" said Medenham innocently.

"What! Is that the old party with the hair? I thought she was the young lady's mother. She's gone with them. She looks that sort of meddler—not half. Two's company an' three's none is my motto, cave or no cave."

She tried her most betwitching smile on Medenham this time. It was a novel experience to be the recipient of a serving-maid's marked favor, and it embarrassed him. Smith, his mouth full of currant bun, spluttered with laughter.

"A fair offer," he cried. "You two dodge outside and see which cave the aristocracy chooses. Then you can take a turn round the other one. I'll watch the cars all right."

The girl suddenly blushed and looked demure. A sweet voice said quietly:

"We shall remain here half an hour or more, Fitzroy. I thought I would tell you in case you wished to smoke—or occupy you time in any other way."

"You may occupy your time in any way you wish, Fitzroy," said Cynthia.

The pause was eloquent. Cynthia had heard.

"Thank you, Miss Vanrenen," he said, affecting to glance at his watch.

He felt thoroughly nonplussed. She would surely think he had been flirting with this rosy-cheeked servant, and he might never have an opportunity of telling her that his sole reason for encouraging the conversation lay in his anxiety to learn as much as possible about Marigny and his associates.

"My, ain't she smart!" said the girl when Cynthia had gone.

THE MOTH MILLER.

Watch Out For This Insidious Little Destroyer.

We are all familiar with the moth miller seen flitting about in the early dusk during late spring and early summer. If when a closet door opens a number of these moths flutter out we may rest assured that mischief has been brewing there. Not that this moth itself has done or can do any injury. Its work is to lay the little white eggs in fur or wool, wherever it can find a place. These eggs hatch twice (during the spring and early summer) into tiny grubs or caterpillars, and they do the mischief.

Almost the first work of the caterpillar after hatching from the egg is to eat holes in the material on which it nests. With that wool or fur it eats is spun a little sheath or cocoon, and this sheath shows as the insect grows. After awhile it leaves its cocoon and hatches into a moth.

The period of development depends upon the temperature. In this climate there are two hatching times in one season. But the insect is sensitive to cold and does not develop unless the temperature is above 60 degrees; hence has come the practice of placing furs and valuable rugs in cold storage, where, if already infected with eggs, no hatching can take place.

It behooves all home keepers to put all winter clothing away early—before these little pests get busy. In houses that are kept too warm there is danger of constant hatching of eggs, but, as a general rule, they do not hatch till early spring.

To prevent all moth eating clothing should while the days are yet cool be thoroughly cleaned, brushed and aired in the sun and whipped so that any eggs may be dislodged. They should then be put away in some way that will keep the air from them.

Paper bags sealed at the top and boxes with covers sealed with strips of paper are best for furs and feathers. Newspapers and cotton cloths are excellent to wrap garments in, as moths will not touch either.

Carpets and rugs need particular attention and should be given frequent beatings in the sunlight. Many people spray all clothing with gasoline before putting away for the summer, and carpets and rugs may safely be treated in this way. Camphor and moth balls are of absolutely no use if eggs are in the garments when they are put away. The only use of camphor is that it repels the moth by its odor and no moth will go near it.

Mrs. Burnett's Marmalade Recipe.

Friends who have been guests of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett at Plandome, her Long Island home, are enthusiastic over her delicious marmalade, a specialty of the house.

The following recipe for its making was unselfishly given by Mrs. Burnett's sister:

One large orange, one lemon, one grapefruit. Clean the fruit thoroughly with brush and water; cut in halves, remove all seeds and as much of the white skin as possible (do not peel). Then put through the meat chopper.

To one cupful of pulp add three cupfuls of water. Put in skillet and boil up quickly to skim off the froth. Set the skillet where it will boil slowly for two hours. Then take from the stove. Let the mixtures stand overnight.

The next day add one cupful of sugar to one of juice and again get it to the boiling point quickly for a second skimming. After this boil slowly for about three hours or until it has thickened to marmalade consistency.

This quantity of ordinary sized fruit will make eight half pint tumblers of marmalade.

When Does a Man Need Life Insurance?

When he comes to die. Nine men out of ten, no matter how prosperous thay may have been during some period in the past, will leave no other estate, or at least not enough of other assets to save their families from pinching poverty.

He needs life insurance before he dies, as, for example, when he finds himself no longer insurable. He knows he needs it when he cannot get it. He always intended to take insurance, or to add to the amount he already carries, but he deferred too long. Procrastination is the robber of widows and orphans.

He needs life insurance now—all he can possibly carry. He needs it now because to-morrow, or next month, or next month, or next year, by reason of accident or disease, he may be unable to get it.

He needs it because he is poor; or because, if fairly well to-do, he would yet not leave such a provision for his family as he would like to leave, if he were suddenly taken away.

He needs it because, though he may be rich, he knows that riches often "take themselves wings." He needs it because, being rich he is able to pay for it, while a little later he may be unable to pay, or unable to get it even if he can pay.

He needs it because he can buy it cheaper to-day than ever he can in the future. He must have it sometime, and every year adds to the price that he will have to pay.

You will find the most up-to-date policy of to-day issued by THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

DR. NORVAL'S NUTRITIVE HYPOPHOSPHITES

When a person feels "blue" — "all tired out" — "dosen't feel like doing anything" — "connot concentrate his mind on his work" — "feels weak mentally and physically" — "doubts his powers" — "complains of poor appetite and sleeplessness" — "suffers from headache" — Then his nervous system is run down and demands a good up-building tonic. Nervous exhaustion is a modern disease, caused by too close attention to business, overwork worry, cares, overstudy, etc.

Dr. Norval's Nutritive Hypophosphites forms the best nerve and brain food known, and have restored thousands of sufferers to health.

WANDERING KINDERGARTEN TOTS RESTORED TO PARENTS

The two little five-year-old sons of Mr. John Gibson, Parnell street, lost their way when returning from kindergarten yesterday afternoon and gave their parents several anxious hours, before they were finally returned to their home.

The children attend the kindergarten at the King Edward school and in returning from school went by their home, and in trying to find it they wandered to the north suburbs of the city.

The uneasy parents, after scouring their district, notified the Police and Fireman who instituted a search for the little tots but did not find them.

Finally someone noticed one of the children near the power house, at Auburn, and putting him on a south bound car he reached home in safety.

The other tiny wayfarer had separated from his brother, and had wanndered one and one half miles north of the powerhouse on the east side of the river. A kindly farmer found the child, and learning his plight, he communicated with Chief Howard, who drove out and brought him home. It was after 11 o'clock before both children had been restored to Mr. and Mrs. Gibson.

While being greatly worried for some hours at the loss of their children, Mr. and Mrs. Gibson are grateful that both of them returned little the worse for the escapade and had escaped the numerous injuries that might easily have resulted from such an occurence.

WORK COMMENCED ON NEW QUARTERS FOR THE KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS

The Knights of Columbus have commenced work on the newly acquired property next to the Y.W.C.A., and are carrying out plans to make a large number of changes in the buildings, and to make them suitable for their club rooms.

The society will expend nearly $2,000 in renovating and altering the building and it is anticipated that the result will be a handsome building.

A fine, extensive verandah will be built, seventy-four feet in length and ten feet wide which will add greatly to the appearance and usefulness of the premises as club rooms for the Knights.

The work is under the direction of Mr Richard Sheehy who is sole supervisor of the repairs.

It is expected that the necessary changes both to the interior and exterior of the place will be completed before August the 1st, 1912.

AT GRAND WEDNESDAY NIGHT THE "CHOCOLATE SOLDIER"

Most Popular Opera of the Season—Catchy Music and Bright Dialogues—Special Orchestra of Twenty Pieces

What promises to be the most popular offering this season at the Grand Opera House, is the "Chocolate Soldier," which is to be seen here to-morrow evening. Every one is more or less familiar with the music of the opera, its different numbers having been sung, whistled, danced to and ground out on the street pianos till you couldn't help learning them. Some of the best known selections are, "My Hero," "Sympathy," "Falling in Love" and "The Letter Song."

The leading part is being taken by Miss Alice Yorke, who is a Toronto girl, who has met with great success with her work and who is a great favorite with her audiences. The costumes and stage settings are most elaborate and no expense has been spared by the owners to have everything of the highest class. The "Chocolate Soldier" company carry their own orchestra of twenty soloists, this fact alone being a guarantee of the excellence of the musical part of the production.

There are still a few good seats left and if tickets that have been ordered and not paid for are not claimed by five o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, they will be put on sale also. There has been a big demand for them.

The Opera House management request that all seat holders be in their places before 8.15, as the performance will begin promptly at that hour. The upper gallery will be open at half past seven.

Eton's Threepenny Day.

A quaint custom still survives at Eton on what is known as Threepenny Day. Every year the Provost (or his deputy) presents each of the collegers, beginning with the lowest, with a threepenny piece. Threepenny Day was kept a few days ago at the famous school. Provost Bost (1477-1504) originated the custom by leaving a sum which gives each colleger twopence, and Provost Lupton (1504-35) left them the extra penny.

The late Mr. Montagu Williams, in his "Leaves of a Life," refers to the custom as follows: "On one day in the year every colleger was entitled to receive threepence, or half a sheep, threepence being the value of half a sheep at the time the statute was passed. On the appointed day, while the 'Tugs' were at dinner, Bursar Bethell would come into the hall and give each boy a threepenny piece, but never offering him the alternative of half a sheep. On one occasion a small and impertinent young Tug, named Branwell, when offered the coin, turned round to the Bursar and said, 'No, thank you, sir, I want my half sheep.' Bethell flew into an awful rage and exclaimed, 'I'll mention this matter to Dr. Hawtrey, and have you flogged.' After three o'clock school the wretched Branwell was accordingly sent for, handed over to the two holders-down, and duly punished."

Kitchener Stranded.

Ex-Police Sergeant Rayment, the man who was the innocent cause of Lord Kitchener being stranded on the river bank at Ambukol, in one of the Egyptian campaigns for two days without food, has been presented with a marble clock on his retirement, after serving 25 years in the London police force, 18 of which have been spent at South Norwood. Rayment served as a telegraphist in the Royal Engineers, and was deputed to take a boatload of supplies to Kitchener, who was then acting as intelligence officer. Desertion on the part of his Bashi-Bazouk helpers was one of the reasons which delayed him on his journey, and on his arrival the first words he heard from Kitchener were: "Good heavens, man, where have you been? We thought you had got killed. Hurry out with something. I have had nothing to eat for two days."

ORANGEMEN GET GRANT FOR JULY 12

A deputation representing the Orangemen of the city was head by the Council last night.

J. B. McWilliams asked if the Council would grant the Orangemen $200 for decorative purposes on July 12th. Mr. McWilliams referred to past demonstrations undertaken by the Orangemen in the city on that day, but promised one, bigger, better and more successful than ever this year. The large expense which they would be under, however, required considerable money and the council's usual $200 grant would be deeply appreciated and decidedly useful. Mr. McWilliams also asked for the use of Central Park as on previous years. A couple of booths would be erected where soft drinks could be purchased by the hot or thirsty ones. He thought that there would also be more money spent in Peterborough that day than in the whole month put together without it. On the last occasion of an Orange demonstration in Peterborough 20,000 people invaded the city.

On motion of Ald. Buller, the Orangemen will be given control of Central Park this year as formerly and also be granted the usual $200 for decorating purposes and the building of arches.

PLUMBERS FEE.

Mr. C. A. J. Duranceau, the local plumber was present to protest against the levying of the $10 fee upon the plumbers, considering that the amount was excessive under local conditions and in consideration of other business taxes. Mr. Duranceau was informed that the matter would be thoroughly gone into by the City Finance Committee at the earliest possible moment.

The only other man who addressed the Council was Mr. Wm. Taylor, who wanted street sprinkling between Hilliard and Argyle street. The matter will be investigated.

BIG BUDGET OF BUSINESS TRANSACTED BY COUNCIL

A clause in the report of Ald. Buller, chairman of the Board of Works, relating to the construction of a cement walk on Princess street, did not find favor with the Council last evening and was referred back to the committee. On the street mentioned, are only a couple of residents, who would have the direct benefit of such a walk, and naturally enough, the other dwellers on the street objected to being assessed for such a walk, in addition to their already heavy assessment. At this point, Ald. Morgan inquired why there was nothing in the report about the building of a sidewalk on Carlisle Ave., East City.

"It is a shame that some people should have sidewalks almost forced upon them," he remarked, "while others are praying for the same," and their prayers are not answered."

On motion of Ald. Morgan and Morgan the matter of the construction of a walk on Carlisle Ave., was referred to the Board of Works, together with the Princess street matter.

A request from Mr Detcher for a cement walk on the south side of Hilliard street between George and Water was also referred to the Board of Works.

Ald. Brown submitted the report of the Legal Committee which went through without comment.

MARKET HOURS

The hour at which hucksters and vendors are permitted to commence buying on the market may be changed from ten o'clock to eleven in the near future. Ald. Gordon expressed his intention to bring in a motion to that effect at the next Council meeting.

Several by-laws, authorizing the execution of contracts passed their several readings.

STREET WATERING

A by-law authorizing the execution of an agreement for street watering passed its three readings.

SEWER PIPE

A by-law authorizing the execution of an agreement with Robert Hicks for sewer pipe went through its various readings successfully.

REFUSE GROUNDS

A by-law authorizing the execution of an agreement with F. Board, N. Monaghan, as to refuse grounds at $350 per year, passed its three readings.

SIDEWALKS

A by-law authorizing the execution of an agreement for the borrowing of $231,111 by debentures for sewer construction passed, also a by-law for the borrowing of $11,385.75 upon debentures for sidewalk construction this year for the city.

WHISTLING BY-LAW

Ald. Anderson next read what he termed the whistling by-law. This is a by-law prepared by Ald. Gordon, prohibiting unnecessary whistling by locomotives in the city limits.

By its clauses, no locomotive driver shall be allowed to sound, blow, or cause to be blown his locomotive whistle within the city limits, except when absolutely required for railway purposes or to give warning for the safety of human life.

Ald. Buller did not think the by-law would be satisfactory.

"The railway companies will beat us, in the very first case that arises" remarked the people's candidate.

Ald. Morgan, while favoring the by-law felt that all purposes would be answered by merely prohibiting whistling in the early morning and late at night. During the day it would pass unnoticed. The by-law prepared by Ald. Gordon, carried however. The maximum penalty for violation of any of its provisions is a $50 fine.

TURNED DOWN

A by-law providing for the purchase of the Fair Grounds in five years time for $30,000, encountered opposition in its second reading. Some more warm discussion was evoked as to the wisdom of such a course.

Ald. Gillespie contended that the grounds should be purchased, and that it would be one of the best courses possible for the city to pursue. He didn't agree with the statement that it would interfere with the growth of the south portion of the city. In introducing the by-law Ald. Gillespie was quite favorable to the suggestion made at the last council session that it be submitted along with some other by-law; the bridge by-law if desired, should such be put before the people soon.

Ald. Duncan pointed out that the grounds were not suitable in location. He felt that they should be farther west, and that the exhibition grounds could be converted into excellent building lots.

Mayor Bradburn—"It appears to me that we cannot proceed further in the matter just yet, not being sure when we can submit it with some other by-law. And furthermore I don't think it will carry, and that the site is not the best for exhibition purposes, I feel that the grounds should be further down. The people will not carry it, and I would therefore move that it be referred back to report progress."

Ald. Gillespie—"I firmly believe that with a little work, and by showing the people why it should be carried, there is no reason why it would not go through."

Ald. Gillespie also affirmed that in his opinion, the grounds were very convenient and suitable. For quite an extended period the grounds could be used for exhibition purposes, without causing any ill effects to the city. He strongly opposed the objections offered by the aldermen, and considered that nothing killed a by-law more effectually or sooner, than having the aldermen oppose them. He was perfectly agreeable to the exhibition ground by-law being accompanied by another; when submitted to the people, however.

Ald. Brown stated that he was conversant with the matter, and believed that something more permanent could be secured for less money

Mayor Bradburn's motion that the by-law be referred back was endorsed by the Finance chairman. At the time the Fair Directors waited upon the Council with the request for the purchase of the grounds, he stated his opposition to it, and was glad to see that some of the others had come over to his way of thinking at it, and were now of his opinion.

Ald Gordon—"To my mind the Council have considerable expensive matters to confront now. You have a proposed sewage disposal scheme, which may range to $200,000 in cost; then there is the bridge by-law to give East City what is her due, besides other proposed expenditures, including the $80,000 grant to the School Board. It means that if all these by-laws were submitted at the same time they will surely be killed together.

Ald. Anderson again pointed out the enormity of the Council's required expenditures this year.

The by-law was accordingly referred back to report progress.

WIDENING STREETS.

Ald. Buller came forward with a suggestion for immediate steps being instituted for the widening of the following streets:—Babb's Lane, Louis street, the thoroughfare from Bolivar to Sherbrooke, and from Sherbrooke to Patterson street, also the opening of Cricket Place through to Mark street.

Ald. Buller moved first that the city expropriate the land required for the widening of the enumerated streets, but on the suggestion of the Mayor added the words "or buy the same." The motion carried.

A motion for the construction of three approaches to the property on the south side of Simcoe street, East of Water, carried.

CHURCH CROSSINGS.

Ald. Buller asked about placing a crossing in front of the new Baptist church on Murray street. He asked Ald. Gordon for his opinion as to the most suitable place for the walk. Rev. J. R. Webb had spoken to Ald. Buller in reference to the crossing, it being a genuine necessity. There was a division of opinion as to whether the sidewalk which comes out in front of the armories should be extended across unto Murray, or a separate crossing constructed directly in front of the church.

The matter will be settled when the Board of Works and as many of the Aldermen as possible, make an all-day trip around the city on Friday, starting out at eight o'clock in the morning. The walk if laid may be ready by May 27th for traffic to the Summer Fair in the armories.

CAR TRACK REPAIRS.

Moved by Ald. Johnston and Graham that the Peterborough Radial Railway Company be instructed to alter their car tracks at the junction of Smith and George streets, and that the company be held liable for any accident that may occur there.—Carried.

Ald. Duncan stated that he was informed the addition to the police station, was encroaching a foot in to the market lane-way. No action was taken.

It was moved by Ald. Duncan and Graham that the desired grant of $150 to the Ladies Auxiliary of the Peterborough Health Association be advanced.—Carried.

MORE HYDRANTS.

A communication from the Water Commissioners was to hand, asking who would be responsible for the cost of laying a water main and installing hydrants on Townsend street, west of Park, to the property recently acquired by the Canadian General Electric Company. The cost would be over $1,000.

The council were unanimous in the feeling that the C.G.E. Co. should assume the liability for the work, they being the parties who would be directly benefitted thereby. Final disposition for the matter was left with the Fire Water and Light Committee.

Ald. Morgan inquired what was the decision of the Council in reference to a Saturday half holiday for the staff of the city buildings during June, July and August.

Mayor Bradburn thought that the best manner of settling the proposal was to leave it with heads of the departments in each office to say who should have the holiday. It was not desirable that the offices should close entirely, and arrangements might be made whereby some of the clerks could have the half holiday, but yet not close the offices entirely.

IT MAY COME BACK.

Ald. Anderson notified the body of a complaint that had reached his ears, that Mr. Scriver was dumping the garbage in a swampy piece of land at the rear of Nicholls Hospital. In the spring time next year there was the danger of this stuff being washed down into the city again, thereby doing the boomerang act.

Ald. Gordon before the adjournment came along with a couple of motions. One was that the M.H.O. and the Sani- to meet a committee and report on their analysis of milk samples taken from the various vendors by the inspector. Seconded by Ald. Brown, his recommendation carried.

His second motion was that the chairman of the Finance Committee be asked to ascertain the cost from the printing establishments for publishing the assessment roll of the city. Ald. Johnston seconded the motion, stating that he had advocated such a proceeding in years past.

The Mayor did not favor the idea, which carried, however, in the end.

A recommendation by Ald. Gordon

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To The Editor of The Review.

Sir—The cloven hoof is projecting in a variety of ways. First, of all, we have the Taft-Roosevelt correspondence in which it is laid bare that Canada was to be made by reciprocity "an adjunct to the U.S." Now, we have the southerners expressing their feelings as in this despatch to the Globe—

Sir Wilfrid and Judge Brodeur have been extensively entertained and have been received most cordially by the southern people, who have expressed the hope that Sir Wilfrid will be returned to power at the next election. It is a matter of interest that both Sir Wilfrid and Mr. Borden were in Virginia at the same time, Mr. Borden being a vsiitor at the Hot Springs."

Why is it that these strangers are so interested in Sir Wilfrid's success?

Because it would mean just what Taft said. But it will never be. We are neither to be bribed, bought or bullied. We are British and will remain so.

Yours, etc.,

SCHOOL BOYS PLAYED TO BETTER FORM YESTERDAY; SCHEDULE FOR SENIOR SERIES

Winners in the junior series of the Public School League yesterday afternoon, were Queen Alexandra, East City, and South Central ,and as was the case on the opening afternoon, the boys made the most of the game. For real live rooting this league takes first honors, and it is excellent training for young fandom, who will shout for their elders of the Canadian League. Improvement was noticeable in the quality of ball.

At the Queen Alexandra grounds, the homesters disposed of the King Edwards by a score of 14—11, owing to the steady twirling of Percy Johnston, and the clouting of his team. The visitors had managed to tie up the contest in their last round, but Manley, who had succeeded Frost in the sixth, was unable to serve his benders out of reach of the Alexandra batters. He did not, however, get the best of support. Frost pitched well until forced to leave the mound, he having injured a finger in endeavoring to stab a hot drive through the box.

The batteries were—

Queen Alexandra—Johnston and Echobison. King Edwards—Frost, Manley and Taylor.

Erratic work on the paths, on the part of the Centrals, aided the East City nine to walk away with the score 12—9, at the former's grounds, where several of the Canadian Leaguers joined the spectators and cheered for their favorites.

Batteries—

East City—Anderson and Moffat. Centrals—Helson and Armstrong. Umpire—J. J. Thompson.

When the South Centrals had finished with the West Wards at the Park street grounds they had slipped over the tin pan for thirty-eight tallies, while the westerners had been held down to ten.

The schedule for the Senior Public School League games has been rearranged to include the team from St. Peter's Separate school. The following is the schedule revised:

May 10—St. Peter's at South Central.

May 14th—South Central at Central.

May 17th—Central at St. Peter's.

May 28th—Central at South Central.

June 4th—St. Peter's at Central.

All the games will be played on Nicholls Oval. As will be seen by the schedule the opening game is on Friday next between St. Peter's and South Central aggregations.

NO HALF HOLIDAY FOR THE OPENING LEAGUE GAME

The city will not have a half holiday to celebrate the opening game of the Canadian Baseball League on May 22nd. Some of the other cities have granted the holiday, but when the matter came up before the City Council last night the request was turned down. The close proximity of May 24th to the day of the opening game was considered an objection.

FOOTBALL

Will the players and members of the Park street Football Club, kindly remember the practice to-night at 7 o'clock, after which business of importance will be transacted in the basement of the Park street church. The team to meet All Saints next Saturday will also be picked. All are requested to be present.

All Saints' will hold a practice on Wednesday night at the Brinton meadows, and every member of the club is asked to be out, as the team to play Park street on Saturday next will be chosen from those out to practice.

BREEZES FROM THE DIAMOND

Manager Templin put his squad through a course of instruction at the Oval this afternoon, and all the boys behaved well. The only regret was that a high board fence, grandstannd and several hundred fans were not on duty.

"Great sport this" sang Mooney, as he booked Trout off the middle bag.

The directors met last night, but lack of information caused the matter of proceeding with the grand stand addition to be laid over till to-night.

The interform league of the P.C.I. aws to open this afternoon at the Oval at 4 o'clock, with Captain Heycke's and Dixon's teams performing.

A VERSE FOR THE BEGGAR.

Victor Hugo's Response to the Old Blind Soldier's Appeal.

A Frenchman, writing recently upon "The Mendicants of Paris," recalls a pretty anecdote of Victor Hugo and a blind beggar. The beggar was an old soldier, very feeble and quite sightless, who was led every day by his little granddaughter to a certain street corner, where he waited patiently for such scanty arms as the hurrying public might drop into a small box that hung from his neck.

One day a group of gentlemen halted near him, chatting, and he heard the name by which they called the one who lingered longest. Reaching forward as he, too, was about to go, he caught him by the coat.

"What do you want, my good man?" asked the gentleman. "I have already given you 2 sous."

"Yes, monsieur, and I have thanked you," replied the veteran. "It is something else that I want."

"What is it?"

"Verses."

"You shall have them," said the gentleman, and he kept his word. The next day the blind soldier bore on his breast a placard with a stanza to which was appended the name of Victor Hugo, and the alms in the box were quintupled. The lines may be thus translated:

Like Belisarius and like Homer blind,
Led by a young child on his pathway dim,
The hand that aids his need, pitying and kind,
He will not see, but God will see for him.

An Early Start, But—

"Mabel," said the girl's father, "I want to talk to you about that young man of yours. When did he say good night to you last evening?"

"At 10 o'clock," replied the dear girl.

"What? Why, it was 1 o'clock at least."

"Oh, that was when he finished saying it!"—Catholic Standard and Times.

TURNING THE TABLES.

Dramatic Author Becomes "Quits" by a Ruse.

An entertaining story of how a dramatic author adopted an artful ruse and became quits with the Censor is related by Mr. Laurence Cowen in The Pall Mall Gazette.

Last December two of Mr. Cowen's plays were refused licenses by Earl Spencer, the then Lord Chamberlain. "One, 'The Pity of It,' was, in effect, a scene from my licensed play 'The World, the Flesh, and the Devil,'" writes Mr. Cowen, "produced over three years ago and played continuously to this very day. I say nothing in regard to so impossible a decision."

The other play entitled "Tricked," was returned to the author for alterations, and when altered was still refused a license, the Lord Chamberlain stating that no alterations would make it fit for public representation. The license was accordingly refused.

Then Mr. Cowen decided on a bold attempt to demonstrate that the censorship had done him "a great wrong," and how he succeeded is a story well worth the telling.

He wrote another play—not really another, for in structure it was exactly similar—containing everything fundamental to the plot basis of "Tricked." Characters were given different names and stations in life, "but they did every vital deed and act, with the same motives and material" as in the banned play, and with a delightful sense of intelligent anticipation Mr. Cowen called the play "Quits!"

This was sent in for license on Jan. 6, Mr. Cowen borrowing for the purpose the professional name of a relative. In Jan. 22 the Lord Chamberlain wrote that after taking the opinion of the Advisory Board a license could not be issued. Having suggested that the play might be altered, the author on Jan. 26 attended by appointment at St. James' Palace and saw the Comptroller, Sir Douglas Dawson.

No curiosity was expressed as to Mr. Cowen's identity, and he was announced as the gentleman who wrote under the name he had sent in. A friendly discussion ensued, and the author was asked what arguments he could adduce for a reversal of the Lord Chamberlain's decision. He gave several, and was asked to embody them in a letter to be laid before the Advisory Board. This was done. On Feb. 10 the play was licensed.

Continuing his story, Mr. Cowen writes:

"I am very grateful to Sir Douglas Dawson for the service he has rendered me; but if 'Tricked!' cannot be licensed, then of a certainty 'Quits!' should not; if 'Quits!' is licensed (as it now is), then the bann on 'Tricker!' is an outrage, as wicked as it is illogical. If 'Tricked!' is unfit for public performance—vide the Lord Chamberlain and his Advisory Board—then I am bound to frankly admit that 'Quits!' is beyond the pale.

"The broad fact remains: 'Tricked!' is not only a prohibited play, but an improper one; 'Quits!' after vicissitudes, is fit food for the public, and its highly moral tone is certified by the Lord Chamberlain; they are, nevertheless, as pieces of stage craftmanship, identical!

"May I now, without irreverence, bring down the curtain on this strange, eventful history with the query that performs that duty in the licensed play of the two under review: 'Now, dear lord! are we Quits?'"

One of Beresford's Stories.

Lord Charles Beresford kept his birthday recently, says Modern Society. He has hauled down his flag for the last time, but his record as a sailor remains unrivalled. To quote Viscount Wolseley's tribute, he has been "an officer whose readiness of resource and whose ability as a leader are only equalled by his courage and daring." Many good stories go the round concerning this witty Irishman, but the following may be new to some readers. Many of the Beresfords have been in the Church, and Lord Charles' father began his career in Holy Orders and ended it as Marquis of Waterford. He was also an athlete and a sportsman, and his sons followed in his footsteps. On one occasion an old friend of the family who disapproved of sport went up to the youthful Charles and said gravely: Do you suppose that the Apostles sat on the Sabbath Day?" "Perhaps not," was the prompt response: "but I am certain that they fished." Lord Charles Bereford's prowess as a sailor and politician is well known, but he has many other hobbies, which include gardening, turning, house-building, boat-building, and carpentering.

Waterloo Centenary.

It has been decided by a committee formed in Belgium to celebrate the centenary of the battle of Waterloo. The committee have under consideration a proposal for a monument to be erected on the field. According to Mr. Emile Antoine Coulon, the secretary, the design will take the form of a hypogeum, beneath which will lie the remains of the fallen soldiers. It is proposed to place statues to Wellington, Napoleon, Blucher, and the Prince of Orange. Upon the base of the monument will be allegorical figures representing Grief, Heroism, and Hope in future peace. The circumstances leading to the erection of the monument will be set forth in French, English, German, and Dutch.

"Who Is Pilate?"

During a recent sitting of a town council on the banks of the Clyde, an official report, for literary embellishment or for some other cause, contained a reference to Pilate. One of the speakers, emulating the assumed ignorance sometimes displayed on the judicial bench, observed, "Who is this Pilate?" That a Scotsman should not be acquainted with the notorious Roman official seems incredible, for the procurator of Augustus is said to have been a native of Scotland. There is a legend that he was born at Fortingall, when his father was governor of the Roman camp there.

HORSE TAILS.

We Import Them From All Over the World and Also Export Them.

An item that seemed odd in the manifest of a steamer lately arrived from Japanese and Chinese ports was this in the list of her cargo from Tientsin: Fifty-five cases of horse tails.

As a matter of fact, horse tails or the hair thereof are a common article of importation into this country from China and from pretty much every other country on earth. The American market gets large quantities of them from China, but more from Russia, and horse tails are imported here from every other European country and from South America, from Australia, from all round the world. On the other hand, there are more or less American horse tails exported.

From various causes the supply of horse tails, like that of anything else, may in one country and another vary from year to year, and there may be years when the world's supply is short and years when it is plentiful, with corresponding changes in the range of prices. Horse tails have sold as low as 20 cents a pound, and they have sold for as much as $2. If stocks are scarce and high in London and ample at lower prices here New York importers ship horse tails to London. In the contrary circumstances London importers might ship horse tails here.

Horsetail hairs are sorted for length and colors, and they are used either alone or mixed with other fibers in the manufacture of various sorts of brushes and mixed with other materials in the manufacture of haircloth.—New York Sun.

How One Word Was Born.

The two friends had been dining on divers and sundry strange dishes at the Cedars of Lebanon cafe, in the Syrian quarter of New York. They were drinking their coffee, thick with coal black grounds, and wondering whether they really enjoyed it, when Smithers suddenly cried out:

"Pataug! Pataug!"

The waiter hurried away and came back presently bringing an ordinary corkscrew.

"I was just testing," said Smithers to his companion, "the truth of the story that the first corkscrew seen in Beirut was brought there by a Yankee. It was a patented American contraption, and the Syrians were amazed at its convenience. They spelled out on it the mystic words, 'Pat. Aug. '76,' and took that to be the name of the implement. Now, I believe the story that pataug is its name all over the Levant."—New York Sun.

YOU CAN BE ABSOLUTELY SURE OF VALUES

If you carefully read the store advertisements and follow them in your buying.

Merchants advertise certain lines because they know these lines will advertise their stores. Because there is something about certain goods, they are put in conspicuous places and the people are told about them. It may be the exclusiveness or newness of design, it may be an unusual quality, it may be an attractive price.

But there is at least one definite, sure reason why a merchant advertises an article and is willing to stake the reputation of his store upon it.

Therefore, when you see an article advertised in THE REVIEW, depend upon it, that article is good value, as good value as can be obtained in that particular store.

$ 1,000 FOR A COAT OF PAINT

It seems hard to believe, yet that is the sum of money that a coat of Martin-Senour Paint 100% Pure added to the selling price of a certain house.

For several seasons, a shabby weather-beaten house had been offered for sale. There where no buyers until a shrewd real estate broker purchased the property and, with a single coat of paint, magically changed it from a shabby house to that of a home of dignity—a home of comfort and elegance; furthermore, he sold it within a very short time clearing $1000

The coat of Paint made the sale. Don't let your property depreciate in value for the need of paint.

CHIEF HEALTH OFFICER GIVES PLANS FOR SEWAGE DISPOSAL; SATISFACTORY TO THE BOARD

A long and busy session of the City Council was held last evening, all business not being disposed of until after eleven o'clock. All of the members were in their accustomed places.

The following communications were received:

From Bruce Johnston, clerk of the municipality of North Monaghan:

Gentlemen.—The Reeve and Council of North Monaghan, at a meeting on April 30th, decided that whereas the city of Peterborough has not maintained its portion of the boundary between the two corporations and that in the future North Monaghan will not recognize any agreement. That all work done on the boundary shall be paid for equally by the two corporations.

Referred to the Board of Works.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL.

From Dr. J. W. S. McCullough, Chief Officer of Health, Toronto, re Sewage disposal plant:

Sir,—Following our visit to Peterborough the other day, careful consideration has been given to the whole question of the disposal of the sewage of the city. The following plans will probably best meet your present needs:

First—The construction of an Imphoff tank for the main city sewage, the present disposal plant in East City being practically of no value, in so far as purification of the sewage is concerned. The tank there might be used as a detritus chamber in connection with the scheme.

Second—Treatment of the effluent from the Imphoff tanks by means of 15 parts of available chlorine per million.

This scheme will cost very much less and require a less number of men to look after it than a sprinkler or any other form of filter, and in addition the ground area required will be comparatively small.

As your population increases additional units may be established to meet your increased needs. For the present day this plan properly established and maintained will meet the requirements of the Provincial Board.

Referred to the Board of Works.

CONVEYED TO THE CITY.

From W. J. Overend, a letter enclosing a conveyance and duplicate of Princess street, and part of Maude street, owned by him, and conveying that section to the city in fee simple for the purpose of highways, if the city would accept it upon the conditions that no local improvements will be made upon it for two years.

Referred to the Board of Works.

From R. C. Braund, requesting the city to remove the watering trough in front of the J. M. Greene department Music Store.

Referred to the Board of Works with power to act.

From A. Stevenson, secretary, City Trust:

That on condition the city pass a by-law, to be confirmed by the Legislature at the first opportunity) requesting the City Trust to advance $2,200 for the purchase of a refuse ground for the city, being on Park Lot 9 in Lot 13, in the 11th concession of North Monaghan, and have said lands vested in the said Trusts, the city also undertaking to pay 4 1-2 per cent. yearly on said sum to the City Trust, and to provide a twenty year sinking fund, that the City Trust advance the said sum out of the moneys in hand now or to come from the mortgage on the branch of the G.T.R. extending from Peterborough to Millbrook.

The communication was received, but the city has rented grounds, and will not require the lot specified.

EFFECTS OF INTEMPERANCE ON NATIONS

The following is a paper read at a recent meeting of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society by W. J. Bruder, Principal of St. Pter's School, Peterborough:

What is true of individuals comprising a nation is equally true of a nation, as John Bright, the great English statesman, once said, and truly said, when addressing the working people of Birmingham, "Princely palaces, baronial castles, great halls, stately mansions do not make a nation. The nation in every country dwells in the cottage—in the homes of the common people." Whatever influence, therefore, for good or evil that affects the individual affects the state. If nations disobey and reject the laws of morality there is a punishment that will enevitably follow, sooner or later, just as surely as punishment follows when an individual violates one of Nature's laws.

From the remotest times nations have suffered more or less from the evils of intemperance. The inordinate use of alcoholic liquors appears to have existed even in the pre-historic times, and its origin is shrouded in mystery. Some attribute it to the Arabs The heathen ancients regarded the god, Bacchus, as the inventor of wine; and of all things known to mortals wine is the most powerful for exciting and inflaming passions of all kinds, being indeed like a common fuel to all.

The earliest references to the debauchery of drink appears on the tombs of some of the Ancient Egyptians which are over 5,000 years old, and on which are found numerous carvings illustrating the drink customs of those early times. An Egyptian papyrus, at least 5,400 years old, was found among the ruins of the Pyramids, on which were writings exhorting the people, in the days of pyramid-building in Egypt, to let wine alone. Grapes were cultivated abundantly in early times in the land of the Pharaohs.

The Chinese emperors and Chinese teachers from the earliest times have always taken an advanced position against the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and whatever they may be in other respects, they now maintain a high standard as regards temperance. As an illustration of this, in the reign of Ching-Kang, about 2154 B.C., two of the Emperor's astronomers were condemned to death for not forewarning the people as to the approach of a certain eclipse, owing to their drunkenness and disability, and as the Emperor said in his decree, "allowing the heavens to get into disorder"—they were behind the time. "Fondness of wine," is one of the five great sins according to the system of Confucius.

We find, also, that near the beginning of the Han dynasty, in B.C. 202, an edict was published in China imposing a fine of four ounces of silver upon persons found guilty of meeting and drinking in companies of more than three members. In A.D. 1160, which was 1362 years later, it was decreed that all officers of the government found guilty of drinking intoxicating liquors should be beheaded; and in A.D. 1279, all liquor dealers were condemned to banishment and slavery, their property confiscated, and their children handed over to the care of the state. It was from rice that the Chinese distilled their liquor.

Ancient heathen India presents the strange spectacle of a country led into the debauchery of drink by religion long before the Christian era, and afterwards rescued therefrom by the same influence, the temperance movement beginning about the sixth century B.C., when Manu, the greatest of Hindu lawgivers, issued the following famous edict against the habit of drinking which had become the greatest abuse of the time among the people:

"With the drinker of Madhco let no one eat, no one join in sacrifice no one read. With such a wretch let no one be allied in marriage. Let him be abject and excluded from all society and all social privileges; cast forth as a vagabond on the earth. Branded with indelible ignominy, he shall be deserted by his own parents, and treated with by none."

(To be continued.)

INTERESTING TIME AT ST. ANDREW'S

Lecture by Rev. Dr. Ross and Program of Music.

A largely attended meeting was held last night in St. Andrew's church in connection with the anniversary. The speaker of the evening was the Rev. James Ross, D.D., of London, who had addressed both services in St. Andrew's church on Sunday.

The meeting was opened by an organ solo by Mr. Treneer, the War March from Mendelssohn, and following this selection the Rev. Mr. Ross delivered an interesting address on Scottish Life and Character. The lecturer portrayed the life of the Scottish peasants, and his subject was replete with humor and information. The lecture showed that Mr. Ross was exceedingly at home with his subject and perfectly familiar with the phases of the common life in Scotland.

At the conclusion of the address Miss Ruby Quartermaine gave a solo "I heard the voice of Jesus say." The audience then adjourned to the Sunday school room, where an informal reception was held and a delightful social hour spent.

Miss Howell rendered the solo "My Laddie" and Mr. Miller gave a cornet solo, "Men of Harlech," both being greatly appreciated by the gathering.

The Rev. Mr. Keith conveyed the greetings of Knox church and the assembly finally broke up after the singing of the National Anthem.

An Anderdon man lost a $45 cow by part of the haystack falling on it.

GAVE LECTURE AT MARK STREET HALL ON BERMUDA

At Mark street church last night a lecture and social evening was held under the auspices of the choir.

Rev. H. M. Manning delivered the lecture, which was most interesting telling of the climate, fruits, trees, vegetables and other things in Bermuda.

Miss Scott rendered a vocal solo, "Just for to-day," after the lecture.

Refreshments were served by the members of the choir in the basement, Rev. Mr. Cragg presiding.

COL. TAYLOR AT THE S. A. TEMPLE

At the Salvation Army Temple last night, Col. Taylor of London, Eng., gave an interesting talk on the Army work. The band was present and a large audience thoroughly enjoyed the evening.

PETERBORO SUMMER FAIR

City Council is Asked for Grant of $150

Speaking on behalf of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Peterborough Health Association, Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C., addressed the City Council last evening, requesting a grant of $150 to meet the expense of advertising Peterborough's Summer Fair, which will commence May 27th and continue one week.

Mr. Moore traced the steps which have resulted in the formation of the Association and the Ladies' Auxiliary, and related some of the splendid accomplishments of the latter in their efforts to raise funds toward schemes for the fighting of tuberculosis. His main object, however, in appearing before the Mayor and aldermen was to solicit their aid to the extent of the above mentioned sum, which would be used by the ladies solely to bear the expense of the extensive advertising they intend to expend upon the big summer fair. He submitted to the Council estimated prices on advertising posters, hangers, etc., furnished by the proprietors of local newspapers, the figures, after being kept down as closely as possible, aggregating in all $150.00.

Arrangements have been made with the railway companies for lowered passenger rates during the week, and also for heavy advertising in every town and village within sixty miles of Peterborough.

Mr. J. W. Bennet was present to heartily endorse all that Mr. Moore had said. He referred briefly to the benefits to be secured if the Association procured the services of a district nurse, as they contemplated. Speaking of the proposed Summer Fair, he enlarged upon the painstaking preparations instituted by the ladies for making it a success. There is to be, he explained, a grand historical march by the 57th Regiment band, a curio exhibit, a small theatre, a dolls' house, four booths, emblematic of the seasons, and innumerable other attractions. The price to enter will be ten cents, but it costs considerably more before a person leaves.

The newspapers in every town and village within sixty miles of the city will be used to boost the fair, besides the local press and the show will undoubtedly prove a splendid advertising medium for Peterborough. Nothing on such a pretentious and important scale has hitherto been attempted in Peterborough, and for that reason, both gentlemen who spoke felt that the Council should lend their aid in complying with the request for the small sum of $150 for advertising alone.

Mayor Bradburn assured the deputation of his hearty sympathy with the movement, and of his appreciation of the active work of the ladies at its head. He promised that the Council would deal with it later on and he had every reason to feel that the wishes of the ladies would be complied with.

It was.

Homeseeker's and Settler's Train to Camrose, Edmonton and Western Canada.

Via Chicago and St. Paul, will leave Toronto 10.30 p.m., Tuesday April 30th, via G. T. R. System, for Camrose, Edmonton and points in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. Stopping at all points on Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, west of Winnipeg. Through coaches and Pullman Tourist Sleepers will be carried, fully equipped with bedding and porter in charge. Berths may be secured in these cars at a low rate. This is an exceptional opportunity for those wishing to take advantage of the remarkably low one way settlers rates or round trip homeseekers' excursions through the American cities, no change of cars. Full particulars, berth reservations, etc., from any Grand Trunk Agent, or write A. E. Duff, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

The Astronomical Society had a most interesting meeting last night.

Sanitary Inspector Spence commenced to-day a tour of inspection which will probably occupy all summer.

The Marlborough Club will hold an informal smoker on Friday next, May 10th. A pleasant evening is assured all members who attend. The baseball boys will be guests.

A Toronto rumor has it that the Grand Trunk Railway Company will secure the property of the Toronto General Trusts Company, situated at the corner of Yonge and Colborne streets and adjoining the Canadian Express Building. The property in question is L-shaped and runs round two sides of the Express building, so that there is plenty of room for railway offices. It is valued at about $300,000.

MEDAL RECORDS.

South African Man Gets Two Decorations For Same Campaign.

The interesting fact that Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., who has been so ill, was recommended for the Victoria Cross both as a sailor (in the Crimea) and as a soldier (in the Indian Mutiny) is a reminder of other unique medal records. For instance, Lieut. Kirby, R. E., who has recently been appointed to the Air Battalion, won both the Victoria Cross and the Distinguished Conduct Medal in the South African War; and there is an ex-quartermaster-sergeant of the Royal Engineers who possesses two bronze Humane Society's medals, whereas the usual rule is to reward a second act of bravery in saving life by a silver medal or a clasp added to the bronze one.

Similarly, there is a resident in South Africa who received two Queen's medals for the campaign in that country, one as a soldier and the other in the capacity of civilian interpreter. A dog that accompanied the Guards in that campaign was also rewarded with a proper medal; and there is an old lady, a Mrs. Evans, who claims to be the only woman entitled to wear three medals for the Crimean campaign. As she had been under fire, and often accompanied her husband in the trenches, permission to wear his medals was officially granted her on his death.

Lord Roberts, however, has found it necessary to correct the impression that he wears two Victoria Crosses (his own and that of his gallant son, who was killed at Colenso), though it is exceedingly rare for two Victoria Crosses to go to one family. The Gough family, however, can boast three, earned by Gen. C. J. S. Gough, his brother, Gen. Sir H. H. Gough, and the latter's son, Col. J. E. Gough.

The record among serving officers is probably held by Gen. J. M. Grierson, with a total of fourteen medals and decorations, and among other ranks by Sergt.-Major R. Elliott, of the Yeomen of the Guard, who wears nine medals and was given an M.V.O. by King Edward.

However, an ex-sergeant, John H. Miller, late of the Seaforth Highlanders and Rifle Brigade, claims to have equalled the latter's record, and his nine medals (which includes the one for Distinguished Conduct) have attached to them thirteen clasps for campaigns in Afghanistan, Egypt, Burma, and South Africa. A Corpl. Taylor, however, holds the record for the greatest number of medals received in one day. Whilst still convalescent, after a severe illness incurred during the South African campaign, he pluckily jumped from a South Coast pier into a raging sea and rescued an old skipper, who was struggling for dear life. This act brought him the Lloyd's medal for saving life at sea, the Humane Society's medal, and the Board of Trade's; and on the same day that he received these he was also presented with the King's and Queen's South African medals! To put the finishing touch to his wonderful record, he subsequently received the Stanhope gold medal for the bravest deed of life-saving during the year, and thus he received four medals for one brave act.

There are three regiments with records in the medal line of which they are proud: the 9th Lancers, who have won more Victoria Crosses than any other cavalry regiment—namely, thirteen, of which twelve were won in the Indian Mutiny, when the regiment won the nickname of "The Delhi Spearmen"; the South Wales Borderers, who lead all infantry battalions in regard to the number of Victoria Crosses won — namely, sixteen; and the 12th Lancers who, in 1794, had the unique honor of receiving eleven gold medals from the Pope for their officers, as reward for gallant conduct at Citta Vecchia.

Attended Soldiers Under Fire.

Surgeon-General W. Babtie, V.C., who has been promoted to that rank after holding it temporarily since he was made Deputy Director-General Army Medical Service, in 1910, is a son of Mr. John Babtie, of Dumbarton, and is now in his 52nd year.

After taking his medical degree in Glasgow and Edinburgh, he, in 1881, joined the Army Medical Service. In Crete in 1897-8 he was senior medical officer, and for his services during the troubles there was given the C.M.G., while in 1899-1900 he served in South Africa as medical staff officer in Natal, being present at the actions leading up to the relief of Ladysmith, and the subsequent operations in Natal and the Eastern Transvaal.

Dr. Babtie was mentioned in dispatches, promoted to be lieutenant-colonel, and gained the V.C., as well as the Queen's medal with five claps, the former being given for his gallantry at Colenso in attending to the injured under fire, and also for going out and assisting to bring in Lieutenant Roberts, who was lying wounded.

Famous Surgeon's Chuckle.

Some good stories have been told of Sir Frederick Treves, who has recently returned home from a tour in the West Indies. One is associated with Lord Charles Beresford.

Lord Charles fell ill, and sent for the great surgeon. "Tell me your symptoms," said Sir Frederick. His lordship enumerated pains here and pains there, with an ache and a stiffness somewhere else. Each item was greeted by the doctor with a great chuckle, and at last, when the catalogue of ills was completed, he rose and turned to Lord Charles. "My dear fellow," he said, "let me congratulate you. You h ve the rarest disease of the century You lucky dog; you have a disease that was thought to be extinct!" History is silent upon Lord Charles' answer.

England's Tobacco.

Smokers in the United Kingdom last year consumed over 3,000,000 pounds of tobacco more than in 1910, involving an increased expenditure of £967,622, while the year's smoke bill amounted to £29,164,867, which works out roughly at about two pounds of tobacco per head of the whole population.

Orillia, with eight teachers, had a salary total of $9,500, and an average attendance of 209, during 1911.

RULES OF THE PEOPLES SHIELD COMPETITION

1. The shield shall be called "The People's Canadian Amateur Football Association Challenege Shield."

2. The shield is the property of the trustees appointed by the donors, the proprietors of the People's Newspapers, England.

3 The competitions shall be open to challenge from any club affiliated with any recognized Provincial amateur football association.

4. All challenges must reach the Secretary of the Manitoba Football Association (W. Rothwell, 183 Hargrave St., Winnipeg.) on or before May 15th, accompanied by a list of their registered players.

5. All entrants from any one Province shall at the discretion of the committee, be called upon to play qualifying rounds in order to be entitled to take part in the fianl series at Winnipeg, it being the object of the committee to confine the number from each Province playing in the final to two clubs.

6. The entrance fee to the competition shall be five dollars and shall be sent to the secretary of the association controlling the competition.

7. The final series of the People's Shield competition shall be arranged and conducted in one tournament under the rules governing the English association cup competition.

8. A player shall not be eligible to play for more than one club in this competition, but members of each respective team may be changed during the series of matches.

9. The executive committee shall have power to disqualify any competing club or player who may be proven to be guilty of any breach of the rules.

10. The executive committee shall have power to appoint a special committee, who shall have full control to direct all arrangements connected with the competition.

11. The duration of each match in the final series shall be one hour and thirty minutes.

12. In all matches which result in a draw ten minutes' extra time shall be played.

13 Independent referees and linesmen shall be appointed for each match.

14. The Manitoba Football team shall be entitled to full gate receipts received from all games in the final series and shall divide said receipts in the following manner:

Fifteen per cent to be retained by the Association to cover organization and working expenses, and the balance shall be divided pro rata between the competing teams according to distance travelled.

15. All questions, disputes or protests shall be made in writing and referred to the executive committee, whose decision shall be final. A fee of ten dollars shall accompany each protest and must be lodged with the executive committee within three hours of such match. The fee shall be forefeited in the event of such protest not being sustained.

16. The club winning the Shield shall be required to furnish a bond of $500 (five hundred dollars) as a guarantee that the Shield will be properly taken care of and returned to the secretary of the People's Shield competition, three weeks prior to the commencement of the subsequent tournament to any place named by the executive committee.

17. The executive committee shall have power to alter or add to the above constitution and rules as from time to time they may deem expedient.

It has been decided that the new Union Station of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the C.N.R. at Edmonton will be between First and Second streets. The purchase of trackage rights and property has been effected and the anticipated growth of the city has been provided for in the dimensions of the new depot which will be, it is promised, one of the finest on the prairies, west of Winnipeg.

that the city solicitor be asked to prepare a traffic by-law, aiming at the protection of equestrian and also automobile traffic. Ald. Gordon thought that conditions were becoming dangerous at crossings, and that users of the streets should be required to keep their proper side.

Ald. Duffus—"It is dangerous and hardly safe to keep to the right side these days, so bad are the roads in some places."

Ald. Gordon will consult with the city solicitor in drafting out the by-law.

A recommendation to consolidate the city's by-laws was also brought in by the pure milk candidate. The matter will be taken up by Chairman Brown, of the Legal Committee.

NO MORE MONEY.

"That this Council put itself on record not to grant any funds in excess of the $80,000 asked for by the Board of Education for construction of ward schools, without submitting a by-law to the people authorizing such action.—Carried.

Ald. Duncan and Graham were responsible for the preceding motion, which put the finishing touch to the lengthy sitting.

It was stated that the Board only came to the Council with the request out of courtesy, and that they were not required to ask the city for the needed money. The original motion, however, was carried.

JUDGMENT OF $40 FOR THE COMPANY

The Peterborough Light and Power Company won their suit yesterday in Division Court against F. L. Snelgrove, the tobacconist. The Company entered an action to recover $60.88 in payment for supplying power to an illuminated sign at Mr. Snelgrove's shop.

Judge Huycke awarded judgment for $40.00.
